That there be appointed by the president a League Organizer in each presiding elder's District, whose duty it shall be to visit the Leagues and help them in their work; also to organize Leagues for the pastors, when requested to do so, his expense to be paid by the League visited.

That a day be set apart to be known as "Mississippi Conference Epworth League Day," to be observed by all of the Leagues, with a specially prepared programme for the occasion, and in a congregation where there is no League that the pastor be requested to address the people on the work of the League, and organize, if possible; at both of the above services a collection is to be taken to defray the expenses of the Conference.

Heartily endorse the work of the "Seashore Assembly," and urge our Leaguers to attend the approaching session.

That a committee of three, composed of the president-elect, secretary and ex-president, be appointed to get out the Minutes of this session.

That we ask each of the presiding elders to furnish to the League Board at the Annual Conference the names and addresses of all of the League officers in their respective Districts, and that the secretary notify each of them at once of this request, and about the 1st of December, call their attention to it again.

Those who were fortunate enough to have attended this Conference will always remember the untiring efforts of Rev. J. M. Morse and his Leaguers (especially Miss Georgia Rohrer and Miss Laura Rankin) to make all of the delegates enjoy their stay in Gulfport, and from the report of the Committee on Resolutions it appears that they succeeded in their efforts. The Conference, through the "Committee on Resolutions," thanked the railroads for reduced rates; the Gulf and Ship Island for the special car from Hattiesburg to Gulfport; the local papers and the Picayune for publishing the proceedings of the Conference; all those who had a part on the programme, also to the "fraternal messengers," Rev. J. Bruce Airey, and Dr. F. P. Culver, and were very profuse in their thanks to the people of Gulfport for their entertainment.

Held in Winona, Miss., July 7-9, 1908.

The First Annual Conference of the North Mississippi Epworth Leagues was held in Winona, Miss., July 7-9, 1908. Four sessions were held daily, each session from the first throughout the entire Conference was full of interest and enthusiasm. A splendid programme was rendered at each session, which showed that the leaders of the Conference had at heart the work of the League. The officers elected are as follows:

President, Mr. J. B. Small, Winona.

First Vice-President, Miss Bessie Critz, West Point.

Second Vice-President, Miss Mary Connell, Mayhew.

Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. W. R. Kennedy, Columbus.

Press Superintendent, Miss Bessie Richardson, Corinth.

Epworth Era Agent, Miss Margaret Dunn, Greenville.

Junior Superintendent, Miss Mary Sweatman, Winona.

Notable among the speeches were those of the Rev. T. W. Lewis, Jackson; Rev. W. W. Pinson, Nashville; Dr. H. M. DuBose, Nashville; Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Conference Evangelist; Miss Kate Smallwood, New Albany; Miss Bessie Richardson, Corinth; Rev. J. R. Countiss, Greenville; Rev. E. S. Lewis, Winona; and Mrs. H. P. Gibbs, of Grenada College.

New Albany, Miss., was decided upon as the next meeting place of the Conference, which will be in July, 1909.

The Quiet Hour Services were conducted at 6 o'clock each morning by Rev. J. H. Holder, of Booneville, on Wednesday morning, and Rev. J. W. McCafferty, on Thursday morning.

The first regular session was held Tuesday night. The church was beautifully and bountifully decorated with the League colors, white and gold, symbolizing purity and worth. Prominent among the decorations was a large gold Maltese cross, the League emblem, with a background of white. On the cross was our League motto: "All for Christ." The cross being suspended above the rostrum, was easily viewed by all present, from any part of the building. The only flowers being used in the decoration were white and yellow chrysanthemums which were placed among the numerous beautiful ferns, which carried out the League colors. The first devotional exercises were conducted by our Conference Evangelist, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, who opened the service with a concert reading of the 16th verse of the third chapter of John: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Immediately following the devotional exercise, our Board President, Rev. Robt. A. Clark, of Okolona, gave us "A message from the Conference League Board." The words of welcome from our hosts were then given by Mr. J. B. Small, of Winona, and responded to by Rev. J. H. Holder, of Booneville, followed by the introduction and exchange of fraternal greetings from sister Conferences.

Wednesday morning the League work was discussed as to its training for Christian work in the activities of the Sunday School, Mission Societies, etc., by Rev. R. P. Neblett, and in official capacities by Rev. E. S. Lewis. Also the work of Charity and Help was discussed as to the need of such a department, by Rev. R. A. Clark, of Okolona, and as to how to get the work done, and as to what we are doing as a League, by Miss Bessie Richardson, of Corinth. Miss Smallwood, of New Albany, had charge of the devotional exercises on Wednesday morning, using for the lesson, "John's Witnessing for Christ," and contrasting the difference between the voice and the word, defining the voice as only a meaningless sound, preparing the way for Jesus, the word, to abide. Wednesday afternoon Dr. H. M. DuBose discussed at length the Boys' League. Then the literary work of the League was discussed as to how we may reach the young people for Christ through the literary department, by Rev. J. R. Countiss. Rev. W. S. Lagrone gave us a splendid address on "The Call for Laborers." The principal feature of the service Wednesday was the lecture by Dr. H. M. DuBose, on "The Blameless Life." Dr. DuBose is an able speaker, and we were glad to have the honor of his presence at our first Conference. His talk was enjoyed by all. Thursday morning's service was devoted to the devotional work of the League, which was explained by Miss Smallwood, of New Albany, in which she reminded us that we were to measure success by results, and illustrated the call of Isaiah. When the Lord asked "whom shall I send, and who will go," Isaiah responded, "Here am I, send me." Isaiah responded to the call because of the result of the heart preparation. That is the purpose of the devotional department of the League, to give the preparation that will bring such results as a response to the call, "Here am I, send me." Miss Smallwood is a graduate of the Industrial Institute and College, a graduate of the Scarritt Bible and Training School, and has given her life to the foreign field, and will sail for China the latter part of August. We also had a model Junior Meeting Thursday morning, by Miss Mary Sweatman, of Winona, our Conference Junior Superintendent, and it was indeed a model Junior League service, all taking part being children of from five to ten years of age, and who delivered their well-prepared programme in a manner that would be well for any Senior League to follow as an example or a model.

Dr. Pinson, of Nashville, also made a splendid address to the Conference on young people and missions, telling thrilling stories of the lives of our heroes who have already gone into battle, and gave us much information as to the work of missions, and at the close of his talk our Conference pledged $1,000 for Japan to be raised before the next Annual Conference of the League. While there the different Leagues pledged $500 of the $1,000, with only twenty of the Leagues out of the seventy in the Conference stating what they would pledge. Thursday afternoon we heard a splendid talk by Mrs. H. P. Gibbs, of Grenada only twenty of the Leagues out of the seventy in the Conference, stating what they would pledge. Thursday afternoon we heard a splendid talk by Mrs. H. P. Gibbs, of Grenada College, on the ideal mission study class, outlining the work of the mission study class so well that it would seem that the smallest League could have a successful class, and voting the class one of the most important lines of the work of the Leagues. Thursday night's session was given to Rev. T. W. Lewis, who addressed us on the subject, "A Larger Vision." Too much could not be said in praise of Rev. Lewis' address. In spirituality, attendance and effective work our Conference was a decided success. The most touching scene of the Conference was the parting of officers and delegates. Goodbyes were said many times before the final separation came. Nearly two hundred delegates and visitors were present. May we all meet in New Albany, in 1909.

The Kansas City Star has this to say about the state of things and prospects in Kansas: "The bread eaters and the corn eaters and the meat eaters and all dealers in farm products and those who sell merchandise are again invited to cheer up about Kansas. As the floods subside and the waters recede, it is learned that nothing has been 'drowned out' in Kansas but the cutworms and the chinch-bugs and the Hessian fly and the weevil and the like. The wheat and the corn, the millet and the alfalfa are standing up thick and 'sassy' in the fields, and are giving the verdant and golden 'ha! ha!' to the croakers who issued a week or so ago advance notices of a crop failure in Kansas." What the Star says about Kansas we may say about prospects down South. Notwithstanding hundreds of people in the lowlands have been driven from their homes and have lost well-nigh everything, and it is too late to plant again, there are hundreds of thousands rejoicing in the prospect of abundant harvests, and they will not let their less fortunate fellows starve. From all directions come cheering reports. Let us thank God and take courage.

The country some months since was astounded on learning that the trial of the Standard Oil Company before Judge Landis resulted in imposing on the company the heaviest penalty ever inflicted by a court—$29,240,000. The verdict was as pleasing to the people as it was astounding, for it was generally believed that the Standard Oil was the most grinding and unscrupulous corporation that ever operated in the country. The company appealed from the decision of Judge Landis, and the appellate court, after long months, reversed the judgment, and remanded the case for a new trial. The judges of the higher court were unsparing in their criticisms of Judge Landis, declaring that he had erred in three particulars vital to the case. Under the ruling of the appellate court, the way is made clear for Judge Landis to so try the case as to make up a better record should there be another conviction and appeal. It is said that the lawyers on both sides agree that in case of another conviction, a fine of $72,000 may be imposed as the maximum, and $26,000 as the minimum. The Sandard Oil could have paid the $29,000,000 without hurt. The loss of $72,000, it would never feel.

There is more money to the brewers of the country and less to the men they employ than in any other occupation that calls for the employment of labor. A comparison of figures for one city will, we presume, answer for all throughout the beer-making sections. The National Advocate takes the figures for Rochester, N. Y., and makes the following showing: "In Rochester the breweries have invested $6,455,000; they employ 434 men; the wages bill is $381,000. The clothing trade gives the following: Invested $6,150,000; it employs 3132 men; the wage-bill is $1,501,000. It must be obvious to the most casual reader that the profits from the liquor traffic go to the few and not to the many." The New Voice makes quite as clear a showing in another way: "In purchasing $100 worth of hardware, one buys $24.17 of labor; in purchasing $100 worth of liquor, one pays only $1.23 for labor." This is to say: Every $100 worth of hardware sold in the market has cost the manufacturer and dealer $24.17, and every $100 paid for liquor in the saloons cost the maker and vendor only $1.23. When one branch of trade employs seven men where the brewery employs only one, it is easy to see which of the two industries is the greater benefit to society at large. And this can be done without ever taking into consideration the fact that, while the clothing industry is a blessing, the brewery business is a curse.

The acceptance by President Roosevelt of the honorary presidency of the Peace and Arbitration League is regarded as a matter of great significance. The League is the outgrowth of the North Carolina Congress, the object of which is to secure "adequate armament and effective arbitration." It is well known that Mr. Roosevelt holds to the idea that the best way to secure and maintain international peace is to make the very best preparation possible for war. With this idea in view, he has urged upon Congress the necessity of making appropriations for the enlargement of the United States Navy. His great desire is to make it the equal of any navy in existence. The President's name and influence, given to the League, will secure for it the attention and respect of the nations. Mr. Roosevelt, in a letter to the acting President, accepting the honor conferred on him, says: "I cordially sympathize with your announced purpose to secure present protection for the nation and at the same time make as rapid advancement toward world peace. As you well say, we should have an unquestionably superior power in our own possessions and in the waters adjacent thereto in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans; and we should also do everything possible to secure agreements with all governments to respect each other's territory and sovereignty, and to arbitrate all other questions." Our government, though young as a world power, can no doubt do more than any other government to maintain the world's peace. We should be glad that we have a President who throws himself so unhesitatingly on the side of peace.

At an alumni meeting of the Yale Law School, former Senator Spooner made a speech in which occurred the following wise and weighty words: "I want to impress upon you that while you may differ on political questions, there is something which rises above politics, and something which lawyers cannot afford to differ on. The lawyer, under his oath, owes it to his country and to himself to stand firm to the basic principle of popular government. He must believe that the essentials in government are three coordinate branches, the executive, the legislative and the judicial. Each must keep within its bounds, or representative government cannot exist. And when you find a government in which the three branches have become subordinated to the will of the executive, popular government has ceased to exist. I speak of this in an unpersonal way. The last hope of liberty in this government is an upright, fearless, incorruptible judiciary. If, in the lapse of time, you find a political body advocating any measure which seeks to impair the foundation of government as laid down by the founders, as you value your oath of office, fight it. The principle of the three coordinate branches of government ought not to be forgotten for a moment. I am glad the next president of the United States is to be a lawyer, a lawyer who knows the constitutional limitations of the executive and the other branches of government. Mind you, I do not say who that lawyer will be."

A good sister, writing to this office, insists that "if there is anything women are noted for it is asking questions," and begs pardon for asking whether in a recent paragraph concerning the religion of Mr. Taft, we meant to intimate that being a Unitarian, instead of a Roman Catholic, is anything to his credit?" It was not in our mind to credit or discredit Mr. Taft, but to state what we had learned were his religious convictions. Unitarianism, as a system of religion, we believe to be false; but we do not undertake to say that no Unitarian is a Christian. Mr. Taft may be a strong Unitarian, but we doubt it. If he is, he is far more just in his estimate of the worth of evangelical missions than his co-religionists, as his recent public deliverance on the subject goes to show—which deliverance, along with President Roosevelt's, is being used to advantage by the leaders in the Laymen's Movement. And he is away ahead, in point of charity, of any Roman Catholic; and we do not hesitate to say that notwithstanding Mr. Taft's Unitarian belief, we would prefer him for President to any Roman Catholic in the United States. The Roman Catholic Church is a hierarchy in which every cardinal, archbishop, bishop and priest throughout the world is subject to the Pope in Rome, likewise the whole membership of the Church. The true and devout Romanist's first duty is to the Church, which speaks to all the faithful through the "holy father," who, in matters of faith, is infallible. No Romanist, no matter how strong-minded, elevated to the Presidency, could resist the influence of Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Ireland. What the result would be, none but a farseeing Jesuit can tell. We are afraid of Romanism.

THE "ORIGINAL SIN" PROBLEM NOT YET SOLVED.

BY REV. D. M. GEDDIE.

No. 4.

In his quotation from the eighth chapter of Romans Dr. Mahon makes the same blunder noticed in his application of the first and seventh chapters. Neither life nor death can be predicated of infants on their own responsibility, as St. Paul there predicates of those of whom he writes. They cannot of their own choice "walk after the Spirit and live, or after the flesh and die." And how anyone ever imagined the transference of the "carnal mind" from an adult life to the infantile nature I fail to understand. The "carnal mind," as every intelligent person knows, is not an endowment, or an inherent element of man's nature. It is the abnormal product of the soul's native faculties and powers perverted in practical use to self and sin. It is a mind abandoned to the seeking of material and physical comforts, and of worldly pleasures. It is a mind engrossed in, and bound down to, secular, carnal, sordid ideas and habits of thinking and living. Such a life millions of Paul's fellow-countrymen were living, and the followers of Christ had lived it so long before their conversion that they needed constantly to be warned and guarded against it.

But on page 333 of the Review Dr. Mahon says: "The attempt to draw a line of distinction between 'original sin' and voluntary transgression is to no purpose. They are one and the same in character and quality. Actual transgressions spring out of the heart, just as the fruit springs out of the tree." Now, if he means, as he seems to, and as his language really does, that "original sin" is the motive and volitional cause of actual transgressions, and that if man was free from the disease of original sin, he would not voluntarily commit sin, his theory is completely broken down by the stubborn fact that one man without any depraved nature, or deprived nature, did by his own voluntary choice intelligently, deliberately and wilfully commit sin, and some of the holy angels dwelling in the realms of light and heavenly bliss voluntarily committed sin, and are "held under chains of darkness, reserved unto the judgment of the last day."

But if the line of distinction between "original sin" and voluntary transgression be to no purpose, why does the Bible distinguish between them? "The soul that sinneth, it shall die;" but for the sin [illegible] then it declares we shall not die. And why does Dr. Mahon draw this line of distinction? From the commencement of his articles in the Review to the close, despite his denial of this distinction, he keeps it before us. According to his theory, there is in reality no such thing as voluntary transgression. All sin flows spontaneously and necessarily from the inherited sinful heart, and yet he insists upon the fact of voluntary transgression. Dr. Mahon certainly does know that that which man is forced to do by his very nature is not voluntary.

But he further says: "One is as bad as the other. All talk about our being accountable for voluntary transgression, but not for original sin, is to darken counsel with words without knowledge. There is no difference in kind or quality. How can there be? The truth is, with all our argumentation about the freedom of the will and the power of volition to choose, and its part in human accountability, those who are born in sin cannot do otherwise than live in sin. It is their nature to sin."

Now, with my eyes wide open gazing upon the luminous pages of the New Testament, I ask, where did Dr. Mahon get that? Where in the holy Book of God is it said that "original sin" and voluntary transgression are the same in kind and quality? And where is it said that "those who are born in sin cannot do otherwise than live in sin?" Dr. Mahon may search from Genesis to Revelation and he cannot find a single passage that, with anything like a fair interpretation, conveys the idea that "original sin" compels any man to commit voluntary sin. Everywhere that human accountability is spoken of it is predicated on man's freedom to will, choose and act for himself, individually and personally. Everywhere that the New Testament scriptures refer to "original sin" it is referred to to show us how completely it has been atoned for and taken out of our way, and "more abundant grace" offered us that we may "reign in life by Jesus Christ." The only thing that necessitates man's voluntary transgression is the necessity that he is under to make choice. But that necessitates his voluntary holiness as much as it does his voluntary transgression. He is necessitated to choose between the two, but which he takes is entirely optional with him. Though man is born in sin, in the sense that his parents, from Adam down, were in part or in whole sinners, he is not born a sinner, and by his nature compelled to live in sin. What would have been the inward forces of man's nature had no atonement been made, is not for us to say. The atonement was made, and made in due time. It is world-wide in its provisions, its application and its life-giving effects. Every child born into the world, from the first-born of Adam down to the last person that shall be born on this earth, did come, and will come, into the world under the sacrificial, atoning and redemptive blood of the everlasting covenant. In the second chapter of Romans St. Paul informs us that some of the Gentiles who had not the law, and were therefore confined to the dim and uncertain lights of nature, providence and their own consciousness for their religious knowledge and opportunities for righteous living, did by nature the things contained in the law. In the absence of a written law, God had written his law in their hearts, and the uncircumcision, which was by nature fulfilling the law, became "circumcision not of the letter, but of the spirit, whose praise was not of men, but of God." Now, if by nature they did the things contained in the law, and became a law unto themselves, showing the work of the law written in their hearts, then by nature they were not so vile that they could not do otherwise than live in sin.

INTUITION OR REASON, WHICH?

BY HON. W. A. BELK.

The Arabians tell us that on one occasion Abul Khain, the mystic, and Abu Ali Seena, the philosopher, had a conference, and on separating the philosopher was heard to say, "All that he sees I know;" whereupon the mystic said, "All that he knows I see."

What a vast difference there was between those two men. One reasoned his way up to where nature stood, and the other stood as a part of nature. They were simply made that way. One stood off and gazed upon nature and reasoned upon its perplexities, while the other lived and formed a part of nature itself. Yonder are two musical instruments with practically the same artistic make and trimmings. Examine them. The strings are alike; the designs are similar; their maker is the same man. Price them, please. Why the difference in value? It is because of the fibre of the wood out of which each is made. They have different tones. It is said that there are men so skilled in this line that they can go through the forest and by striking a tree with an ax, tell from the sound whether or not that tree is specially valuable for being converted into certain kinds of musical instruments. Some wood is "musical" and other is not. God so arranged them.

Thus it is with men.

Some people are "nature's own children," and never fail to hear and to answer nature's voice. You ask me if my arm is a part of my body. I answer that it is because I feel it and know it is a part of me and that I am a part of it. But you cannot know that it is a part of my person except by reason. You cannot feel and thus know it like I can. So with "nature's own children." You live close to nature and nature's God. There is a natural telepathy between you and nature. You can see God in the golden sun, the silvery moon and the laughing stars. Nature talks and communes with you through the evening zephyrs or the mighty storms, through the trackless ocean or the sparkling brooklet, through the magnificent forest or the tiny flower. Wherever you go and wherever you are, you are still a part of nature and you know things because you are a part of nature. God, as it were, has taken you into his confidence and lets you know his thoughts and his voice. Others are not so. Nature to them is one vast expanse of something and it is their province to "reason" out just what that something is. You know what it is because you are a part of it.

Some men reach conclusions solely by the process of reason. There is no affinity, seemingly, if not literally, between them and nature. There is no mellowness in them. They are cold, honest and calculating. They see nothing until they have arrived at it through this process. They travel slowly. The road to them is obscure, except as cleared away by their own efforts. Others there are who see the way clear, guided by the sparkling light of intuition.

Let us then admire the man who reasons, but let us reverence him who is in such close relations with nature that he can always reflect back to you the image and voice of God.

A SAD CASE.

In a Mississippi church is a poor, worthy widow woman who works in a cotton factory. By stinting herself and children she saved up $5 for her pastor. With much pride she gave him the money. A few days afterward she was in a drug store, when her pastor came in and bought a box of cigars, lit one and walked out. The poor woman was seen to have tears in her eyes. She was pressed by a brother-in-the-church to state her trouble. "My," she said, "if

Brother —— knew the sacrifice I made—even depriving myself and children of the necessities of life, he would not burn up that $5 in smoke.

Who knows but that many have made sacrifices, like this woman, denying themselves little things, and even the necessaries of life in order to support their pastor, only for it to be thrown away on tobacco. Would to God our pastors who use tobacco would lay all upon the altar. We never will get that divine grace we crave until we do so.

Then, how can a pastor expect results? The world says a man demands a certain amount of "extravagance or luxury." That's true, but a genuine case of religion is luxury enough, and there is no extravagance; but, instead, conservatism comes with it.

Not long since one of my boys asked me, "Papa, is there any harm in smoking?" "Certainly," I replied. "Well, Brother ——, our pastor, smokes." Will some of the defenders of the filthy habit answer this?

There is one denomination who will not admit a man into the ministry if he uses tobacco. I pray that our General Conference will stress this, and admit no one who uses it even moderately. Those who are "set in their ways" cannot quit, but they admonish a sinner to "give up all."

If there are any that have the manhood, let them quit the filthy tobacco habit. Then their congregations will look up to them and take knowledge of them that they have been with God. They will be filled with the "right kind of zeal," and there will be conversions.

Some pastors have not the confidence of their members, but let them get right and the world will have confidence in them, and will look up to them. While we are fighting for prohibition, let us start at home on tobacco.

A. LAYMAN.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

Dear ADVOCATE: In my wanderings through Mississippi this year my attention has been arrested by the scarcity of young preachers who will come to the two Conferences this fall seeking admission on trial. This scarcity is particularly noticeable within the territory of my own Conference. The District Conferences have all been held, and few, very few, are coming up to be admitted. Even the Corinth District, which has so long and so often supplied recruits, sends no one to Conference for admission.

Again and again District Conference sessions have closed, and no one is recommended to the Annual Conference to enter the itinerant ministry. What is the matter? Brother J. W. Honnoll says that one cause of this ministerial dearth is the transfer of the right of license from the Quarterly Conference to the District Conference. Brother J. H. Mitchell thinks this objection is answered in the "licensing committee," which serves after the adjournment of the District Conference. Others maintain that the literary requirements which the Church makes of the ministerial candidates discourage and hinder many who would apply for license to preach, but who have had meager opportunities.

One thing is sure: We are face to face with a serious situation—only twenty-three young preachers at Millsaps College last session, and there ought to have been at least fifty. I do not know what the solution to this problem is, but I offer a few suggestions:

1. The decline of home religion has resulted hurtfully to the Church. The increased activity of the Sunday School is a hopeful sign, but it cannot take the place of home religion. Worldliness and commercialism have filled the home life of many of our people, and the religious training of the children has been relegated to the Sunday School. As a rule, young preachers do not come from worldly homes.

2. The religious life of many of our young people does not mean much. Too much stress has been placed upon the idea that one must make [illegible] to be religious. The ministry is [illegible] Christianity [illegible] Sunday [illegible] Church attendance [illegible] Religion is not a serious [illegible] young people [illegible] those sons of wealth [illegible] is largely a matter of [illegible] and the children [illegible] religion.

3. [illegible] children [illegible] our Sons [illegible] him unto the Lord all the days of his life. Our children should know that we dedicated them to the Lord for sacrifice or service. They are his.

4. It is time for the Church to pray for the Holy Ghost to call these young men to preach. The Church never gets beyond its own prayers.

T. W. LEWIS.

LETTER FROM GILDEROY.

Professing evangelists are on the increase in all of our Protestant churches. I use the word Protestant in its common acceptation—to include our evangelical churches. One of our evangelical churches defies being Protestant—never having protested against anything or any person. This denomination turns out its full share of evangelists.

With the increase of evangelists we have a constantly growing increase of slang and of really vulgar, impolite and ungenteel expressions in the pulpit. If this ugly habit were confined to the evangelists who come and are soon gone, it would not be so bad; but some weak pastors take these excresences to be marks of strength and adopt them, and pretty soon out-Herod Herod in the use of slang, vulgarisms and abusive speech. Some of these pastors seem to think that abusive speech is a sign of great courage, but it is only "cur rage." That is all. Genuine courage never adopts or uses such forms of speech. Real gentlemen will not come down to it. It is weakness and sin, and not a grace and virtue. It is disgraceful in the pulpit, a glaring fault in the preacher, and a shame and reproach to Christ and the gospel. In order that one may see how absurd and ridiculous it is, try to imagine Christ, John, Peter and Paul preaching in such terms; or, think of Mr. Wesley and his coadjutors using these ugly phrases. The very thought of it is absurd.

A gifted young pastor, a man of education and of parts, had foolishly allowed himself to drift into this style of speech in his pulpit. It gave him a chance to vent his spleen and afforded lots of room for his temper to cut capers in. It made him look ugly and not manly and brave. A rather wild young lady of his charge, when asked if she were going to church on Sunday night, said: "Yes, I am going to see what new cuss-words I can pick up from my pastor." Just so. That is about the size of it.

Along and along, at various places, I have noted down some of the ugly expressions used by pastors, and not one of them is over eighteen months old. One pastor, in giving his people to understand that he meant to have his own way about certain things, said, "When I set my head I am the most determined little scoundrel you ever saw." I had known him long, but never knew before that he was a scoundrel, and a little one at that. This speech hurt the preacher and helped nothing. The spirit manifested was ugly and [illegible]. If this had been said [illegible] it might have been excused, but [illegible] saying, as if it were a [illegible] and elegant utterance. This pastor is an educated man and capable of better things. This [illegible] expression [illegible] by saying, "I have the [illegible] pep." This did not improve the elegance or expressiveness of it, but perhaps it more nearly properly fixed the class of the preacher. In either case, the classification is not creditable to a gentleman. Another expression of doubtful propriety in the pulpit is, "I would just as soon have the [illegible] as to have half-way religion." Is there [illegible] way to say the same thing?

A Christian lady of near forty years, a member of the church from infancy, tells me the only profane words she ever heard were from the pulpit. Is this thing going to grow? Is there no [illegible] Somebody ought to rise up in revolt against it.

I could greatly extend this list of ugly things from the pulpit, but will not do so now. The temptation is strong to give the names of offenders and time and place. This would help [illegible] attention [illegible] they seem to be after.

Yours,

GILDEROY.

THE LAYMAN AND THE REVIVAL.

BY PROF. J. W. BEESON.

Somehow the people have fallen into the habit of looking to the preacher as the principal human agency in bringing on a revival.

It is true that, as a rule, preachers have been the main factors in religious awakenings, but is this according to God's plan? Does he call one class of his children to attend to all of the spiritual work in his kingdom and expect all other people to occupy their time and energy solely in the material side of his work? True, it may be that some are more gifted and successful in some line of work, and others in another; yet that does not signify that those of us who are for the most part occupied in the sphere of material things shall not also have an important place in everything spiritual. God's kingdom is a spiritual kingdom, and it is his will that the ultimate end of all activities shall be the advancement of things spiritual.

What part, then, can the layman have in originating and propagating a revival? He can have almost all to do with it if he will. He can be the silent human factor. He can pray, plan, agitate, create sentiment, and bring conviction as to the awful need of a revival. He can talk to the people who may shun the preacher; can see to it that there is an open door to the revivalist; can invite him to come, and back him up with means and prayers. He can invite people to the services and do personal work in his place of business and at the public gatherings. He can be instant in season and out of season.

We are sometimes told that revivals are not worked up, but prayed down. It is quite probable that they are both worked up and prayed down. Of course, all work and no prayer would bring failure, for a revival altogether worked up would be all human; but God's way is that we be co-workers with him. There is a human element in a revival. There are some places where it is easy to hold a revival because some godly men and women, young and old, have been working, planning, organizing, praying and waiting before God for many weeks anticipating and expecting a great outpouring of his blessings. When this is done under the divine guidance they will never be disappointed. If there shall be a "world-wide revival" that shall reach to the uttermost parts of the earth, "as waters that cover the sea," consecrated laymen and women, many of whom are not gifted as public speakers, must have a great part in its planning, pushing and praying.

Years ago, a timid, modest, shrinking young woman was wonderfully saved and sanctified. She was still timid and could not speak in public, yet she longed to see her people and her neighbors saved. They made fun of her religion, yet she prayed, fasted and worked for their salvation. She organized a little Sunday school at a country school house where there was no Sunday school for miles around and preaching only occasionally. She secured a donation of Bibles, song books and literature. She then walked several miles in every direction soliciting attendance at the Sunday School. Of course the people came. She started a general prayer meeting, a class prayer meeting, Bible study circles, etc., and then kept earnestly in prayer for a revival. Years went by and she at last summoned up courage enough to write for an evangelist to preach in a Presbyterian neighborhood. When arrangements had been made and the time for the revival drew near at hand, she walked eight miles around to invite the people out to hear. They came, and so did the revival. A camp meeting was started, and eternity alone will reveal the sequel.

This is not the only revival that was brought on by laymen. When heaven's secrets are revealed it will be known that most revivals were largely originated by some one or more obscure persons who have not been written up in the newspaper reports, but who will be known and rewarded in the great beyond.

Let us, men and women, who are not preachers, realize that we too have an important part in starting the new revival wave that shall sweep over the earth and break on the shores of eternity. The preacher cannot do our work; he has his own place to fill. Let us not leave it all to him. Let us be up and doing "while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work."

SOME INTERESTING READING.

There lies upon my table the latest historical publication from our House in Nashville, the second volume of "Methodism in Mississippi," by John G. Jones. To those of this generation the title is a little misleading, for it covers the territory of the present States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi as well. Indeed, some of the most interesting facts in the book are connected with the two first mentioned, and especially with the cities of Mobile and New Orleans. Having read Volume I with so much satisfaction, I was prepared for the coming of this.

This volume covers a space of twenty-seven years, including that of 1845. It has been my privilege to read only of the first ten years covering the period of 1818-1828. In this time we begin to come upon names more familiar to many of this generation—Wm. Winans, Thos. Griffin, Thos. Owen, Thos. Nixon, John Lane, Barnabas Pipkin, Benjamin Drake, Thos. Clinton, J. R. Lambert, J. I. E. Bird, Wm. Curtis, J. G. Jones and Alexander Talley, these among that heroic band who opened the great Southwest, with many others, their co-laborers whose names are held as household words with many to this day. Such laymen as Covington, Nugent, Farrar, Ford, Quinn, Ross, Enochs, McGehee, and others, equally worthy, but too numerous to mention are now represented by worthy laymen within the bounds.

In addition to the older and first appointments, we now begin to come upon such names as Atakapas, Rapides, Bayou Piere, Pearl River, Leaf River, Chickasawhay, Tuscaloosa, etc.

Conference sessions were held at country places, such as Midway Church, in Wilkinson County; the towns of Washington and then at Tuscaloosa, suggesting the great extent of territory occupied by this band of less than thirty men. The churches in Mobile and New Orleans seem to have had hard work to secure a footing, more especially that in New Orleans, so much so that Rev. B. M. Drake, reporting for that mission as late as 1887 (?), said that "Methodism in New Orleans was like a partridge in the wilderness." Doubtless it will be news to the Methodists of the city of Monroe to know that "in point of time," as the author states, the first person to join our Church in that place was a colored woman, doubtless some good old "black mammie," who in after years did good work in the "Mist'es'" family in helping to train the children for God. Among the appointments of 1826, John C. Burruss, in addition to his position as president of Elizabeth College at Washington, was to give as much of his time as possible to preaching and the work at a point some thirty miles away. We now see, too, the beginnings of the historic Elizabeth College for young women, claiming to be the first institution chartered with the privilege of graduating and giving diplomas to women in the Southwest, if not in the United States of America.

There were some amusing customs and discussions at those Conferences of our fathers. The applicants for admission into the Conference were not allowed seats within the body except by special invitation. The body discussed when and when the young ministers should marry, leaving on record their condemnation of one young man who had married an irreligious woman and resolving that he be deprived of the office of deacon in our Church. Again, they "Resolved, That we will not elect to elders' orders any member of our body who shall marry within four years of the time of his admission on trial, until four years after he was ordained deacon."

This may seem to us arbitrary and unreasonable, but I am convinced it might not have been bad for some of the [illegible] if the [illegible] had such continued even to this day.

Within this period we come to the first account of the Christian Advocate, of New York, which was just then coming into existence as our connectional Journal. Here again, we come upon one of those pleasant incidents in connection with the Conference sessions, even to this day. It is recorded that at the Conference of 1826 that because the Bishop's clothes looked old and well worn that we quickly raised a handsome purse, which was presented to him as a token of high appreciation for his Episcopal services." So rapidly had grown the work that in 1827 the statistics show a total membership in the Conference of 13,400.

Reflecting upon those times and the sacrifices which brought about such results, one is constrained to say that "surely the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places; our heritage is a goodly heritage." What the Rev. Thomas Hooker, of Newton, and the Rev. John Cotton, of Boston, had been in the settlement of the early New England Colonies, these tireless itinerants have been to Christianity, as well as Methodism in the great Southwest country. One needs to read of these times and experiences to appreciate the worth of these men, whose labors we have entered so abundantly and so peaceably—but I've run too long; forgive me.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: It gives me great pleasure to say that Purvis is recovering rapidly from the effects of the terrible cyclone of April 24, which destroyed both our church and parsonage, and left almost the entire town in ruins. New houses are going up on every hand, those not totally shattered are being repaired, and it is now prophesied that in twelve months we will have a better town, from the material standpoint, than we had before. The people of this community have indeed passed through a frightful ordeal, but almost without exception our citizens have exhibited sublime Christian fortitude in all their losses, and are bravely making the best of what was at first a desperate situation.

I rejoice to report that our church and parsonage have both been completed and are now ready for use. The church building, which is an exact duplicate of the one destroyed, is the same in design and execution, and, with the furnishings, will be valued at $3,000. Our new parsonage is one of the neatest and most comfortable in the Mississippi Conference, and is valued at $1,500. Both church and parsonage are paid for.

The first service in our new house of worship was held Sunday morning, July [illegible], by our highly esteemed presiding elder, Rev. [illegible] L. Burton, who preached a very appropriate and soul-stirring sermon. The occasion was one of gladness and thankfulness mingled with sorrow, because of the dark experiences through which many have passed. Our church building is the first to be replaced, work on the others destroyed not having begun as yet.

In my own behalf, and also in behalf of my congregation, I desire to express heartfelt thanks to all who have aided in any way in rebuilding our church and parsonage at Purvis. We owe a lasting debt of gratitude to Brother W. S. F. Tatum, of Hattiesburg, for his generous donation of the lumber needed for the new church; to Enochs Bros. & Jackson, for their great kindness in donating the sash and doors for the church; to Brother Thos. M. Ferguson, of Hattiesburg, for his prompt and diligent service in soliciting contributions for this emergency; to other members of Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, and to numerous churches and individuals in Mississippi and Louisiana, and elsewhere, for liberal contributions to both church and parsonage. We also deeply appreciate the kindness of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, in contributing several pieces of furniture to the parsonage. May the Lord richly reward one and all who have given of their help in this grievous emergency.

A fine meeting has just been held at Maple Church, six miles northwest of Purvis, where I was assisted for five days by Brother Geo. D. Anders, of McComb City. Five persons, four of whom are heads of families, were received on profession, and one by certificate. A dozen or more were happily converted, and the church and community received a great spiritual uplift. Brother Anders is one of the most consecrated, forceful and effective preachers I have ever been associated with. We expect to bring up all our assessments in full. Yours fraternally,

M. M. BLACK, P. C.

SEASHORE ASSEMBLY FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

The Tenth Annual Session of the Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers was by far the best attended and most successful one in its history. As usual, Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker presided to the satisfaction and delight of all present.

The institute, or class work, was well attended by young men and women from three States, viz, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi. "The Wisdom Literature of the Old Testament" was taught by Dr. John A. Rice. "An Historical Study in the Acts of the Apostles" was given by Prof. Thomas Carter. The courses in Christian Missions were well attended and were taught by Dr. F. S. Parker and Miss Mabel Head, both of whom are experts in teaching. Among the other speakers and lecturers were Bishop E. R. Hendrix, Dr. F. N. Parker, Dr. H. W. Featherstun, Miss Daisy Davies, Rev. J. F. Foster, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb, Miss Ethel Jackson (deaconess), Mr. Thos. A. Ellzey, Mr. E. E. French and Miss S. Juden.

Apart from the regular class work and lectures the Christian fellowship was unexcelled. In the morning prayer and the vesper services many lives were fully surrendered, and some for deaconess and mission work. The widening of the scope of the Assembly to include Sunday School and Woman's Work in the Church has proved to be a wise move.

If we were asked what was the best part of the Assembly we would answer, unhesitatingly, the life surrenders made for service in the Master's vineyard. Bishop Hendrix's great lecture on "Phillips Brooks" stirred all hearts, and his sermon on Sunday, at 11 a.m., lifted us to the mountain-top of vision and service.

The Leaguers of Louisiana were organized into a section, and elected the following officers: A. I. Townsley, president; Jno. F. Foster, vice president; T. V. Peters, recording secretary; S. L. Riggs, executive secretary; Mrs. W. W. Holmes, treasurer. This section will canvass the State in the interest of the Assembly.

As to the results of the Assembly, they are very great. Several young women gave themselves as candidates for special Christian work.

A. I. TOWNSLEY.

THE SEASHORE ASSEMBLY.

With this session the Seashore Epworth League Assembly becomes the Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers. In the general policy of this splendid summer institute there is no appreciable alteration. There is a very decided extension of its application. Missions, League, Sunday School and Woman's work have representation. As in former years, the devotional feature is amply stressed.

The lecturers this year are well chosen and cover, in their subjects, a large and interesting field. Dr. Rice's work in the Wisdom Literature of the Old Testament and Dr. Carter's fascinating and luminous lectures on Acts cover the Bible work. Dr. F. S. Parker has again the Foreign Mission work—this year the Moslem world. Miss Head conducts the Home Mission work, using as a text book the Forward Mission Study Course book, "Heroes of the Cross in America." It is inspiring to kneel with Brainerd in the lonely woods, to traverse with the dauntless Whitman the untraveled wilds "where rolls the Oregon." The Sunday School and Laymen Work is looked after by capable lecturers giving instruction in practical methods.

Among the notable features of the Assembly was Dr. A. F. Watkins' sermon Sunday morning. His timely utterance on the negro question struck fire and brought out numerous enthusiastic "amens." Mr. Ray Stannard Baker could have gotten useful material from that sermon. Dr. H. W. Featherstun delivered an interesting and timely address on "The Boy Problem."

Delegates were in attendance from Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama, yet one wonders why an opportunity so splendid finds a patronage so meager. Any church that invested money in sending one of its young people to this splendid summer school of the church will find itself well paid for its investment. It is to be hoped that a larger and more enthusiastic response on the part of the church at large in the three States contiguous to the Camp Ground will mark each succeeding session of the Assembly.

LAYMEN MEET AT MONTEAGLE.

July 18 the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Movement met at Monteagle, Tenn. The question of the proposed Methodist Assembly was thoroughly discussed, and the committee was directed to continue its investigation of the proposed places and of the ways and means.

Plans were laid to press the Laymen's Missionary Movement at all the Conferences this fall. The committee expect to endorse at least one good book each year, to be published under the imprint of the Educational Department. The first book so endorsed is "The How and the Why of Foreign Missions," by Dr. Arthur Brown. The secretary was instructed to send out letters urging the laymen everywhere to join the Emergency Corps. Definite steps were taken to secure a suitable man as general secretary, who should devote his whole time to the interests of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. In harmony with the action taken by the laymen of other churches, the week beginning with Nov. 29 was set apart as a week of prayer for the Coming of the Kingdom.

THE WAY OF SALVATION.

The Rev. W. S. Lagrone is the author of an essay on the "Way of Salvation." It is in pamphlet form, and contains thirty-four pages, printed at our Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., and sold at 10 cents a copy. We have had the pleasure of reading it through the courtesy of the author.

The purpose of this little book is to help some one to a better understanding of the truth, and to inspire all who read it to a better life. He has tried to supply a need often felt by himself, that of a short, concise statement of the way of salvation "in the simplest language, and based on the plainest declarations of God's Word." That he has succeeded we think the majority of his readers will agree. The author cuts squarely across the theory of our "second blessing" brethren, but he does it without the use of offensive words, and though he may not convince them, they will find it hard to answer him. Nor does he altogether agree with those of more conservative views. His "tack" on the subject is somewhat different from all others. Read and see. Its reading will prove good to the use of edifying.

A serious typographical error occurs on page 15, in the third line from the bottom, where the word "consecration" is put for the word "conviction." The careful reader will detect the error and supply the proper word.

We thank Brother Lagrone for his kindness.

GOD'S CALL TO MEN.

"God's Call to Men" contains the addresses and proceedings of the Laymen's Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held in Chattanooga, Tenn., April 21-23, 1908; also maps of our foreign fields and charts showing different phases of missionary enterprise. It is a missionary library in itself of up-to-date, stirring matter. It has many suggestions for practical application. Price, $1 postpaid. Address G. W. Cain, Secretary, Nashville, Tenn.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The Annual Report of the Board of Missions is now ready for distribution, and a copy will be mailed to any preacher or layman who will forward 6 cents for postage. It is important that all who wish to know what is being done by the Board in its six foreign mission fields should have a copy of this Report. Send orders to G. W. Cain, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

[illegible] we had a [illegible] service [illegible] the Compound in Soochow. We walked over to the church [illegible] dinner with Miss Atkinson and then [illegible] service in the afternoon. This is New Year's Day, and all the shops are closed for the first time since I have been here, and the people [illegible] good clothes don't seem to know what to do with themselves. They have been setting off fire-crackers in great quantities for several days. To-morrow, I believe, is the time for burning them [illegible] kitchen god, the new ones having arrived in the house last night. They buy them [illegible] a few cash.

"Your waist was made in Miss Atkinson's Industrial School [illegible] one of her girls this morning, who is going to be a Bible woman. She is one of a class of six, and has a very sweet face. She works in Miss Atkinson's school. It is very interesting, but so is ours. Our girls are from the higher classes, most of them from wealthy families. Some are daughters of our Methodist preachers, and they are poor, of course, but nearly all of these are very nice girls.

"Monday.—We expect to go to Shanghai to-morrow, and stay two days. We are going to make New Year's calls on the Chinese to-day."

On Feb. 6, 1908, Miss Nell Drake wrote to her father, as follows:

"We had a very pleasant trip to Shanghai, though it turned very cold yesterday. I had taken extra warm clothes, so didn't suffer. Dr. Fearn met us at the train, and piloted us up to McTyeire Home. He is certainly a manager, and so kind to everybody. He thinks he has special charge of Janie and me, because we are from Mississippi. He came in to afternoon tea, and stayed awhile. Mary Lou White and Miss Waters were there, too, and we enjoyed talking together. After dinner, Mary Lou sang for us, and Miss Mitchel played. I shared Mrs. Harris' room. She was very sweet and kind. Yesterday morning we went shopping and on various errands. Miss Pyle and Janie got a closed carriage as a treat for me, and it was certainly a comfort, as a freezing wind was blowing. The distances are too great for walking, and we usually [illegible] in rick-shaws. Shanghai is to have electric [illegible] before very long. It is a big foreign city, with fine stores, where you can buy almost anything you want. It is also a very wicked city, and, sad to say, much of its wickedness is due to foreigners who come from so-called Christian countries. All nationalities are represented here. More than three thousand are English, and there are numbers of Americans, French, Germans, Swedes, etc. I imagine a good part of the scum of the earth is collected in Shanghai, and, I doubt not, many, regarded as respectable at home, think they can do anything they choose here, because they are in China. Many of the Chinese think that all foreigners not missionaries are like the non-missionary foreigners in China. When Miss Alexander was married, of course Miss Richardson had to tell the servants. The cook immediately said: 'Did she marry a missionary, or a foreign heathen?' We think that a pretty good name for some of the foreigners in China.

"After tiffin we went out to St. John's Episcopal University. It is surely a big thing, 'beautiful for situation.' With its great school buildings, Bishop's and professors' homes, Bible Woman's Home, Ladies' Home and the Girls' School, all built up in brick and surrounded with beautiful trees, it presents an imposing appearance. Miss Pyle went out mainly to see the seats in the girls' chapel, as she wants to have some made like them for ours; so we went to the Ladies' Home. Miss Crummer and Miss Dod[illegible]ie were in, and were lovely to us. They took us all through the girls' school. The University buildings were closed for the holidays, but we saw the chapel. It is a very large room, nicely furnished, [illegible] it looked to me as if it would seat [illegible] more than our church at home, and Miss Crummer says it is full when all the students are present.

"When we got back to the school we found the Sisters and Miss Rankin there. They are staying a few days with some friend missionaries of the [illegible]. After they left, Dr. and Mrs. Parker and their little boy came for a few minutes, and when they left we went to the city to hear the band play. It is a splendid stringed band of thirty or forty players, [illegible] and they have a free concert three afternoons a week."

Speaking of prices in Shanghai, Nell Drake says:

"Some things are cheap—transportation, for instance. Miss Pyle, Janie and I walked to the [illegible] outside the city, and with our servant, got a drive of a mile for [illegible] cents Mexican in a nice rubber-tired carriage with a driver and footman. This saved us a [illegible] walk. On the other hand, some things are very expensive—mostly foreign things. The doctor's bill and the grocer's bill in Shanghai are large. Nearly all of our [illegible] come from there [illegible] Mexican for three pairs of shoestrings."

NOTES FROM SEASHORE DISTRICT.

The Lord is doing great things in the Seashore District. Brother Burton has returned from Mineral Wells, [illegible] in health and strength.

Brother Howse had Brother Huff with him at Nicholson, and they had a good meeting and much good was achieved. The next week I went to Brother Howse at McNeill. We worked faithfully and earnestly for ten days, with a growing interest all the time. The results were three accessions and some ten or twelve conversions.

There was open opposition to the meeting by a few godless men, but God was very gracious. One man, 50 years old or more, was converted and joined. Several young men and ladies were saved, and other church members were brought into a better experience. McNeill ought to be a strong church. It has the material, [illegible] would measure up thereto. Brother Howse was in favor with his people.

Last Monday I went to Brother Huff at Ellis. It is largely a Baptist community. Brother Huff has a strong hold on his people. We found good congregations at night. The Spirit of God was present at the first service. [illegible] hearts were moved. [illegible] Then [illegible] gave their hand for prayer. [illegible] congregation was moved. There were a number of conversions. Several strong men were brought into the church. One of the sweetest things in the meeting was a little girl 8 or 10 years of age who was happily converted. A number entered into new experiences and were resolved to consecrate their lives [illegible]. We closed last night. Brother Huff had fifteen accessions, I believe, and gave the names of several applicants to the Baptist pastor.

After the service on Friday night, and it was nearly 12 o'clock, a strong man, under deep conviction, came to Brother Huff's room, telling him he wanted him to help find Christ. They said that Ellis had never had such a revival. My convictions deep and pungent [illegible] the entire District. May a thousand [illegible] themselves fully unto God [illegible] there be regenerated and made a living [illegible] the salvation of others. How gracious [illegible] to human hearts, who trust him altogether. May a powerful spiritual wave sweep over the entire district. Yours, W. D. [illegible]MINICK.

KNOWING HOW TO DRESS.

A few years ago a well-known teacher who had founded and carried on for many years a successful school for girls in one of the middle states decided to retire. She was asked about a successor.

Many candidates were brought to her notice. The place was an important one. The emoluments were large, no school stood higher in the esteem of the public, and Mrs. Blank was anxious to find just the right woman for the position.

At last a lady offered to take the school who apparently had every qualification to carry it on with distinction. She was one of the most learned women in the country, spoke half a dozen languages, and was witty and wise in them all; she had a long and successful record as an educator.

But Mrs. Blank, after a brief interview, declined to consider her as a candidate, and also refused to make known at the time her reason for this decision. Years afterward she said to a friend: "There was no doubt as to her scholarship or her ability to teach, but her gloves were soiled, and one shoe had lost half the buttons. Trifles, you think? But they betrayed habits which made her unfit to be the guide of young girls. The woman, whatever her ability, who does not respect herself enough to be clean and neat will never command the respect of others."

The applicant never knew that her slovenly glove and gaping shoe cost her a position of ease and honor for life.

A place of trust with a large salary was open to women in one of the public departments in Washington several years ago. One candidate brought the highest recommendations, but was dismissed promptly by the committee which had the power to appoint. She was glaringly dressed in the extreme fashion, with glittering jewels and nodding plumes.

"We want a working woman, not a cockatoo," said the chairman, after the absurdly-dressed candidate had retired.

Nothing shows sense or discretion more accurately in man or woman than the way in which they dress. If they attach just the correct importance to their coats or gowns, they are likely also to estimate the other factors of life at their true values.—Youth's Companion.

MISS TOWNSEND'S OPPORTUNITY.

Was it because she was tired she wondered, and therefore nervous, that one persistent and disagreeable thought kept obtruding itself between her consciousness and pleasant themes?

The open pages before her failed to banish from her mind the face of a little child, a face pinched, wistful, shadowed by a look of anxiety, quite out of keeping with its infantile features and innocent eyes.

"I do believe," soliloquized Miss Townsend, in disgust, "there will be no peace for me till I go and call upon those people."

"If I were a good women," thought Miss Townsend, "I should want to go. If I were a little worse, I should read here in peace. Being neither bad nor good, I suppose I shall go—and hate to."

With a last longing look at the fire and a stifled sigh for the cup of tea, Miss Townsend plodded out in the storm.

The little girl whose face had proved so haunting was a new pupil in Miss Townsend's sewing class. The public school building in which, by special favor of the board, this class was held, stood in a thronged and very poor quarter of the city. The winter was proving a hard one, with the work of many factories, crafts and shops intermittent, slack or utterly at a standstill.

The child, Annie McMullin, lived in a rear house, separated by a long yard from the dwellings which faced the street. Its look of sometime thrift surprised Miss Townsend, for the extreme poverty of the child's dress had led the visitor to expect the third floor of a back tenement. This house harbored evidently but one family. Shrubs had been planted in the door-boxes heaped high with snow. At the windows hung lace curtains, which, as every parish visitor knows, make a line of demarcation between the abject and the thrifty poor.

There came to the door, in response to a third and emphatic knock, a tall, haggard man. He was unshaven, though not unwashed.

His frayed and faded coat was buttoned high, to conceal the absence of linen. The expression in his eyes, haunted and fierce, belied the good lines of brow, mouth and chin.

"Mr. McMullin?" she said.

"That's my name," replied the man, with somber looks.

"Perhaps you have heard of me from your little Annie," ventured the small woman in conciliatory accents. "I am her sewing teacher, Miss Townsend. I wished to meet Annie's father and mother. I like to know the parents of all my little people."

The man held the door wide, inviting his visitor to enter. His civility of manner and refinement of speech accorded ill with his rough and wretched appearance.

The little parlor wherein he made his visitor sit down had evidently been furnished in some past period of prosperity. It boasted the plush-covered furniture, the crayon portraits in flamboyant silver frames, the album and the melodeon which, together, furnish the company room according to the heart's desire of the mechanic's wife. But everything showed the lack of a woman's tidying hand.

Where was the wife? The wife, it appeared, was sick. The man had filled an excellent position at good wages till latter summer. Then his "boss" had closed the business.

Times were bad and it seemed impossible to find another job. The man had walked the streets seeking one, day after day. The wife had tried to help by going out to wash and char. She had been long unused to such continuous work and it had overtaxed her strength. Then one bitter day, coming home weary, tired and poorly clad, she had caught cold. She lay now on a dingy and comfortless bed, [illegible] and the eyes of the visitor saw that she was a very sick woman.

There was a little coarse food in the house. There was no fire, no fuel and no money. And in the heart of that haggard, unshaven man there was despair.

"They say," said he, "that God hears prayer. Haven't I prayed morning, noon and night, night and morning? I ask no luxuries, [illegible] food for my children, [illegible] as nice children as any man ever had. It's a bit of comfort for my wife that's worked so hard and been so good to me. It's work to pay my rent and put some clothes upon my back. Look at me! The rags I'm in! Who'll take a man looking like me? I pray and pray in the night when I can't sleep for thinking of my trouble. Then I get up early and tramp and tramp, and always it's the same answer: 'Nothing for you.'"

The visitor realized with bitter longing that she had no word of spiritual comfort to offer. The problem of prayer haunted her own thoughts, always unanswered. One's own feet, she thought, must be firmly planted on the rock of faith before one can reach down to draw up the souls sinking into despair. The little blue-eyed Annie, just in from school, was dispatched with a tin pail, a note and a quarter to fetch some strong broth from a diet kitchen hard by. There were some old blankets at home, Miss Townsend remembered, which could be sent down this evening by the furnace man, to make the woman's bed more comfortable.

The Associated Charities in a case like this could and must give coal. The little woman bethought herself of a noble charity which sent nurses in cases of emergency to the homes of the sick poor. She herself ordered in a basketful of such groceries as could be prepared by a bewildered man and a child. By the time she reached home she was too sad and too tired to care for dinner or books. Her heart was filled with a sense of her impotence to offer that spiritual comfort for which a racked soul had cried out to her in vain.

"I am not fit for this work," she said to herself. "It upsets me and it does them no good. I wonder why I undertake it at all? I had better give it up to some one with a strong, serene faith, who can do all that I ever do and speak peace to their souls as well."

If Miss Townsend could not answer the questions of the man's perplexed soul, she could and did find him various jobs in and around her own house—rugs to be beaten, windows to be cleaned, snow to be shoveled and the cellar to be whitewashed. She could "fill him up," as she expressed it, in her own kitchen and send him home with broth or jelly or fresh eggs for the sick wife. She could make sack aprons of strong, pretty ginghams to cover the children's rags and make them neat for school. She could beg for the man a suit of clothes in which he might sally forth respectable to seek a job. And she could and did harass the much-enduring secretary of the Associated Charities and importune her friends until at last, to her intense relief, a permanent job was found.

But though she had been unable, as she felt, to carry spiritual light into the home of her protégés, "I really do believe," she said, "I have been a kind of mascot to them, after all."

The wife was well. [illegible] time, her sickness had proved far more than a sharp attack of bronchitis. "[illegible]," said the nurse with professional frankness, "we have [illegible] her from pneumonia."

The man's work was proving permanent and [illegible] had been judged a [illegible] in case of [illegible].

The house took on a look of humble comfort. Mrs. McMullin, freed from alien washtubs by her husband's steady job, wrought cleanliness and order where there had been a grimy chaos. Little [illegible] curtains reappeared and the windows [illegible] clean.

When Mrs. McMullin, out of a full heart, [illegible] her visitor, [illegible] and fear [illegible] from the hearth as [illegible] from the [illegible] world without.

"[illegible]," said Mrs. McMullin, "[illegible] with Irish [illegible] ever since. [illegible] that first day. [illegible] half wild with the trouble and the starvation or I'd never a' said them things,' says he. 'Now I know that there was use in my prayin', ma'am,' says he, 'for the good God sent us you.'"

Miss Townsend murmured something—she could never remember what. There flashed into her soul a light sought through many a [illegible] ceremonial in vain. And as she walked home through the mean and swarming streets, the light was with her still.

"God sent us you."

She recalled the day when she listened to bitter doubts. Could she ever doubt again? In doing the will of God her eyes had been opened even as Christ said.—Churchman. L

We are [illegible] only [illegible] of our church papers that [illegible] see the humor in the talks [illegible] and elsewhere in the [illegible] Scriptures are destitute of imagination. That explains. It assures us that what is lacking in the Word is supplied by the imagination. With that explanation we can see why the subject is so frequently alluded to, and why the brother with the vivid imagination is unable to sympathize with plain men who look into God's Word without reading anything humorous between the lines. Now and then we indulge our imagination, and sometimes we see the humorous and ridiculous side of things, but it never occurred to us to call imagination into exercise in reading the discourses of our Lord, whether his table-talks or public speeches. We could not think of doing such a thing for fear of undermining the respect of our readers or hearers for the character and mission of our Lord. Indeed, we could not for the life of us point to a single saying in the reported private conversations or public discourses at all adapted to arouse humorous feelings in his hearers. It is possible that the people saw something humorous in the conduct of little Zaccheus, who climbed a sycamore tree to see Jesus as he passed along the road, but we seriously doubt whether Zaccheus saw or felt the humor of the situation, and certainly history records no word leading to the belief that Jesus humored the joke; he was intent on saving the poor sinner, seeing "he also was a son of Abraham."

That our Lord was a delightful talker we do not [illegible]. That multitudes not only heard him gladly, but with eager ears and smiling faces, we are ready to acknowledge. They could hardly have done otherwise; but that Jesus ever said anything to tickle them, or spoke anything purposely to produce tears of laughter, the record nowhere shows. It is left to those who will have it so to imagine that in connection with serious things Jesus told laughable stories. The people recognized the seriousness of our Lord's ministry, and left him, doubtless, more than once, saying: "We never saw it on this fashion."

We have known speakers in imagination to slap the [illegible] gate of [illegible] and punch them unmercifully [illegible]; we have known them to [illegible] the universe along the brow of the everlasting hills, and in a long stretch of imagination tell how it would be "an easy thing for the Almighty to squeeze up the souls of good men in order to get them into the New Jerusalem," and in imagination have known them to say and do a hundred foolish things, but the editor of one of our church papers is the first and only man we ever knew to draw on his imagination for facts in regard to the preaching of our Lord. If he is right, we have no ground to wonder that some preachers with a funny-bump on their heads have imitated their Teacher by making their meetings as good as a circus.

We have written this editorial without a head. Readers can put any head to it that happens to strike them.

GETTING RESTLESS.

We intimated recently that the disposition to [illegible] of the colored membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church had manifested itself among the delegates to the late General Conference. We do not vouch for the accuracy of the view. Our information was that only the white element of the body showed restlessness, and we had an idea that the colored brethren were passive, even though they might be greatly disappointed. A letter in the Christian Advocate (New York) of July [illegible] from the Rev. W. H. Brooks, one of the colored delegates, very clearly indicates that he is not contented. He does not tell us why, but his language can hardly be misinterpreted. He is grievously disappointed at the outcome of the General Conference elections.

The proposition before the Annual Conferences to amend the constitution so as to allow the election of Bishops for races and languages was overwhelmingly defeated. [illegible] Conferences were almost solid against it. [illegible] voted against it evidently believing that the time had come when the Church would give them—not a "missionary Bishop" [illegible] jurisdiction to a particular race or language, but a "full Bishop." The first and second ballots showed that the colored candidate polled his largest votes, which was far short. The Church was no nearer ready in 1908 than it was in 1900 to elect a colored Bishop. We undertake not to say why.

Now comes the Rev. W. H. Brooks and puts these significant words:

"Is the present relation of the colored membership satisfactory either to themselves or the Church? Is it the best for the negro and his in the years to come? Should he accept any [illegible] whatever its material advantages, or shun any, whatever its hardships, which ignores the future?

"In the great General Conference, where representative interests [illegible] others [illegible] what stimulus has the [illegible] what power of execution? If he has no motive for initiation and no power of execution, is he not in fact, whatever the abstract theory, dependent [illegible] the Church [illegible] when these are [illegible]. The [illegible] were at ease in Zion [illegible] unfortunate for Zion."

RAISING MONEY FOR THE CHURCH.

We have been requested by a sister who is interested [illegible] give our [illegible] suppers, fairs and such things, as [illegible] raising money for church purposes. [illegible] are conservative. We neither violently [illegible] them, nor enthusiastically favor [illegible] giving advice on the subject in any [illegible] we would be governed by circumstances. [illegible] and [illegible] of a supper, etc., would hurt the con[illegible] we should advise that they be [illegible] better to [illegible] money than [illegible] the division of the Church. If, on the other hand, the brethren and sisters are [illegible] and there is an opportunity to bring the church and its friends together to raise means to [illegible] the Lord's work, we would say: [illegible] "Amen." [illegible] snares [illegible] on them [illegible] church funds. [illegible] an evil [illegible] a personal witness. But if [illegible] instincts of the people—[illegible] thing they ever do, as [illegible] not say [illegible] them and engage in [illegible]

PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE.

We have received a number of letters complaining about the price of the [illegible] being [illegible]. It has not been changed at all. It is [illegible] as it has been for [illegible] the past, $2 per annum. But there are business and mechanical [illegible] that cause the cost of each paper to diminish as the circulation increases. There are [illegible] that may be easier [illegible] a large circulation than a small. The [illegible] a large part of the membership has [illegible] to the best, [illegible] of a dollar. It [illegible] how large the circulation of a paper, [illegible] the work that it should do unless [illegible] reaches all the [illegible] of its con[illegible] farmer would feel that he was [illegible] ground properly who had a few fur[illegible] the middle of the field and left the [illegible] who have caught [illegible] the obligation of the church [illegible] question as to how all the [illegible]

[illegible] years now the Advocate has been [illegible] with these problems by issuing [illegible] at a rate of $1.50 in clubs [illegible] $1.25 in clubs of twenty, with a [illegible] twenty-five cents on each subscription, whether new subscribers or renewal.

We have decided to authorize clubs of ten at the $1.25 rate between now and Conference, [illegible] twenty-five cents commission. The in[illegible] that we put upon this club of ten or [illegible] number which we may have fixed is [illegible] at least that number [illegible] the Conference year. If you secure [illegible] subscribers you may continue to [illegible] the same rate until the session of the [illegible] Conference, when all clubs must end.

[illegible] with [illegible] instances [illegible] mem[illegible] each for the [illegible] the [illegible] generally this [illegible] but we have no fault to [illegible] preacher [illegible] away this [illegible] as we are not charged with [illegible] are [illegible] your [illegible] we [illegible] are [illegible] preachers [illegible] persons [illegible] poor [illegible] a dollar.

What about next year? We have no promises to make; the whole matter rests with you. If you give us the circulation you can have the same rates next year; but at present the whole matter is in an experimental stage. We made no promises last year, but we are continuing the club rates this year, and making absolutely no distinction between new and old subscribers. One good brother says: "I would secure a club on my charge, but there is so much trouble when it comes to renewing at the two dollar rate."

But through the ADVOCATE and by personal letters we have tried our best to persuade the brethren to renew last year's clubs at the club rate.

We should have easily 25,000 subscribers in the bounds of Mississippi and Louisiana, but the subscription list is now fluctuating up and down between 6000 and 7000. Under the new postal ruling we are compelled to cut off subscribers after they are so old, and this has cut the numbers very materially, and incidentally made a few persons very angry with us, who should have found fault with "Uncle Sam." If you cannot circulate the ADVOCATE under the present club-rate, you cannot circulate it at any price. If you do not try to circulate your Church paper, you do not care to have a paper at a price that even the poorest can afford to take.

We plan many improvements, and have our ideals set always higher up, and strive always to have a paper which can be circulated for the glory of our Lord, and used to advance his cause among men. Three things are needed to this end: the prayers of the Church that wisdom may be given to those who are in charge; the best thought from the pens of those who can write, and the circulation of the ADVOCATE in the homes of our people. PUBLISHER.

PERSONAL.

We have received the programme of the Texas Epworth Leagues, which indicate plans commensurate with the size of their State. They will meet in Epworth-by-the-sea Aug. 6-16.

Rev. W. W. Drake, of Crowley, during his short summer vacation, visited one of his brothers, who lives near Atlanta, Ga. Brother Drake reported favorably of church work in Louisiana to the Georgia Methodists.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin is in the last half of his fourth year on the Enterprise and Stonewall (Miss.) Charge, and will, if present prospects are realized, make a good showing at the close. The work is in good shape.

Mrs. N. C. McKinney, press superintendent of the Woman's Home Mission Society for the Louisiana Conference, asks us to say that no "Bulletin" was issued for August, "that the superintendent be not blamed or asked why."

Rev. T. W. Lewis and family are sojourning for a while on Lookout Mountain, near Chattanooga, where they enjoy the pure air of the upper regions. Brother Lewis will return to Mississippi in a few days, but Sister Lewis will remain until cool weather.

Rev. H. Mellard, of Forest, Miss., informs us that Rev. C. McDonald has been very sick, but is getting well. He tells us also that the presiding elder, Dr. J. M. Weems, who has been also on the sick list, is improving. Brother Mellard and his people hold Dr. Weems in high esteem. His quarterly visitations are inspiring.

Rev. D. M. Geddie, whose excellent articles on the problem of original sin are passing through our columns, asks us to say that the quotation "Now, the works of the flesh are manifest," etc., occurs in the fifth chapter of the Epistle to the Galatians, not Ephesians, as it was written. By the way, Brother Geddie's articles are attracting attention.

Rev. W. W. Holmes and wife, and Rev. H. T. Carley and wife, are on a ten days' visit in Mississippi to parents and friends. These brethren are in their first year at Louisiana Avenue and Carrollton Avenue, respectively. They have devoted eight months to hard work, and will enjoy a short vacation.

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor, tells us that the church at Jennings, La., is on trial this year. Judging from the tone of his letter, and the facts stated, he is making a winning fight. The membership is small, but responds nobly to the demands of the church. There is now no debt on hand, and the next thing on the programme is a parsonage.

Word comes to us, not by grapevine telegraph, but through one who heard, that Dr. F. N. Parker's lecture at the League Assembly was the finest thing delivered on the occasion. It was full of thought, delivered with energy, and kept the Leaguers interested for an hour and fifteen minutes. Our Church is still producing great men.

In a note to this office Rev. J. H. Freeman says: "We are in the midst of a revival at Hermanville, Miss., such as we have not had for many years. Many reclamations, several conversions, five additions on profession of faith. We are having a great meeting. Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of McComb City, is doing the preaching. To God we give all the praise. Pray for us."

The descendents of the Rev. Samuel G. Jones, grandfather of the lately-deceased Sam Jones, will celebrate the anniversary of his birth on the 10th of August. The services will be held at the old Felton's Chapel, near Cartersville, Ga., where four generations of the Jones family have worshiped and preached. Rev. Walter Holcomb, son-in-law of Rev. Sam Jones, will preach the opening sermon.

Rev. N. H. Hawkins, recently at Stevenson, Ala., writes in the Alabama Advocate of the success and popularity of the pastor, Rev. C. A. Bowen, a north Mississippi boy, son of Rev. J. A. Bowen. The father was with the son at the time, engaged in a meeting, and "preached the gospel in its simplicity, truth and power, and God blessed his sermons to the conversion of many precious souls."

Miss Mary E. Lagrone, daughter of Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of the North Mississippi Conference, was married on the evening of July 27 (ult.) to Mr. Pope Coleman Wall, of Sardis, Miss. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. M. Young, presiding elder of the Sardis District, who prays that the blessings of our Heavenly Father may enrich their young and happy lives." The editor responds a hearty Amen.

Bishop Hendrix greatly delighted the Assembly of Christian Workers last Sunday at the Seashore Camp Ground. At 11 o'clock he preached one of his soul-stirring sermons, taking one of St. Paul's most striking paragraphs for his text. On Saturday evening he gave his hearers a talk on the life and character of Phillips Brooks. He had fine subjects at both hours, and it goes without saying that he both pleased and edified the congregation. Wednesday morning he passed through the city, en route for Corpus Christi, Tex., where he will deliver a series of lectures to the Texas Leaguers.

Rev. R. J. Harp is in the city for a few days, after enjoying the delightful breezes at the Seashore Camp Ground. Brother Harp came to Louisiana from the Memphis Conference in 1847. All the years since then he has been in the active itinerant work—the only living charter member of the Louisiana Conference. Soon after coming to the State he was appointed to New Orleans, and in time became manager of the Book Depository, a branch of our Publishing House. He was the fast and faithful friend of our honored and sainted father. While manager of the Depository he came near bringing this editor to New Orleans for [illegible]. Our youth and smallness of stature stood in the way. Of course we have always had a warm place in our heart for Brother Harp.

Rev. W. G. Harbin has just closed a good meeting with Rev. H. Mellard at Forest, Miss. Twenty-three members were added to the church and eight family altars were established. He says Brother Mellard is doing a great work in Forest. Brother Harbin took a ten-days rest at Biloxi, and during the time attended the Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, of which he has given us an account for publication next week.

The Arcadia District Conference met at Bienville Tuesday evening, July 28, and adjourned about midday on Thursday, July 30. The attendance was good, the laymen especially being well represented. Our publisher made the trip, but arrived at Bienville just as the delegates were preparing to leave. The overflow from Red River and the continued rains have caused washouts on the railroads in the vicinity of Bienville, and travel is very slow, the railroads being unable to make connections. Brother S. J. Davis, pastor at Bienville, reported a good session. Dr. J. T. Sawyer preached on Thursday night to a large audience. We were assigned to the home of Brother and Sister W. O. Campbell, who made our stay pleasant indeed.

Dr. G. C. Rankin, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, recently spent a day at San Antonio. In his issue of July 23 he speaks thus of Rev. N. B. Harmon, who went a couple of years ago from Mississippi to West Texas Conference: "Brother Harmon, at Prospect Hill, is one of the livest wires in the moral and religious life of the city. He is directing the forces of the Anti-Saloon League, and he is the sternwheel of the prohibition movement. He is full of zeal, wonderfully consecrated, and as fearless as a lion. No task is too formidable for him, no strife of the battle is too hot for him, and he is wise, resourceful and always on the alert. Yet he does not neglect his church work at any point. He has not been in the West Texas Conference very long, but he is one of their livest men." We rejoice with Brother Harmon that he occupies so high a place among Texas brethren.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

LITTLE REESE, [illegible] and Dolley Cargill [illegible] passed to his heavenly home May [illegible] He was [illegible] and [illegible] days old. He was sick [illegible] days and in this time suffered much but the Lord knew best and called him home. He leaves to mourn his papa, mamma, two little sisters and one little brother. But their loss is his eternal gain. They loved him but the Lord loved him best. He was a sweet baby, with such a happy disposition that all loved him. His funeral was conducted by Rev. Mr. Staples. And now, dear parents, the Lord does not err, and since he has taken your darling home, may he comfort your hearts and may heaven seem nearer than ever before and in this ordeal of life look to him who alone can really comfort. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth; we can not see why, now, perhaps, but we will, sometime, somewhere, understand. Dear little Reese is just over yonder on that beautiful shore waiting and watching and with beckoning hands is saying, come on papa, mamma, sisters and brother.

"Their darling is gone, but not forgotten.
Loving memories linger still.
Though it was so sad the parting,
Yet we knew it was his will.
The pearly gates were opened,
The Savior's voice said come,
And with farewells unspoken,
He calmly entered home."

MRS. M. E. JAMIESON (nee West) was born March 24, 18[illegible], embraced religion and joined the Methodist Church when sixteen years of age; married to Joe H. Jamieson Sept. 15, 18[illegible], and died in great peace July 12, 1908. The whole community feel that they have sustained a great loss in the death of Sister Jamieson. Of a gentle and amiable disposition, obliging and helpful to all, she was much loved by her neighbors. How remarkable that her husband can say, that after a companionship of twenty-seven years, he never heard her speak unkindly of any one. As wife and mother she was unexcelled, cheerfully sacrificing any pleasure of her own for the comfort of her loved ones. With her gentle, patient Christian example she made her home the happiest place on earth for the members of her family circle. When married to her now bereaved husband he had three motherless children; she so acted the part of a mother to them that they each say they could not have loved their own mother any more. One of them being in the far west, when he heard that she was dangerously ill, boarded the first train and traveled a thousand miles that he might see her once more. She loved the Church and was never absent from public worship if it was possible to be there. Her sickness was protracted, but her patient submission was beautiful to behold, and when told by her husband that the time of her departure was at hand she was not in the least alarmed, but calmly said: "I have been making preparation for this hour each day since I was sixteen years old." Then making a beautiful talk to the loved ones, she fell asleep in Jesus as sweetly and trustingly as an infant in its mother's arms. What a comfort to the sorrowing husband, the three stepchildren, and five children of her own, that her Christian life was so perfect and her death so triumphant.

Epworth League

By Rev. H. Whitehead.

PRAYER-MEETING TOPIC.

August 9. The Passing of Selfishness: The Devoted Life. John xxi. 15-22; II. Cor. v. 11-19.

Unselfishness does not depreciate self. True self-love is never selfish. "Love thy neighbor as thyself." Newman Smyth ("Christian Ethics," p. 329) says: "It is never selfish to be one's self, and to remain true to self." It would be selfishness to refuse, for love of ease, that self-affirmation and self-regard necessary to unselfish giving of one's self for others. Self-love, self-respect, is a Christian duty. "So long," says Fleming, "as self-love does not degenerate into selfishness, it is quite compatible with true benevolence."

The selfish person seeks his own happiness and ends without regard to the happiness and welfare of others. He violates the apostolic injunction: "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." (Phil. 2. 4).

The unselfish person comes "not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

The unselfish person who is as truly regardful of his Divinely commissioned self as he ought, can honestly say with Jesus: "I am come not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."

Jesus teaches, and he has demonstrated in his own life and death and resurrection, that the only certain way to save one's life and to come unto his best success is by constant and full giving of himself in unselfish service for others. Read Luke ix. 24. By his teaching and his open demonstration Jesus has bound all right-thinking and right-willing persons to the unselfish life. Therefore, the topic: "Unselfish for the Sake of Christ."

Jesus has identified himself so closely with the least of the needy ones of earth that what is done for any of these is done for him—Matt. xxv, 31; therefore, whoever finds his own best life realized in unselfish service for the sake of others is himself "unselfish for the sake of Christ."

Our Scripture.

John xxi. 15-22. Peter had followed Jesus with a definite and immediate thought of what he would get for it—Matt. xix. 27. When Peter thought he was in danger, he had with selfishness denied his Lord, thinking most of his own peril. As recorded in our Scripture for this week Jesus did not quit Peter until by most direct and searching question he was brought to see that, if he would belong to Jesus, he must live not for self, but for other people. Nor must he be guided in his faithfulness in the feeding of the lambs by first considering whether John was faithful. It would be thoroughly selfish in Peter to be guided in the matter of his own faithfulness of service by first considering what rewards of service might be coming to John. Peter had to learn to be unselfish for the sake of Christ.

II. Cor. v. 11-19. "For the love of Christ constraineth us." Meditate deeply upon verses 14 and 15. They contain Paul's statement of the reason why every one should be "unselfish for the sake of Christ." "We owe Christ more than our thanks; we owe him our lives."

A Few Questions.

"Lord, and what shall this man do?" Am I, like Peter, guided in the degree of my own faithfulness by first considering whether some one else is faithful or not?

Is my Epworth League satisfied, without reference to its own opportunities, when it does what some neighbor League is doing?

Do I realize that it is generally selfishness that asks, "Lord, and what shall this man do?"

Can a selfish life be really successful?

Is there any virtue in good deeds done to be seen of men?

How much of the work of my life and of my League is unselfish? And how much is done because some one else is likely to do the same, or to be seen or known by others?—Rev. D. C. Grover, in Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

The Alaska Packer's Association furnishes the Government thousands of cases of salmon each year. Out of 240,000 cans inspected by the Government at Camp Thomas during the Spanish War, only four defective cans were found. The Association packs the celebrated Argo Red Salmon.

DENHAM SPRINGS, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Our Camp Meeting has come and gone. The Lord only knows the amount of good that was accomplished. Brothers Bass, J. M. Alford, Brown and myself did the preaching. There was a very good attendance, and several from a distance were converted. There were four accessions on profession of faith, and two by letter.

We have but very little material here. The Baptists are strong here, but we are in harmony and the Lord is blessing us. We expect to press the battle right on from one meeting to another till September. Pray for us.

Yours truly, F. N. SWEENEY.

There were [illegible] additions to the Church, [illegible] we hope and believe [illegible] was accomplished. The Church was greatly revived. Our [illegible] work is in good condition [illegible] and we are [illegible] and working for a great harvest for the Master this year. We never labored [illegible] better people. They have [illegible] from the [illegible]. We will begin a meeting at Hopewell Church the first Sunday in August. Brother W. W. Simmons will be with us. We are praying for a good meeting there.

TWO GREAT REVIVALS.

We have had two good meetings on the Coalville Charge within the past month—one at Favard's Chapel and the other at White Plains. The former was conducted by Rev. Robert McGowan, of Hattiesburg, and it was quite a revival. There were many old troubles settled, [illegible] conversions, 3 sanctifications, and 13 added to the Church. Brother McGowan is a local preacher in our church, and is one of the best fellow-helpers I have ever had with me. Brother J. E. Spence, another one of our local preachers, did the preaching at White Plains. Much good was done there among the members. 15 claimed conversion. 4 united with the Church, and the membership was greatly revived. Brother Spence is a good man and a gospel preacher. We wish both him and Brother McGowan much success in the work.

J. W. THOMPSON, P. C.

REVIVAL AT COLDWATER.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Our revival meeting at Coldwater began the fourth Sunday in June, and continued till Tuesday, the 7th of July. Since there are very few here, young and old, that do not belong to some church, we did not expect any great ingathering; yet we had a great revival in the Church. The membership was quickened—backsliders reclaimed, the weak strengthened, and the faithful encouraged. Many of the services were spiritual feasts and we felt we were walking in heavenly places.

The first two services were conducted by the Hon. Thos. R. King, of Memphis, leader of the Laymen's Movement of the Memphis Conference. His addresses were masterpieces—in reality, were soul-stirring sermons. He made deep impressions upon our laymen that will abide. His many friends hope that he will honor them with another visit in the near future.

Brother S. A. Brown, of Byhalia, came [illegible] Monday morning and remained till the meeting closed. He had no [illegible] catchers, [illegible] methods to employ. His sermons were so simple that a child could understand them, yet they were [illegible] strong. He gave an exposition of his text, explained his propositions and then gathered his strength from the whole, and with the unconscious power of [illegible] he applied it to the [illegible] of his hearers with wonderful effect. Any [illegible] will make no mistake in securing his services for revival meetings. He was a stranger when he came, but he left behind a host of warm friends. The Conference will hear from him later.

It is announced that Sir Thomas Lipton will try again to win the America's cup. If so, this will be his fourth attempt. It is to be hoped that the racing conditions will be such as will produce seaworthy vessels, and not mere racing machines, fit only for the junk-heap after the race is over. This international yacht race has stirred the hearts and aroused the ambitions of the best seamen on both sides of the water. The prize remains with the victor only so long as he can maintain his place as champion of the seas. But quite naturally the one holding the trophy has dictated the terms of the race when he was challenged for the cup.

THOUGH A THOUSAND FALL.

Melville B. Cox, although he was enfeebled by ill health, was yet filled with love for the suffering world, and he longed to go to Africa as a missionary. Mr. Earl Taylor says in "The Price of Africa:"

"His soul burned with a desire to preach the gospel in Africa. On Sunday, May 6th, 1832, the following entry may be found in his journal: 'A pleasant morning. My breast feels sensibly the effort of yesterday to converse agreeably with a few friends. Liberia swallows up all my thoughts. I thirst for the commission to go.'"

The next day he writes: "The episcopacy has concluded to send me to Liberia. I hail it as the most joyful appointment from them that I ever received. The prospect now is that, feeble as I am, there I may be useful while the energy of life remains, that I may cease at once to work and live. A grave in Africa will be sweet to me if he sustains me."

After reaching Africa he wrote, "Thank God I am now at Liberia," then a little later, "I love Liberia more than ever." He it was who asked his friend to write as his epitaph:

Is Your Baby Teething?
There is no need to dread baby's second summer—the trying teething period—just keep its system in condition to make teething easy and save sleepless nights.

Teethina

was first used by Dr. C. J. Moffett, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in his extensive and successful treatment of children's diseases incident to teething and summer complaints—a standard remedy for over 40 years throughout the South. It contains the elements recommended by the most advanced medical sciences as necessary for removing the cause of disease and keeping baby's system in condition to make teething easy.

In nine out of ten cases of cholera infantum that prove fatal from ordinary neglect and subsequent treatment, the use of Teethina would have saved the child.

HELPED HER SISTER

Young girls, at the critical age, often require the help that Cardui will give.

Cardui acts gently and safely, in a way that will mean much for health in future years.

Cardui has been found to relieve or prevent female pains, such as headache, backache, sideache, etc., and to act effectively on such symptoms as fitful temper, nervousness, tired feeling, and other symptoms that are common to young women.

Mrs. Mary Hudson, of Eastman, Miss., writes: "My young sister, while staying with me and going to school, was in terrible misery. I got her to take a few doses of Cardui and it helped her at once.

"I have taken Cardui myself and believe I would have been under the clay, if it had not been for that wonderful medicine. I was in a rack of pain, in my back and low down, but the first dose of Cardui helped me, and now I am in better health than in three years."

Try Cardui. It is a purely vegetable, gently medicinal, extract, especially recommended for female troubles. Sold by all druggists.

BROAD STREET, HATTIESBURG.

Hattiesburg Methodists, along with the other Christian workers of our city, were disappointed in the failure to secure the services of the Rev. Geo. C. Cates for a union meeting in the month of June. The invitation had been extended and accepted, and Mr. Cates was on the point of coming, but upon being notified that a tent would be the only available auditorium, for that reason had to decline to come. Failing in their plans for a union meeting, our pastors proceeded to hold meetings in their respective churches. Brother Jones led off with a two weeks' meeting at Court Street, assisted by Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of Westpoint. Brother Holloman followed in June, with Rev. G. A. Guice, of Saucier, assisting. I leave it to these brethren to write of these services, and hasten to add a few words concerning our own meeting at Broad Street.

We began the fourth Sunday in June. For two months the meeting had been kept constantly before the minds of our people. We had a piano brought in and bought additional song books. Music was made a factor in our meeting and added greatly to its success. Without outside pulpit aid, but with the enthusiastic co-operation of the people, the services continued for two weeks with increasing interest and power. The Holy Spirit was honored and exalted, and was manifestly present from the very first service. The Church was greatly revived and blessed. Backsliders were reclaimed; sinners were convicted and converted. The second week of the meeting a couple of gracious open air meetings were held just before the evening service. The second Saturday of the meeting the pastor was compelled to leave on account of sickness in his family. Our honored brother, Rev. H. D. Howell, preached the last Sunday. Our people love him and delight to hear him preach. Sixteen applied for church membership on profession of faith. All of them had been converted at the altar. We feel that God has greatly blessed us and that the blessings will abide. We hope to conclude the work of the year with success along all lines.

FROM KEATCHIE, LA.

Dear Advocate: Those who are interested in the work in North Louisiana will probably be glad to hear of the splendid revival which has been in progress at Logansport for several weeks. Evangelists Mock and Lamone preached there for two weeks. During this meeting a number of souls were blessed, and the way was prepared for our meeting which immediately followed.

Rev. A. C. Holder, of Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, ably assisted the pastor for eleven days. Brother Holder is a man of God who preaches with power and unction. We judge there were over one hundred conversions, besides the many dead, formal and comparatively useless members of the Church, who have taken on new life, and are prepared to carry on the great work which God in his mercy has given to the laymen and women of the Church.

From the good done in this meeting two or three prayer meetings have been organized. The one of especial notice is the Men's Prayer Meeting, which convenes every Sunday afternoon at the Woodmen's Hall. Already thirty are members of this organization, and its number is on the increase.

An Epworth League, which promises to be a great success, was also organized after the meeting.

The Methodists and their friends requested their pastor to preach there twice a month, and subscribed $40 per month for his services. This amount is to be paid monthly, and in the judgment of the pastor, is the best plan.

Among the many things for which the people are rejoicing, is the promise of the District Conference, which is scheduled to arrive at Logansport some time next summer. The members of our District Conference, visitors and prospective delegates, may look forward with pleasure to their coming to Logansport next year. For ideal Southern hospitality generally diffused, the town is unsurpassed.

Will the readers of the Advocate pray that the good work at that place may enlarge and grow.

FROM SMITHVILLE (MISS.) CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We are rejoicing over a good meeting that has just closed at Antioch, on the Smithville charge. While, so far as we were able to see, there was not very much accomplished with those who are out of Christ, yet we had a nice little revival of religion in the Church. We enjoyed the preaching very much, as it was up to date in every particular. The preaching was done by Rev. D. McGeddie, of Winona. Brother Geddie is a great preacher. May the Lord crown his labor with much success. Much success to you and the Advocate. Pray for us.

LESSON FOR AUG. 9.

Subject: "David and Goliath." I Samuel xvii, 32-48.

Golden Text: "In the Lord put I my trust." Psalm xl, 1.

From this time on, our interest is centered on the life of David, the boy that was called in from the fields where he was keeping his father's sheep, to be anointed king of all Israel. His family, his friends nor the people seemed to realize the importance of what had been done by the Prophet Samuel. The ceremony being over, David returned to his simple occupation. What a difference must there have been in his thoughts, in his inner life, for "The Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward"—that is, from the day of his anointing. There were many lessons for the future king to learn. There, in the solitude of the fields and pastures, the Spirit must have revealed many strange things to him. The events of the past were reviewed in another light, for he learned that it was the strength of God that made him powerful in protecting his father's flock from the wild beasts. His rustic life shown forth in many passages in after life when the Spirit moved him to write and pour out his soul for the comfort and consolation of the people of God in all generations, everywhere.

He had other lessons to learn that the fields and woods could not teach him. While his life was so simply peaceful, and his trust growing more perfect in the Lord, all was not so lovely at the court of the king. The Spirit of God had departed from Saul, which was disastrous enough; but in place of that comfort, there came an evil spirit that troubled him. The heart of man is the abode of one or the other of these two influences, and a mighty warfare is ever prevailing to decide who shall have this place of abode, the Holy Spirit on one side and the spirit of evil on the other. Unhappy is the man from whom the blessed Spirit of God has been driven. God's Spirit will not leave the heart unless driven away; nay, he even strives with man to remain.

Saul was alone; no more could he call upon the God he had disobeyed; the spirit of unrest ran hot in his soul, and he longed for some comfort and peace. He was told of how soothing were the sweet strains of music; the harp when played by a skillful hand would drive away his gloom. See the warnings of God's Providence in bringing David to court where he could learn the life of a king; the world would say that it was just as it happened, that the shepherd-boy came to the king's house, and that it was only because he was skilled in playing the harp. We need not the chords of music to tell us of David's skill in that accomplishment, for in all that he wrote there is more comfort than Saul received when the shepherd-boy came and played the harp for him. To give David a position at court, Saul made him his armour-bearer. This work did not require constant attention and David would return to his father's house at intervals. While he was there at one time, Jesse wanted to send some supplies to his other sons, who were in the army, and to learn how his soldier-boys were getting along. David was to be the messenger. See how naturally everyday events follow each other and behind them is God's purposes in all. It was ordained in the Providence of God, in mapping out the future of his people, that this shepherd-lad should be in the valley of Elah at the very time when Goliath of Gath was making his daily challenge, defying the army of Israel.

David saw the giant and heard his boasting, and his God-given courage was aroused within him. His interest was not awakened by any hope of reward; he did not even ask what should be done for the man that should overcome this great champion of the Philistines. Eliab, David's elder brother, was angry at David's eagerness. There was a time in the life of the Lord Jesus on earth when his own brothers wanted to take him and put him in confinement. Even our nearest friends and relatives do not always understand us, but God does. How blessed it is that we never have to explain anything to our Father in heaven. King Saul heard about this young son of Jesse; how he had returned from Bethlehem and was with the army in the valley of Elah, and he sent for David. When he came to Saul he was still overflowing with eagerness to rid the army of this boasting Philistines. David seemed to be always impelled by the words of his answer to his brother's derision: "Is there not a cause?" "Let no man's heart fail because of him," said David to the king; "Thy servant will go and fight this Philistine." Saul told him he was too young to fight one who was a man of war from his youth; then David told him of what he had done protecting his father's sheep from the lion and the bear. "The Lord delivered me out of the paw of the lion and of the bear, and he will deliver me out of the hand of him who has defied the armies of the living God." Saul consented that David should fight the giant, but he could not understand David's faith. Faith is spiritual, and the spiritual alone can discern it. Saul wanted to put his armour on David, knowing nothing of the whole armour of God. We have known from early childhood how this unique conflict ended, and the lesson is to-day as forcible as it has ever been, that no matter about the fearful odds that are against us, we are sure of victory if we battle in the strength of the Lord. David walked bravely to the fight, shouting to those around him and to all the world, "I will do this that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel, and that the Lord saveth not with sword or spear; for the battle is the Lord's."

In the daily conflicts we have, many giants will arise before us, and our courage flies away when we think of our weakness; but when we remember that Jesus said, "Lo I am with you always," then we know that "Faith is the victory that overcometh the world." There is a deliverance from Saul's darkness of soul, to David's light that comes from that Light that lighteth every man, and that light is from the Spirit that he has given us, so that we each may say with boldness, "In the Lord put I my trust."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

FEARFUL BURNING ITCHING

Relieved by Heiskell's Ointment

Eczema Quickly Cured

Even the old, stubborn cases of long standing, with their attendant aggravations—itching, burning skin, splotches and raw eruptions can be immediately relieved, finally and permanently cured by the regular use of Heiskell's Ointment.

The first application practically dries up the raw sores, instantly cools and soothes the skin and stops the irritating itch.

The hands should be washed in lukewarm water, carefully rinsed and dried, then Heiskell's Ointment applied, being gently rubbed in with the fingers. Fresh antiseptic bandages should be used after every application. One or two applications according to the above directions will produce a wonderfully grateful relief and improvement. Any kind of skin diseases and humors are amenable to Heiskell's Ointment. It readily soothes and heals where other preparations fail, and there is no skin disease, no matter how stubborn or long standing, not constitutional, that it will not cure. Its effectiveness is proven by the instant relief following its first employment.

In some cases it is necessary to give constitutional treatment with Heiskell's Blood and Liver Pills, as in eczema and erysipelas, to tone up the liver and purify the blood.

Cure is hastened in all skin diseases by frequently bathing the affected parts with Heiskell's Medicinal Soap and toning up the blood with Heiskell's Blood and Liver Pills. In mild skin disorders, such as rashes, eruptions, pimples, etc., Heiskell's Medicinal and Toilet Soap is particularly effective, and its constant use not only insures a delightfully clean and luxurious bath, but its medicinal qualities, those of the ointment in a mild form, will prevent many diseases and disorders that the skin is heir to.

Heiskell's preparations are free from injurious properties and can be safely employed, even upon the thinner skin of babies.

HOME COMPANION NOTES.

Doubly Useful Mucilage.

If you make your own mucilage (one heaping teaspoonful of gum arabic to an ordinary mucilage bottle gives it pure at a cheaper rate than that bought ready made), you can dispense with court plasters, liquid or otherwise, except where an antiseptic is necessary," says "Woman's Home Companion" for July. "Ordinary cuts can be coated with this quite as effectively as with the patent preparation. Two coats thoroughly dried will stand the application of water better than anything but the adhesive plaster doctors use—an inconvenient, expensive luxury."

How to Keep Water Cold.

"Having tried it, I recommend the following mode of keeping ice water for a long time in a common pitcher," says a writer in "Woman's Home Companion" for July. "Place between two sheets of thick brown paper a layer of cotton batting about half an inch in thickness; fasten the ends of the paper and batting together, forming a circle, then sew or paste a crown over one end, making a box the shape of a stovepipe hat, minus the rim. Place this over an ordinary pitcher filled with ice water, making it deep enough to rest on the table so as to exclude the air, and you will be astonished to see the length of time that the ice will keep and the water remain cold after all the ice has melted."

TURNING THE CORNER.

Gilbert stepped off the suburban train without his accustomed light-hearted briskness, and his face, usually so boyish and merry, looked grave and careworn. He was asking himself with terrible earnestness the old, tragic question that he had so often heard asked in jest, "Is marriage a failure?" He was almost ready to admit that in his case it was.

He had left May a half-hour earlier in a storm of angry tears, and had slammed with a vicious bang the door of his little home. As he trod the long platform of the great city railway station he could not remember how the quarrel had started. There had been many scenes of late, founded on trifling disagreements, and it was not strange that he could not recall the origin of the one that had sent him to his day's work this morning wretched and discouraged. Ringing in his ears were May's last words and his own bitter answer.

"Perhaps I had better take baby and go home to father and mother," she had said.

"Perhaps you had. We can't be any unhappier apart than we are together."

Suddenly he was aroused from his own gloomy thoughts by a heart-broken cry. Then he saw a baby girl struggling in the arms of a strong man, and he joined the crowd that was quickly gathered round them.

"I want my mamma! Don't take me 'way from my mamma!" the little thing sobbed. "I won't get on that train. I don't want to go 'way from mamma!" A young woman stood with white, grief-stricken face, silently wringing her hands, and the child reached out its arms to her in pathetic appeal.

"What's the matter, do you know?" asked Gilbert of the man nearest him.

"The parents of the little girl separated some time ago, and now it's the father's turn to have her. Her uncle has come for her, and she doesn't want to go. That's all."

Gilbert turned away with a sickening soreness of spirit. "A broken home," he murmured, "a blighted childhood—that's all."

Then, with a swift new light of resolution in his eyes, he drew a time-card from his pocket, and glancing at it, ran to the flower stand and hastily bought a box of roses and violets. In another moment he was swinging on the rear end of a moving train.

He told himself again and again on the little journey home that he had been selfish, exacting and inconsiderate. He tried to tell May so as he laid the flowers down in her lap, but she would not listen to him. She said, in a choking voice, that it was she who had been cross and irritable.

When a little later he started once again for his office, May and Baby Maisie waved until he had turned the corner. He smiled contentedly as he paused an instant, and then hurrying toward his train, said with happy whimsicality:

"May and I have turned the corner."—Youth's Companion.

LONG IN COMING.

A missionary to the South Seas was on one occasion reading the third chapter of St. John when he was interrupted by one of the islanders.

"What words were those? Let me hear those words again."

They were read once more: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life."

The man rose and excitedly demanded: "Is that true? Can that be true? God so love the world when the world would not love him? God so love the world as to give his Son to die? Can that be true?"

The verse was read again and again, and the wondering native burst in tears as the realization broke over him.

The last to speak was an old man with wild, excited movements. * * * After finishing one speech, he said: "Missionary, may I say more?"

"Talk on," I said. "I am here now to listen."

"You say 'Notawehan' (our Father) is your Father?"

"Yes, he is my Father."

"Does it mean that he is my Father—this poor Indian's Father?"

"Yes," I exclaimed, "he is your Father, too."

"Your Father—missionary's Father—and Indian's Father, too?" he repeated.

"Yes, that is true," I answered.

"Then, we are brothers?" he almost shouted out.

"Yes, we are brothers," I replied.

"May I say more?"

"Yes, say on."

"Well, I do not want to be rude, but it does seem to me that you, my white brother, have been a long time in coming with that great Book with its wonderful story to tell it to your red brothers in the woods."—Exchange.

Glances at the World.

There are moneyed companies that will insure almost anything—one especially it is said that "will write a policy on anything from a presidential election to the safeguarding of an automobile race course." This company was applied to by a New York firm to write a policy, insuring the firm against loss on a large consignment of a new style of women's dresses. The new style, of course, is from Paris, and is called the "sheath gown," which, if we understand, is economical in the use of materials, making it fit closely, and is split on one side from the bottom to a little above the knee. This gown appeared for the first time in New Orleans on Monday, the 3rd of August. To the surprise of the importing merchants their application for insurance against loss on the "sheath gown" was turned down, the insurance company evidently believing that a gown so immodest could never be made popular with the women of the United States. This refusal on the part of sensible, practical men should be a hint to sensible women to let the "sheath gown" alone. But will it? Some actresses and a few of the "smart set" will wear it, but the great majority will decline. The "sheath gown" will not become popular.

When there seemed to be a chance to whip the parishes of Louisiana into continued support of the liquor traffic there was established in New Orleans a Southern Intelligence Bureau. Mr. Sidney Story, a man much above the ordinary in intelligence, and with an excellent command of language, was put in charge of the Bureau. He immediately organized a campaign, and conducted it vigorously in two parishes against the Anti-Saloon League. With all his work, aided by an imported talker from Texas, and the free use of money, the Southern Intelligence Bureau was defeated. The next parishes to be attacked by the Anti-Saloon League were neglected by Mr. Story and his allies, and the prohibitionists had everything their own way. Now Mr. Story announces that "the anti-prohibition campaign is at an end so far as the Southern Intelligence Bureau is concerned." He advises the saloon men of the State to obey the new law regulating the whisky business, and tells them that obedience to the law "will allay public prejudice against the liquor traffic." Mr. Story may know something of the men whose lives are governed by the dollar mark, and whose ambition is to conduct a jug-trade in prohibition territory, but he knows absolutely nothing of men and women who are fighting the common enemy of our country. Good conduct on the part of a liquor seller does not make his traffic any better. It does not change the evil nature of his liquor. So long as men deal in the evil so long will good men and women fight it.

One J. T. Cherry, of Kentucky, has taken the great editor, Mr. Henry Watterson to task for some of his nice (?) sayings in regard to prohibition and prohibitionists. And this Mr. Cherry is a preacher—one of the men characterized by Mr. Watterson as "moral idiots," "hypocrites," and "red-nosed angels." Mr. Watterson prides himself on being a "Jeffersonian Democrat," and boldly declares that "no man can be a prohibitionist and remain a Democrat." But this "moral idiot" shows Mr. Watterson that Jefferson "believed not only in legal, but also in applied prohibition." He quotes from one of his messages to Congress as follows: "We recommend to the several State legislatures immediately to pass laws putting an immediate stop to the pernicious practice of distilling, by which the most exclusive evils are likely to be derived, if not quickly prevented." That is Jeffersonian Democracy! Again he quotes Mr. Jefferson as saying: "The habit of using ardent spirits by men in office has occasioned more injury to the public, and more trouble to me than all other causes. Were I to commence my administration again the first question I would ask respecting a candidate for office would be, does he use ardent spirits?" Surely, Mr. Jefferson was not so much attached to "personal liberty" for liquor drinkers and liquor makers and sellers, as so many of the politicians of the present day.

In regard to the peril of secularizing the schools the Christian Intelligencer writes as follows: "At the recent Pan-Anglican Conference there was much in evidence from different quarters of the world regarding the results of purely secular education. France, Victoria, the United States and other countries were referred to by various speakers, who were in perfect agreement, based upon personal knowledge, that 'the nation which secularizes the education of its children does so at its peril.' The Rev. E. A. David, formerly Archdeacon of Brisbane, did not hesitate to assert that 'the secularization in the educational system of three important States of the Commonwealth unquestionably constituted a serious menace to the well-being of Australia.' And as regards New Zealand, the Bishop of Aukland testified to the development of juvenile crime, and added that unless a change were soon made, the country would find that 'character could not be built satisfactorily where the fear of God was not an element of the daily life.'" In this connection it is not out of place to say that the purpose of Mr. Carnegie's gift of millions for the pension of aged school teachers is declared to be the secularizing of education—that is, as far as it can be done by getting the work out of the control of the churches. Professors in church schools are barred. And, shame to say, for the sake of this money, some would take church schools from the control of its rightful owners, and turn them over to undenominational boards of trustees. We did not know until recently how completely commercialized is the spirit of the age. If the churches and church schools cannot resist it, what can we expect of schools inaugurated and conducted solely in the interest of secular education?

The great corporations of the country, employing hundreds of thousands of men, seem determined to break up the drinking habits of their employes. This is not the result of a temperance or prohibition fever, but of a cool business calculation. Men who employ labor, skilled and unskilled, know the difference between the value of the services of the man who drinks and the one who does not; and if under labor union rules they can work their men only so many hours a day, and pay every man in a given class the same wages, they see it is a losing proposition to pay a drinking man who does less work the same amount that is paid the non-drinking man who does more and better work. Their observation is that the man who drinks Saturday night and Sunday is incompetent to do the best work on Monday. Hence, many firms and corporations have given their men the alternative of quitting liquor both when on and off duty, or quitting their jobs. These corporations, it is said, do not require their men to sign any pledge, nor to take any kind of oath, nor to wear any sort of badge. "Instead of these, there is the terse order, If you drink you lose your job." Employes ought not to wait for such orders, for in times of depression in business they are the first to suffer. Some months ago one of the leading roads found it necessary to reduce its force, and the order was issued to "lay off the drinking men, regardless of the time they had been in the employ of the company." One great corporation employing many thousand men pays no attention to its unskilled laborers, numbering ten thousand, but requires the office men and skilled laborers to let liquor alone, even when off duty. The great American Express Company has joined in the movement, declaring that almost every defalcation has its beginning in drinking. Thus it goes, and the movement against liquor drinking is likely to become general. The churches and temperance organizations are not likely to enter protest because these corporations base their action on economical business principles rather than on the fact that drink and the drink traffic are moral evils. The men driven by business orders to quit drinking will soon see the evil, and be glad they were ever forced to let liquor alone.

THE "ORIGINAL SIN" PROBLEM NOT YET SOLVED.

BY REV. D. M. GEDDIE.

No. 5.

Bearing on the thought discussed in my last paper, Dr. Mahon, on page 335 of the Review, says: "Man is accountable and responsible for the sin of his nature, although he has freed [illegible] of will and approves this nature, because he has power in himself sufficient to resist and overcome this sinful nature, not because he is endowed with the power of choice. He may choose the remedy provided for his healing and recovery and live forever, or he may reject it and let sin do its eternal work of damnation." Again I ask, where did Dr. Mahon get that? Where is it written that man is endowed with the power of choice to choose the remedy provided for his healing from the "disease" of "original sin"? I have read somewhere language like the following: "Much more the grace of God, and the gift which is by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many. And even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life"; but I did not read that man is endowed with power to choose the remedy provided for his recovery from the "sin of his nature." Where does Dr. Mahon find it? Will he please tell us? The writer had been under the impression that man's power of choice is one of the moral results of his recovery from the condemnation of Adam's sin through the atonement of Jesus Christ. It is this "healing" from "original sin" that invests him with the right and power of choice. The power of choice is not given that we may choose the remedy provided for our "healing and recovery from original sin," but that we may choose Christ as our personal Savior from actual transgression and "receive abundance of grace and reign in life by one, Jesus Christ."

But Dr. Mahon tells us plainly on page 33[illegible] that infants are saved from "original sin," and appeals to St. Paul for "comfortable assurance." If saved, why do they have to choose the remedy in order to be saved? If saved, then they are not lost; or, if lost, then they are not saved. The one naturally and necessarily excludes the other. Certainly they do not have to be saved twice from the guilt of Adam's sin. Certainly God does not save them unconditionally by his own free mercy, and then turn around and impute their guilt to them again that they may be saved from it by their own voluntary choice.

Possibly Dr. Mahon means that all infants that die in infancy are saved unconditionally, but that those that live will or will not be saved by their own voluntary choice in accepting or rejecting the atonement provided for their salvation. That is much more consistent, and has the support of many able and eminent authorities; but it is utterly lacking in Bible authority. What the Bible affirms of the salvation of one infant it affirms of all. No distinction is there made between those that die in infancy and those that live. The free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. All who were condemned through Adam's sin were saved through Christ's atonement. All were saved from Adam's sin unconditionally, that all might have a chance to be saved conditionally from their own actual voluntary sins. That is made very plain by the following declaration of the great Apostle to the Gentiles: "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound: That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord." As before stated, salvation from "original sin" is the precedent, and a choice of Christ and life and heaven is the subsequent. Man's free moral agency follows his salvation from "original sin" as effect follows cause.

When our Lord selected the highest type he could find on earth of religious greatness to illustrate to his disciples the greatest greatness in his kingdom he did not take a Nathanael, "an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile," but he took "a little child and set him in the midst of them and said, Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." The most remarkable thing about this is not that he selected one little child as a type of the greatest greatness in his kingdom, but that he selected this little child as a type and sample of all little children, and made them all types of the greatest greatness in his Church. If they had been under the condemnation and guilt of "original sin" and forced by their nature to live in sin, certainly the Master would not have used them for such a purpose. And if only those children dying in infancy are in an unconditionally saved relation to God from Adam's sin, he would most surely have excluded those that live and are conditionally saved from it. Instead of saying, "Except ye be converted and become as little children," he would have said, "Except ye be converted and become as the little children that die in infancy ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." But he made no such distinction, and we have not the least authority for making it.

Where, then, does man's responsibility and accountability for Adam's sin come in? They simply do not come in. There is not a syllable in the Bible that holds any man responsible and accountable for "original sin." The imputation of the guilt of Adam's sin is put by the Bible in the past tense, and our redemption from it is also put in the past tense. Only as that redemption is related to the resurrection of the body is it ever referred to in the present or future tense. The salvation from the condemnation and guilt of Adam's sin is an accomplished fact. Get [illegible] Bible and examine it and see and know for yourself. Whatever moral weakness or bias toward [illegible] may inherit, the condemnation, the guilt, the death spiritual, have been removed. Just as that condemnation was visited upon us without any knowledge, will or choice of our own, so it is by the atonement of Christ removed from us without any knowledge, will or choice of our own. Adam and Christ are everywhere in the New Testament Scriptures placed in broad and positive antithesis to each other. What was done by Adam was undone by Christ. The adult, therefore, sustains only two relations to original sin. The first of these is his responsibility for the continuance of his saved relation from it. But even that can only be held as a technical theory in speculative theology, marking the line that distinguishes the unaccountability of the infant from the accountability of the adult. As a matter of fact, our saved relation from "original sin" cannot be forfeited. From that we are unconditionally and eternally saved. We can sin and be lost in hell for rejecting offered pardon from our own guilt; but no man will ever go to hell for rejecting offered pardon from the guilt of Adam's sin, or for his forfeiture of his pardon from it. When salvation from "original sin" as it effects the body shall have been accomplished in the resurrection, the man in hell will be as truly saved from it as will be the man in heaven. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

The other point of contact with original sin is the weakness or bias toward sin which it leaves in the moral nature. This is somewhat metaphysical, and difficult of explanation, and yet not harder to understand and appreciate than many things with which we are perfectly familiar. A serious case of pneumonia is often thoroughly cured. The disease, as such, is all driven out of the system, but the constitution has been impaired. It has left its scars on the lungs, and there is greater liability to disease than before the man had pneumonia. So does sin, whether transmitted by natural generation or personally and voluntarily committed, leave its scars on the moral nature, and a greater liability to sin than there would have been had no sin have been committed. This weakness, liability or a bias toward sin is increased with every sin committed or with every repetition of the same sin. All persons who have been habitual sinners find it harder for them to live Christian lives than do those who have been Christians from their youth. And as other parents than Adam transmit moral weakness, liability, or a bias toward sin, the strength of the bias transmitted by Adam cannot be determined. And the natural bias toward sin varies in its strength with the children of different parents for the reason that some parents have more moral weakness to transmit than do other parents, and one child in the same family receives by birth a stronger tendency toward sin than does another. But possibly no child has ever been born into this world since Adam's immediate descendents without any bias toward sin except that thransmitted by Adam. Hence man has a greater bias toward sin to deal with than that received from Adam. If it could be reduced to the bias of "original sin" we would have a much easier time bringing up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord and in living correct lives ourselves. And it is in this bias toward sin, transmitted and self-induced by practical, voluntary sin, as the writer believes, that we find the broadest, highest, most logical and Scriptural basis for the doctrine of sanctification, whether by the instantaneous second blessing theory, or by the gradual and progressive theory. Sanctification is not salvation from sin and guilt, but salvation from the moral weaknesses and tendencies toward sin. It is the infilling and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Hence it may be obtained by either method. And a work of grace so wrought may be just as radical and far-reaching in its effects upon practical Christian living, and in its spiritual heritage, as are justification and regeneration. This was certainly the case with the apostles and disciples on the day of Pentecost. But as sanctification is not the question in discussion, I will here drop it by asking the reader to pardon me for introducing the matter in this connection. Too much has already been controversially said on this great Bible doctrine.

Verona, Miss.

THE PASTOR IN THE REVIVAL.

BY REV. D. W. BABB.

What part does the pastor play in the revival? We answer: The most important of any other human agency. The pastor, who is the shepherd, the leader of the people, and has the care of souls, not at a distance, but in his own parish, can have no second place in the revival on his own work. On entering the study of those committed to his care, whatever he sees in the way of trouble to hinder a growth in grace in their hearts, at once he sets to work to remove. The kind of sin it is, brings about a decision in his mind as to the means to be used. It may be by preaching against the sin and nothing else. It may be by visiting and holding prayers with the families. It may be by visiting and distributing literature against sin; or it may be by secret prayer alone, or it may be by the use of all these means. It is the pastor who is doing this work from a sense of his duty before God, and interest for souls. All of this converging to one point, and that is a revival, or getting his people on a higher plane. This may precede a revival a long while, or it may be but a short time. The seed must be sown, and they are sown by the pastor if he is the Lord's minister.

The pastor sets the time for bringing all the elements together for a given purpose, that is: to engage in a series of services to result in a genuine revival of God's people and an ingathering of new-born souls. If his physical strength will admit of it, and he has reasonable tact (which comes from some experience) I believe it is better for the pastor to do the preaching for two reasons. First, he knows what the people need, and can preach direct without experimenting to find out what they need. Secondly, he can work his church better than any one else. They know their shepherd's voice, and are more ready to co-operate with him than any one else. The pastor can better succeed in getting more people to work in public, leading in public prayer, talking to the unconverted, committing themselves to the erection of family altars, the taking of religious papers and starting out anew in prayer meetings, and in Sunday School work than any one else. And I think the experience of the older preachers who have tried it for ten weeks or more at a time will vindicate this position.

I know of some pastors who are holding their meetings for the above reasons, and my observation is that all departments of church work receive more vitality and the work abides better where the pastor is the leading instrument in the revival. If the pastor has to secure ministerial help in his revivals, let him never surrender his place as pastor. The meeting should be in his hands, as to its conduct in all important particulars, and this may include the kind of preaching, since some have been imposed upon by heresies and fanaticisms. However, there is not much danger of this just now.

The preacher who assists another brother is always an assistant in the meeting, though the Lord may bless his labors to the good of the people ever so much. I have heard so many preachers say, "I held a meeting for Brother H." This should never be said unless Brother H. was not there, and then it would be an unenviable task, unless Brother H. was sick. I never go to hold a meeting for a brother, unless he is providentially hindered from being there, but to assist. As a rule, it is a bad practice to depend on other preachers to do our preaching in our revivals.

First, we need the experience ourselves in this class of work, and unless we swap work with each other, which may be done with propriety in many cases, we fail to cultivate the revival talent which is necessary to the pastor's success. Furthermore, it discounts his ability, and is a false education of his people. They get to think no revival can be had unless some expert manipulator comes in with the sound of trumpets, using much wind, and who, as a rule, blows in and blows out. Whereas, if the people were trained to help their own pastor in [illegible] their pastor preached [illegible] and God would bless his labors [illegible] their cooperation, we would soon [illegible] life that would abide, and [illegible] know at the end of a revival [illegible] and that God was still [illegible] and their pastor, too, who led them [illegible] was there to continue the work [illegible] them.

I give it as my deliberate [illegible] thirty-four years in the [illegible] that the pastor occupies the most important place of any one in promoting a revival in his own work.

A VISIT TO "OLD ADAMS" CAMP-GROUND.

Dear ADVOCATE: On Saturday, the 25th, I drove from my home in Fernwood to Adams Church, accompanied by my wife and our two boys. I stopped at the home of Brother J. Enoch Carruth for a few hours, dinner being included, and enjoyed the time spent with my dear brother and his family. We left Brother Carruth's about 3 o'clock and went down to the church to attend a gathering of the laymen who met there from the three charges — Johnston, Ebenezer, and Adams.

This meeting was a success, the Spirit being present and taking hold upon the audience. Bro. J. P. Carruth is the church leader—Laymen's Missionary Movement—in Adams Charge, while Brothers King and Sample are the leaders of Johnston and Ebenezer Churches, respectively. The writer was to have addressed the meeting at length, but on account of the character of the meeting, we soon decided that it would be best to confine ourselves, at this meeting, to a few of the essential features of the movement, and discuss together the things that must be done along the line of organization, etc. After the discussion, all seemed to have been benefited, in fact the leaders were unanimous in stating that each church will produce the additional amount, above their assessment, for foreign missions for 1908, to make up their proportion of the "ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS."

The writer does not wish to be understood as putting money above religion, but he does consider that liberal contributions are a good sign of spiritual life in any church. We expect great things from the Laymen's Missionary Movement in dear old Adams Charge, and why not, have they ever done anything there on a small scale?

On Sunday morning the Sunday School held their Children's Day Service. The weather was threatening, in fact had several showers during the morning, and the people were late gathering, thus delaying the programme until 11:30 o'clock.

The children were well drilled, and very sincere and earnest in the performance of every duty; the singing, recitations, marching, and in fact the entire service was perfect in every detail.

The meeting at the conclusion of the programme was turned over to the writer and the privilege extended him, by the pastor, to talk as long as he wanted to speak; however, the children's service had made a very deep impression on me and I had reason to believe that the grand sermons presented by the children had taken root in many hearts in the audience, therefore it occurred to me that it would not be the proper thing for me to present the laymen's cause at this hour, consequently, we took advantage of the opportunity of supplementing a few remarks along the line which had been laid out by the children's sermons. We always delight in being in a meeting in which the children are active, realizing that the children of today will be the men and women of tomorrow. So we take pleasure in assisting in making them stronger and better men and women than we of the present generation. [illegible] the result being that many were blessed.

There were ten children to unite with the church, eight of whom received baptism; all were very much affected and undoubtedly were converted. How easy it is for children whose parents are Christians to accept salvation. Parents should be very careful lest they, without knowing it, stand between their children and salvation.

We made another appointment with the laymen of the church and expect to return to them during their protracted meeting in September.

We love old Adams and her people, in fact, there are ties that bind us to that church which time cannot erase. We pray God's richest blessings upon the dear children who united with the church; those who took part in Children's Day programme, and also upon all children in the community, including those up to one hundred years old.

We had the pleasure of spending Saturday night with our old neighbors and Christian friends, J. D. King and family; this was a treat to us which we enjoyed to the greatest extent. Mrs. King had charge of the children during the Children's Day programme exercises, discharging her duties in an unassuming manner, as is characteristic with her.

It was our privilege for a long time to be associated with the King family in Sunday School work, during which time we learned to love them and fully appreciate their worth in all Christian work.

ARCADIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Thirty lay-delegates were in attendance, besides a good number of other laymen not delegates. [illegible] District Lay Leader [illegible] one afternoon was devoted to the discussion of the Layman's Movement, a programme having been skillfully prepared by N. R. Grigsby, District Leader. The [illegible] enthusiastic and practical results may be expected.

The two-day sessions of the Conference, including the hour for morning preaching, occupied nearly all of the [illegible], the result being the completion of all work and adjournment by noon of the third day.

President Weber fruitfully presented Centenary College and Christian education, and took part in the Layman's Programme.

President Dean was unable to attend on account of sickness, but the claims of the college were presented and H. W. Bowman will represent the school during the month of August.

When the Conference adjourned, we were still looking for Dr. Sawyer, Brothers Chalmers and Wier to represent their respective interests, and it is much to be regretted if they arrived too late.

Sermons were preached by Brothers Nelson, Henderson, Humphries, Holliday and McDonald.

A memorial was addressed to the Annual Conference, requesting the report and publication of separate statistics for the individual church on each Circuit.

The report of the Committee on the Spiritual State of the Church, based on the reports of the Charges, shows that there has been marked improvement. Though few protracted meetings have yet been held, there were reported three hundred and ninety-five accessions this present year.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: R. T. McClendon, N. R. Grigsby, P. K. Abel, and J. T. Otts, with J. M. Miller and A. Driggers, alternates.

The next Conference will be held at Haynesville. Bienville was the seat of this year's session, and the hospitality of the people was bountiful.

Thomas S. Randle, Jr., was licensed to preach.

The committee appointed last year to locate the District parsonage reported that a splendid property had been purchased in Ruston.

The following resolutions were passed:

Whereas, Our Presiding Elder, Rev. Briscoe Carter, is serving our District for the fourth year and cannot be reappointed, and whereas, the District has greatly prospered under his administration, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, at this time, express our appreciation of his tireless energy and practical intelligence which he has devoted with [illegible] to the upbuilding of the interests of the church in this District.

Resolved, That we truly appreciate the rare spirit of sympathetic brotherliness which he has uniformly exhibited in his relations with both pastors and laity.

Resolved, That we sincerely regret the necessity of his separation from us, while we affectionately commend him to those among whom he will providentially labor in future.

MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Conference met in the First Methodist Church, Monroe, La., July 7, 1908. The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by Rev. J. E. Densen, Presiding Elder, commenting on Ex. [illegible].

All the preachers of the District were present save one, but owing to the busy season of the year, the attendance of laymen was not large. The reports of the preachers showed a steady advance along nearly all lines, and there is every indication that fine reports will be made at the Annual Conference. The spirit of the Conference was bright and the outlook hopeful.

Able and forceful sermons were preached with [illegible] fired with zeal for the Master by Brothers Hatfield, Roberts, Sloane, Sawyer, May and [illegible].

Brother E. M. Maylock, [illegible] in the Winnsboro charge, was licensed to preach.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: E. M. Maylock, W. [illegible], J. J. Johnson, A. R. Wimberly; and [illegible] W. Freshman and S. D. Rinehart were elected alternates.

Brother R. E. Bonny, a delegate to the Laymen's Missionary Convention at Chattanooga, Tenn., addressed the Conference and spoke of the enthusiasm and earnestness of the laymen in this wonderful movement for the cause of Christ.

The District was organized with Brother S. [illegible], of [illegible], La., District Leader. All who know him can testify that his heart is in the work. We are expecting great things of the laymen of the District under his wise leadership.

Mrs. Carr, District Secretary of the W. H. M. Society, of Oak Ridge, addressed the Conference, her report showing gratifying results in this department of church work. Miss Mollie Higginbotham, of Oak Ridge, read the report of Mrs. J. M. Keller, District Secretary of the W. F. M. Society.

The next session of the District Conference goes to Oak Ridge.

By a unanimous vote of the Conference, the report on missions, by Rev. J. R. Moore, of Lake Providence, La., was requested to be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The hospitality of Monroe in entertainment of the Conference was generous, every one being made to feel that it was good to be there.

J. J. KELLY, Secretary.

MISSIONARY REPORT READ BY REV. J. R. MOORE.

The spirit of missions is the spirit of Christ. Christ was essentially a missionary. He came as a missionary from heaven to earth. The spirit with which Christ came must be the spirit with which we go. If it was necessary for Christ to [illegible], it is necessary for us [illegible]. Christ [illegible] suffered [illegible]. This is Christianity. Anything else falls short of reality. Mere ecclesiasticism is [illegible] except as a reformative agency, but reformation is not regeneration, and "except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." What the world needs is Christ and not a [illegible] creed. The Church exists not [illegible]. [illegible] Nothing else is [illegible]. When the missionary spirit is dominant every [illegible]. When the [illegible] every other [illegible] cause [illegible]. We may build fine churches out of mere [illegible] pride. [illegible] the brotherhood of man becomes a reality, and the desire for the extension of the kingdom of Christ finds expression in our lives. When the sermons in the pulpit come from [illegible]. Until we learn that the supreme need of man is Christ and that the supreme end [illegible] Christ. We have [illegible] the church can never prosper until it meets the [illegible]. We must evangelize [illegible]. We must [illegible] life. This Delta country can be saved only by the spirit of Christ. Until the missionary spirit is implanted all our efforts will be vain. Worldliness will increase unto more ungodliness, and which will eat as doth a canker. Therefore,

Resolved, That we recognize that the first duty of the ministry is to be missionaries, and the next is to so preach the gospel that the missionary obligation shall be laid upon the consciences of all of our people. We rejoice at the increased activity of our Conference in the home field. We realize that here we have a problem that commands our best thought, a field that will tax our resources to their utmost, and a work that nothing but faith in God and the consecration of our lives can accomplish.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference for the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, was held July 22-24 in the hospitable little town of Florence, Miss. With few exceptions, the pastors of the District answered to roll call or appeared at a later period of the Conference. A fairly good showing was made by the lay delegates and other interested laymen. The local attendance was good. Several visiting brethren dropped in from time to time, among these Rev. George H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, and Brother Bachman, our Colporter.

In most respects the tidings from the field were hopeful and encouraging. The pastors, without exception, gave evidence of having been diligently at work in their several charges.

It was the good fortune of the Conference to have Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Missionary Secretary, in attendance. Dr. Lambuth's several addresses were a most important feature of the programme. It is confidently expected that his coming to us will bear much fruit in the way of missionary zeal and effort.

The Conference laid much emphasis upon the Laymen's Movement, Judge A. G. Norrell, Annual Conference Leader, making a strong address and a forceful appeal in behalf of the Movement. The address of Judge Norrell was followed by stirring words from Dr. Lambuth and others. Brother J. E. B. Blewett was elected Leader for the District, and it was urged that [illegible] organization be effected throughout the pastoral charges of the District.

[illegible] of Florence [illegible], William N. Thomas, Henry [illegible] G. Allen, Joseph S. Terry and George G. Yeager, were licensed to preach.

Judge A. G. Norrell, Maj. R. W. Millsaps, J. [illegible] Cavett and W. F. Hilton were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

The preaching hours were occupied by Dr. Lambuth, Dr. R. F. Jones, Rev. C. W. Crisler and Rev. H. M. Ellis.

Rev. Robert Selby, Conference Secretary of [illegible], favored the Conference with a strong presentation of the cause of education.

The Rev. W. L. Hightower, of the Joint Board of Finance, made an earnest appeal in behalf of the Conference Claimants.

The Manager of the Orphans' Home at Jackson, Rev. W. M. Williams, gave an interesting account of the condition and the needs of the institution of which he has charge.

The Conference passed a unanimous and most hearty resolution of thanks to the pastor and people of Florence for the royal entertainment provided.

The following resolutions touching the administration of Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., Presiding Elder, were adopted:

Whereas, with the close of this Conference, the Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., will have completed a quadrennium of service as presiding elder of the Jackson District, Mississippi Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, therefore be it Resolved, By the members of this District Conference, that we hereby express our very high appreciation of the faithful, painstaking and [illegible] efficient service of Dr. Watkins. By his fair and impartial administration of the affairs of the District he has endeared himself both to the ministry and to the laity as a faithful minister of the gospel of our Lord, and as a competent and efficient presiding officer.

Resolved, That as he leaves us to go to another field of labor, our very best wishes and earnest prayers attend him.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Mendenhall.

PEN POINTS.

If people are purely sincere and are right in their purposes, we can well afford to bear with their mistakes or any shortcomings that have just naturally grown out of a lack of opportunities for improvement.

There are some people who evidently would like to see their enemies dead. But the question is, how would they like for their enemies to see themselves in that condition? "Judge not," that is, with malice or ill-will.

Some people, evidently in revival meetings particularly, are warmed in such a sense as to get into a particularly hard condition afterwards. Like taking a piece of iron and making it very hot, and then suddenly cooling it in water—it becomes very hard.

She was milking a cow near the street, and in words, was showing some pretty bad temper. Seeing a dignified old preacher passing along, she began suddenly to sing a good song; and he said: "You are in a poor condition to sing now."

It has been a source of the deepest mortification to me for many years to see children and young people leaving the Church after the Sunday School exercises are over not to return for preaching. The fault rests mainly with parents, evidently.

It is said that the mind retains negatives of things that have fallen within the compass of ones observation. For instance, old people can, with their mind's eye, see the dear old home and its surroundings, the house, the orchard, the garden, the barn, everything as it was when they were children.

One says, "I belong to the Holiness Church." Why not have a Humility Church, or a Meekness Church, for instance. The Apostle Paul and the other Apostles were in the lead in the Church that includes all the Christian graces, the Church of which Christ is the head.

Think carefully about that doctrine of "leaving matters to the realm of individual judgment and conscience," for you are in danger of getting eventually and hopelessly wound up in the toils of the adversary. God's Word fixes the standard for all, and a good conscience is in harmony therewith. Conscience, in general, is an extremely elastic thing.

He was a professional man. One day he came riding up the street handsomely dressed in an elegant turnout, with a horse to match. A preacher met him, and, after engaging him some time in conversation, asked: "How is your Church getting on?" He replied: "Very well, and I am taking a good deal of interest now myself, as we have a preacher that I like." Oh, me!

What an outrage it is for people to do a mean thing and then lay the blame off on others! Someone has said, by way of illustration of this, that "some people are like my pet pig—he will go and wallow in the mud, and then come up and rub it off on me."

He makes his boast that he is honest and believes in anyone doing what he promises; yet he does not pay his Church dues and attend upon God's ordinances; and his preacher asks: "Why, then, do you not do what you promised about the Church?" He just grins for an answer.

Mr. Wesley had three rules in regard to finance. They are: "1. Make all you can. 2. Save all you can. 3. Give all you can." Many make great efforts to carry out the first two, but there are evidently very few, indeed, that strive to comply with the last one, it requiring too much self-denial.

Poor boy! He dropped a block on his foot; it was not thought of as serious at all at first, but it led to his death. I was in the room and saw death strike him suddenly, as distinct a thing as I ever saw. Right at the last moment he said, "O papa, my foot hurts me so!"

The planet Neptune was discovered through the study of the planet Uranus; it is 2,800,000,000 miles from the sun, and is absolutely invisible to the natural eye. This discovery is said to have been one of the grandest mental achievements that has ever been made. It has a diameter of 35,000 miles, more than four times that of the earth.

BOOK NOTICE.

THE WAY OF SALVATION, by Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of the North Mississippi Conference, is a neat, vigorous pamphlet of 34 pages on the process and progress of the work of personal salvation from sin from its incipiency in conviction for sin to its completion in purity of heart and life. Brother Lagrone views the subject from the Arminian standpoint. This point of view has the advantage of all other points of view in being the most Scriptural, most logical and psycological. The writer or the printer made a slip on page 15, third line from the bottom, and got the word "consecration" where the word "conviction" ought to have been. The Arminian order is: Conviction, repentance, faith, justification, regeneration, adoption, consecration, sanctification, perfection. The Calvinistic order is: Regeneration, conviction, repentance, faith, adoption, consecration, sanctification and assurance of faith. Man is morally impotent until born again. Young men would do well to read this tract in connection with the Wesleyan standards. They may not agree with every position taken, but this will tend to stir thought and provoke investigation.

Yours, GILDEROY.

I have just read this pamphlet of 34 pages. This subject has been one of interest to me for nearly fifty years. I have read everything I could find on this subject, not excepting Dr. Brooks, and I consider this the best I have seen. I find it to be in keeping with the Bible, common sense and my own experience.

Brother Geddie has written some very interesting articles on the state of infants. I have discovered but one dead fly in the ointment. This, I believe, was in his second article, in which he says: "The child is as much inclined to good as to evil." I do not think this contention can be supported by the Bible, history or human experience. With this single exception I can endorse all he has said on the subject. Our brethren would do well to send for Brother Lagrone's pamphlet, which they can get for ten cents per copy.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

The new Methodist Church at Fayette, Miss., will be formally dedicated to the worship of God on the first Sunday in September, at 11 a. m. Rev. W. B. Murrah, D.D., president of Millsaps, has been engaged to preach the sermon. All former pastors of the church are hereby cordially invited to be present.

This church was built in [illegible] during the pastorate of Rev. W. H. Saunders, at a cost of [illegible]. It is modern in plan, architecture, etc., and is one of the most beautiful little churches that I know anything about. During this year it has been relieved of all indebtedness, and is now ready for its formal consecration to the worship of God.

"What [illegible] is, that we [illegible] Work-Day [illegible] $827. [illegible] given the appeal [illegible] Orphanage. We [illegible] engage in our [illegible] since we have [illegible] help from [illegible] emergency."

This [illegible] people, and we [illegible].

I am [illegible] "Work-Day Offering" a great success. I have set apart Sept. 22 as [illegible]. I hope on that day to materialize no less than $2,500. This will pay for the heating [illegible]. Brethren, this has been a [illegible] everybody. Won't you ask everybody to help us one day?

Two years ago it was not seriously expected that the Louisiana Orphanage would be one of the best in the connection by anybody but the agent. He heard his brethren chuckle over the idea. Now what a change! The presiding elder of the Arcadia District announces that it is to be one of the best. Now, won't you help make "Work-Day" materialize for less than $2,500? This will pay for the heating plant.

North Georgia realizes $10,000 annually.

Brethren of the ministry, Sunday School Superintendents, laymen, help us.

During the month of July twenty children were turned away from our temporary home. Somebody should awaken besides the agent. May be some other presiding elder will unite and urge the pushing on of "Work-Day." If "Work-Day" is a success it will mean much! Every time a man works that day, and knows it is for the heating plant at the Orphanage, and may feel that he is helping warm the orphan child.

BROTHER BOYD ANSWERED.

Dear ADVOCATE: I noticed in the issue of June 18 a question asked by Brother T. M. Boyd. He wants to know the difference between "a sinner that does not claim to be a Christian and a Christian that claims to sin every day." That is a capital question and I have wondered why some preacher-brother has not answered it. I will try to answer it myself.

Brother Boyd says he does not see how a Christian can sin every day, and refers us to I John ii. 1, which reads: "My little children, these things write I unto you that ye sin not; and if any man sin we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

The scripture he gave proves that we sin, and that is the question that bothers a great many. I John i. 8 reads like this: "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." This proves that we sin; but I will give another passage that seems to contradict it, I John iii. 9: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God."

What does John mean? He says, "If we say we have no sin we are liars," and the same John says, "If we are born of God we can't sin." The Spirit of Christ that is in us does not sin, but our flesh does—that is the difference between the two passages. John i. 8: Our flesh does sin. John iii. 9: The Spirit of Christ that is in us cannot sin.

Brother Boyd says he believes it is our privilege to live above sin by the help of Christ, being obedient to his will. If we live above sin we are better than Paul. He says (Romans vii. 24-25): "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin." That is what Paul says, and God inspired him to write several books of the New Testament. Paul felt wretched because he could see his sins.

Paul says: "I delight in the law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin, which is in my members." Rom. vii. 22, 23. Romans vi. 18: "Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness."

How are we free from sin? Our heart is free from sin, as St. Paul terms it, our mind—that is, the mind of the Spirit. St. John v. 24: "Christ said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." When Paul was committing so many sins he had already passed from death unto life.

The brother says, "To teach people that they will sin is one of the worst beliefs and doing more to damn the souls of men than any other doctrine." We differ there. I think it is the worst thing we can do to tell sinners we don't sin, for they know we do.

But we should be careful how we walk in this life. Colossians iii. 5: "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth;" and it tells us what we should not do, not in order to be saved, but because we are saved. Colossians iii. 3: "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." How are we dead? We are dead to sin. That is the mind of the Spirit—our lives are [illegible]. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

DR. JAMES A. MOORE AND JUDGE JOHN R. ENOCHS.

Whereas God, in his allwise but inscrutable providence has allowed death to take from us our brethren, Prof. James A. Moore and Judge John R. Enochs, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to his will, we recognize that our church has lost two of its most earnest and efficient workers, and the communities where they lived are [illegible] of their most valued citizens.

In Prof. Moore we have lost an educator of [illegible] who impressed the students of Millsaps College by his careful and painstaking [illegible] highly moral and religious [illegible]. His place will be hard to fill, and yet his influence will remain long among those who knew him as a teacher, neighbor or friend.

Resolved, That to his children we extend our deepest sympathy in their double loss (for the [illegible] was soon called to join the father) and commend them to the care of Him who is the Father of the fatherless.

In Judge Enochs we have lost a noble, generous friend, the profession which he adorned, an [illegible] and valuable member.

Resolved, That we extend to his widow and [illegible] our earnest sympathy and beg them to [illegible] Him who alone can comfort [illegible] in their great sorrow.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be [illegible] the families of the deceased, and to our church papers.

CONVENTION OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS IN MEXICO.

The Convention of Christian Workers which was held in Torreon, Mex., some weeks ago, according to the El Abogado Cristiano, was a grand success. The services were all well attended, and at night the house overflowed. When Brother Valiente, a converted Catholic priest, gave his reasons for leaving the Catholic Church there were more than one thousand out to hear him. The people were astonished at the way he put his reasons. They (the Catholics) went away saying, "We cannot answer him."

Delegates were there from all over the Republic. All went home full of zeal for the Master's work.

The Convention was composed of ministers of the gospel, official members of the church, Sunday School teachers, Epworth Leaguers, and Christian workers of all denominations.

One movement of the Convention was to appoint a standing committee to perpetuate the work of the Convention by arranging for another like Convention at a proper date and place to discuss the following questions:

I. To discuss the communion and union of the Protestant Churches of Mexico.

II. To place the duty of evangelizing Mexico on their own people (i.e., Mexicans).

III. To stimulate the spiritual life of the church.

IV. To arouse a combined move of all Protestant Churches against everything that hinders the moral and social conditions of the Mexicans.

MY FATHER KNOWS.

My Father knows just what is best,
Knows what I need, and then the rest
Withholds with his unerring hands;
My Father knows; he understands.

My Father knows just why 'tis best
That I sometimes should find no rest,
Why I am called through trying fires,
Why I'm denied my heart's desires.

My Father knows just when 'tis best
To call me unto heavenly rest,
For me to cease my labors here,
And dwell within his presence dear.

My Father knows what I can bear,
Nor will he call on me to share
A greater part of this world's woes
Than's good for me, he knows, he knows.

My father knows my talents all,
And be they great or very small,
They're for his praise and not mine own,
Nay, they're not mine, only a loan.

Possessed I voice of purest tone,
'Twould be to sing of him alone;
Silver and gold have my hands found,
'Tis but to spread the gospel round.

But has my voice no power of song,
Nor gift of speech to move the throng,
I still can say a word of love,
Can help some soul to look above.

Land, gold or silver have I none,
I'll still be judged for what I've done.
The way I've used my little mite,
Not as the World's, is the Lord's delight.

Then, knowing that my Father knows,
I'll fear no trials here, nor foes.
Whatever comes, whate'er befall,
My comfort is, that He knows all.

GUNS AND FEATHER BEDS — A STORY OF CONCORD.

Mistress Dent stood shielding her eyes with her plump hand from the brilliant sunshine that fateful morning of the 19th of April, 1775. Paul Revere had passed her house at dawn, calling upon the inmates to arise, as the British were coming in force to seize the arms and stores of the village of Concord, and every man, woman and child was deeply stirred.

The home of the Dents was on the direct road from the hill over which the British would march into the village, and a large store of guns lay piled upon the broad back porch—awaiting the return of the men to convey them to a place of safety.

"Do you see them, mother?" asked Dorothy Dent, anxiously. "What shall we do if they come before father and my brothers return?"

"No, they are not yet in sight, child. I wish they were not here—the arms, I mean. They are so sorely needed, and they will fall but an easy prey to the British, with none but women to defend them."

"If there were only some hiding place," sighed Dorothy, "I would carry every gun out of their reach myself!"

Grandmother Dent hobbled out to the sunny porch, a tall, keen-eyed old lady, with a strain of Quaker blood in her veins, leaning heavily on her cane. She had not yet heard the alarming news of the morning and she looked searchingly at the anxious faces as she asked, "What is thee talking about so earnestly?"

"The British are coming, grandmother, to seize the stores, and we are trying to think of some place in which to conceal the guns," Dorothy replied in her clear young voice, which her grandmother could hear better than any other in the family.

Grandmother Dent did not believe in wars and fighting; no, no; but there was a principle within her which rebelled strongly against armed men taking by force from private [illegible] what did not belong to them, and her eyes flashed as she pondered the situation.

"Has thee sorted the feathers in the south room feather-bed of late, daughter?" she said at length, looking at her daughter-in-law with a twinkling smile in her dark eyes. "It is sunny and still on the porch; it seemeth a proper day for such a task."

"The very thing, mother!" Dorothy clapped her hands joyfully. "The guns will never be the worse for a bit of down."

It was a very peaceful scene which greeted the eyes of the soldiery which an hour later marched down the hill.

Grandmother Dent and her daughter, their heads tied up in pillow-cases, were busily sorting a great pile of feathers heaped up on the porch, while the empty feather tick and several sacks lay on the floor. They were in full view of the company which, under the command of Captain Parsons, swept around the house to the front door, where they were met by Dorothy, who had put up her pretty hair in its most bewitching fashion, and pinned on a kerchief which became her dimpled beauty admirably.

"We have orders to search this house, maiden, for concealed arms," said the captain, with a bow. "I trow we shall be allowed to go on with our task peacefully and with expedition."

"Certainly, sir." Dorothy courtesied with perfect grace, though her heart was beating violently with excitement. "It would be a pity to disappoint such courteous gentlemen of such harmless amusement."

"And while your men explore the secrets of ladies' bed-chambers, perhaps you will accept some refreshment," suggested Dorothy, with sarcasm veiled beneath the most bewitching smile, as the men were about to go up stairs. "Huldah, set out the fresh doughnuts and the last baking of bread, with apples for the gentlemen."

"Thanks, maiden, but we shall have no time for feasting," replied Captain Parsons, with some reluctance, for American cookery had always proven toothsome to his British palate, and they had had a long march. "We have more serious work before us this day, and it ill behooves us to spend the time in partaking of even such charming hospitality as yours. By the way, who are those dames on the rear porch?"

"My mother and my grandmother, sir, who bade me crave your pardon that they were not at liberty to receive you. The day was fine, and the feathers have long needed sorting. It is a very important part of housewifery. Would it please you to observe how it is done?" and Dorothy made as if she would open the door which opened on the porch. "We keep the doors shut first, that the feathers may not fly inside."

The gay-clad officer stepped back in alarm. His uniform was new, and he had no mind to expose it to a flying cloud of down.

"S'death, maiden, I have no interest in your feather-picking!" he exclaimed hastily.

Meanwhile, Grandmother and Mistress Dent were not idle, though they sat with anxious hearts listening to the tramp of soldiers inside, and to Dorothy's clear young voice, which she purposely raised so that her mother could hear her. She was not afraid, now that the first thrill of fear was past, only that her father or her brothers [illegible] return [illegible] the [illegible] was [illegible] gentlemen, [illegible] many [illegible] and [illegible] heart [illegible]

[illegible] which [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] feathers [illegible] of [illegible] its way [illegible] sailed out [illegible] where he [illegible] succeeding [illegible] the length of his arm, and exposing himself to the gibes of his fellow-soldiers.

The soldiers marched away without discovering the secret of the precious store, and brave Dorothy watched them with a very white face and trembling hands, for it had been a severe strain upon even her healthy nerves.

No one came for the guns, for the father and his sons were defending the bridge, and with sick hearts the women heard the sounds of the firing in the distance, not knowing whether any of the loved ones would return alive. It was evening before Roger Dent and his sons returned, flushed with the victory of the day, and the guns were still covered with their downy disguise.

"Blessings on the geese that shed their feathers in a cause so glorious," said Dorothy's father, as he smoothed her hair tenderly, "and on the little daughter who could play the hostess to her enemies so bravely and discreetly."

"Thee shouldst have seen the soldier plucking away at his sleeve, Roger, and his mates shying away from the down as if it was bewitched!" said Grandmother Dent, merrily. Her heart was very light in the hour of victory and deliverance. "Thee would have laughed in spite of thyself."

"I had my laugh later, mother, when I saw the red coats fleeing from the village itself," replied Roger Dent. "An' had they not been reinforced on the way, hardly a man of them would have been left to tell the tale. I trust it has taught them a lesson they will not soon forget."—Good Cheer (Grace M. One reason why numbers of Christians are nothing but spiritual dwarfs, even after years of professed service, is because they cultivate one part of the Christian life at the expense of another. Many men love the Church, and are active and liberal in its support, who think but little of developing their spiritual life. Apparently they manage to keep alive, but their spiritual existence is weak and sickly. They never grow. They are but babes when they should be men.

x x x

In St. Paul's letter to the Romans occur these words: "How shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?" He was talking about giving the gospel to those who had never heard of the Lord. Did he mean that a preacher cannot preach except he is sent by the Holy Ghost, or that he cannot fulfill his mission to the ignorant and destitute unless provided with the necessary means by the Church? Can some gifted brother furnish us with a short, concise and satisfactory answer?

Had we boys and girls to educate, we certainly should send them to schools where as much attention is paid to books as to athletics. Never would we send them where athletic young women are allowed [illegible] pictures in a full garb [illegible] representing vaudeville dancers [illegible]. Such poses in groups [illegible] private gentleman [illegible] bad enough. [illegible] when faculties send them out as [illegible] advertisements. We have lately seen [illegible] little less than vulgar.

The Brother [illegible] declares that it was slavery alone, and not any difference of opinion on the nature of Methodist Episcopacy, that divided the Church in 1844. It seems to us he has read [illegible]. We beg to ask, [illegible] determined to [illegible] Bishop Andrew, notwithstanding they brought no charges against his character? Did not the Southern delegates take the ground that Bishop Andrew could not be deposed or suspended without impeachment and trial? And was not [illegible] purpose [illegible] the part of the [illegible] Bishop Andrew the principal thing in the way [illegible] for compromise? In the light of these affirmative questions, is it "absurd" to say that slavery was not the cause, but the occasion of the separation?

CHRISTIANITY OUTSIDE THE CHURCH.

There are those who, [illegible] the loss of the influence and power of the Church and its pastors, [illegible] make much of the fact [illegible] that there is abundance of Christianity outside of the Church. Personally, we find little comfort in that fact, if it be a fact. That there are [illegible] professing to be religious and [illegible], we suppose is true. That the number is steadily increasing may also be true. We have no disposition to charge such persons with insincerity [illegible] Church [illegible] from the Scriptures [illegible] after the ascension of the Master [illegible] the Church [illegible] can but think that [illegible] true Christian [illegible]. We may not see the results of such a course [illegible] new that there is [illegible] called Christian charity [illegible] seen after a while [illegible] Bible work [illegible] Church Christians. [illegible] Christians should understand that [illegible] may be auxiliary societies connected with the Church, and that Christians may [illegible] inter-denominational [illegible] Church [illegible]

It may be because they are not called. Men from the ranks of the well-to-do are not apt to take up the work unless the call is such as [illegible] "Let the dead bury their dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." As to young men with little means and with limited advantages, we are sure that for many of them the standard of education is too high, while others with sufficient education to pass are kept back through fear of going before strangers for examination. [illegible] is not deemed a sufficient excuse, but we insist that in view of the fact we have many sections of country where such young men may be used to advantage in both the local and the itinerant ranks, allowance should be made for [illegible] particularly if the applicant has a bright [illegible] and gives promise of great usefulness.

We have the thought that just now, as it has always been in our Methodism, there are hundreds of young men in obscure sections of our [illegible] in the Church who, if [illegible] license as [illegible] applicants a [illegible] in a little while become not [illegible] and influential [illegible]. We have men to-day occupying high [illegible] required to pass an approved examination [illegible] prescribed for applicants for license to-day. And some [illegible] we dare say would not have been [illegible] by a District Conference for examination. Why should we make it so much [illegible] for young men to obtain license now than [illegible] have made advancement in all [illegible] of life and in many places demand [illegible] of better education than our fathers [illegible]. How would we meet the demand? [illegible] the standard of education, but [illegible] taking a backward step, we would take the licensing of preachers from the District Conference and put it [illegible] Quarterly Conference. [illegible] if necessary [illegible] recruit the constantly depleting ranks of [illegible] a step further [illegible] the Church Conference [illegible] such a move [illegible] license one [illegible] the District Conference it [illegible] meet the mis- [illegible] could stop [illegible]

We received a letter not long since from a young man called of God, and who had consented to give his life to the ministry. He is far beyond the average in mind, but has only the education acquired in a public high-school. He deplores the fact that he is lacking in college training. Had he access to a "One-Year Pastor's Course," with his bright mind and aptness for learning, he could in a little while get on his feet, and inside a few years not only make of himself a good theologian, but acquire a fine education. We have many such young men in Southern Methodism. If all of them had such pastors as that young man has, they might be found, and brought out and put to work.

After all, my brethren, could not our pastors greatly recruit the ranks of the ministry if they would set their minds and hearts on it, and try!

Since writing the above, we have learned that one of our pastors in Louisiana has succeeded in finding in his charge (a small one) six young men who propose to give themselves to the ministry. Are they all college-bred? If not, what will the church do with them? Will it thrust them aside or help them to prepare for their work? All honor to Brother S. L. Riggs, of Kentwood. Are there not other "discerners of spirits" in our bounds? Is there a church anywhere that will deny a helping hand?

TEN THOUSAND.

Three years ago this fall an aggressive forward movement was inaugurated in this office. We believed that we could give a better paper at a lower price if we had a circulation of ten thousand, and started in to secure it. There has been a steady effort to improve the paper during all this time. A modern printing outfit has been installed, so that a paper may be printed in the dress of the best papers, and mailed promptly.

In order to help in securing the ten thousand subscribers that were essential to carrying out the plans, it was determined to make it easy for every man who would work for this goal, and to let him secure subscriptions as though the ten thousand subscribers were already realized. So that this could be done without any discrimination, and without partiality, we authorized the club rates, which we have renewed year after year. If we may have the ten thousand subscribers, we are more than willing to make these rates permanent. The first determined effort raised the list from about 3750 to 7250. Then there was a misapprehension about the club rates and renewals and some lack of persistent effort, which allowed the list to fall back to its present status of about 6000.

The paper is yours and will abide; the present staff are but incidents of the day, and will serve their little courses, and others will take their places. There is not a man connected with the ADVOCATE now that was connected with its earlier history. But the way in which you support your paper, and plan for it, will have much to do in determining its future.

You and your paper both belong to your Lord, and it is incumbent upon you to so develop this agency of the kingdom that it shall accomplish great things for the Master. When we ask you to raise the subscription list of the ADVOCATE to ten thousand, we do not ask you to work for those who publish your paper to-day, but for yourselves, your Church, and your Lord. If you secure the additional subscriptions we ask, it will not be by spectacular process and where many eyes will watch, but by earnest presentation of the theme from the pulpit, and by patient, earnest canvassing by the preachers and the agents they may appoint. The increase will not come by thousands or even hundreds, but in fives and tens and twenties. We hope that all over the territory of the ADVOCATE will go out the battle-cry, TEN THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE ADVOCATE before Conference. Who will be the first to make material increase in the number of subscribers on his charge?

PUBLISHER.

PERSONAL.

Persons who desire to purchase Brother Lagrone's little book, "The Way of Salvation," can get it by addressing him at Winona, Miss. It costs ten cents.

A letter from Rev. A. A. Eady came just in time for us to say that the Gum Springs camp meeting, eight miles north of Forest, Miss., will begin Aug. 12, 1908. It will be conducted on the old style of fifty years ago.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone has just closed a meeting at Mathiston, Miss., of great power. The two last meetings in which he engaged resulted in sweeping revivals. About 140 persons were converted, and seventy added to the Church.

Types and pens, like tongues, will slip now and then. In our column of personal notices for Aug. 6 we credited Rev. J. H. Freeman with a revival note from Hermanville, Miss. It should have read "Rev. J. H. Foreman," who is pastor at that favored little town.

Rev. E. H. Rock, writing from Black Hawk, Miss., says: "If God wills, I will commence a meeting at Acona next Sunday, the 9th. Rev. Walter J. Johnson, of Galveston, Texas, will be with me to do the preaching. Acona is Brother Johnson's old home. He was reared there." We trust Brother Rock is having a successful meeting.

Bishop Hendrix tarried in Mississippi two days after the close of his engagement with the Epworth Leaguers at Seashore Camp Ground, and officiated at the dedication of two churches. He passed through the city Wednesday en route to "Epworth-by-the-Sea," in Texas. We thank him for honoring our office with a brotherly call.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey is engaged in a good meeting at Chunky, Miss., with Rev. W. E. Dickens. Immense congregations attend the services and the whole town is being stirred. People who had never before been moved are being converted and coming into the Church. Up to Aug. 5 the pastor had received seven into membership, and the work was still going on.

We have received an account of a great revival at Shady Grove, Provencal Circuit, written by a layman, Brother C. A. Presley, the oldest man on the charge. The pastor, Rev. F. R. Power, says: "This was the greatest meeting of my life." Another and fuller account of the same meeting is in hand, the best pen-written document we have seen in a long time, but there is nothing to show who wrote it.

Rev. J. W. Honnoll is at this time (unless he has been hindered) in a meeting at Mount Pleasant, Miss. Brother Honnoll says: "I wish you could be with me." He does not wish it half as much as we do. Mount pleasant was a favorite stopping place when we were on the Holly Springs District. We would be glad to see our old friends again—and be with Brother Honnoll. We would be sure to hear gospel preaching, in good English, and of a high order.

We thank Brother G. W. Cain, secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, for a copy of "The Call of God to Man," a large volume of well printed matter, embracing the proceedings of the great Conference held in Chattanooga last April. It is a great book—of facts and figures concerning missions, of addresses of the great men at the Conference, and of their pictures, some of which are good likenesses, others not so good. The book sells for $1, and is worth it. Send for a copy. Address G. W. Cain, Nashville, Tenn.

Last week we reported Dr. J. M. Weems, presiding elder of the Newton District, as having been "on the sick list." Rev. H. Mellard, on whose statement we based the note, says this is a mistake. "Dr. Weems has enjoyed splendid health all the year, and he was never better than at the present." To this correction Brother Mellard adds an inspiring note. He says: "We held a good meeting at Hickory (Miss.) July 19-25. Rev. L. E. J. Ferguson did the preaching to the delight of the people. He is a native of Hickory. The Church was crowded at each service. Twelve persons united with the Church."

We received notice last week, through the Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative, and also by card, from Rev. E. H. Rock, the pastor, of the death of Mrs. M. A. Meek. The notices came too late for insertion in the ADVOCATE. Mrs. Meek died on July 28, 1908, and was buried the day following at Acona, by the side of her husband, who preceded her several years. She was the mother of our esteemed brother and co-laborer, Rev. R. A. Meek, of the North Mississippi Conference, with whom we sympathize in his great bereavement. We trust a suitable memoir will be furnished us in due time.

The Sardis (Miss.) Reporter speaks thus of one of our earnest Christian women in New Orleans: "Mrs. Willie Alvis has been spending a portion of the heated term with the family of her father, Rev. W. M. Young, in Sardis. The many friends of Mrs. Alvis here, who knew her in her girlhood, will be glad to know that in her new home she has taken high rank in social and religious work, for which her many accomplishments fit her pre-eminently. As treasurer for the combined missionary societies of the different Methodist churches in New Orleans, and as secretary of the Woman's Foreign Society of the Louisiana Conference, she is doing a work of large responsibility and usefulness." The Reporter also mentions W. H. Alexander and wife, of Sardis, as among the few "fathers and mothers of Confederate soldiers now living in Panola County." These dear old people were great friends to this editor when he was a boy-preacher on the Sardis Circuit in 1862.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

"The Dying of Sin; The New Life."—Rom. vi, 1-14; Gal ii, 19-21.

1. Dead Unto Sin.

Paul writes, "I am dead." Yet he seemed very much alive. In what way was he dead, or who was dead? The zealous Jew, who persecuted the Christian Church, was dead. The man with overpowering ambition and strong prejudice was dead. The old desires were all gone. The conceptions of success and the dreams of favor that had once been his were all dead. A poor man, not attractive in appearance, nor commanding in his personal presence, he was persecuted from one end of the Roman Empire to the other. He stood before kings and princes, but as a prisoner. This surely is not the haughty young Jew at whose feet men had laid their garments when they stoned Stephen. Surely Saul of Tarsas is dead, and Paul the Apostle is a new creature.

But wherein does his death consist, for here are the same features. It is in the death of the perverse will that walked its own path, in the surrender, if not banishment, of every inclination that opposed his Lord's wishes. It is in the banishing, not only of contrary deeds, but of the very will to do contrary to his Lord. He could truly say, I am dead, crucified with Christ.

2. Alive in Christ.

But, if Paul is dead to sin, he is alive to Christ. He lives, or rather the Christ lives in him. Men have been studying the Christ-life through Paul ever since. No man has been more wonderfully alive than Paul through all these years. But the life that has shaped the world, and been seen of men, has been the life of the Christ dwelling in Paul. There came to the heart of Paul a revelation of matchless love, and he realized that he was loved of the Christ. In his heart a new nature was planted by the Holy Spirit. Paul was born from above. And this new heart, touched by divine love, could not do enough in return. Paul was wonderfully alive from that time, for his own heart was overflowing with love, and he could not do enough for the Master that had done so much for him.

Death is the penalty for sin; perhaps it would not be far amiss to say that in a very real sense, all sin is death. There is more or less of the markings of death in every man that sins. He really first begins to live in whom the Christ lives. When Christ is an indwelling presence, and a controlling force, then there is power to live right, and to enjoy the service of the Lord.

EUNICE, LA.

Dear Doctor Boswell: After corresponding with about eight different preachers in three different Districts trying to get help for my meeting at Long Point and failing in my efforts, I opened fire myself on Saturday, July 18, at eleven a. m., and continued until Sunday, July 26. The battle was hard, but the victory was won over the world, the flesh and the devil.

The largest congregations attended from day to day ever known in the history of the church (so the old people say). The church was greatly revived, and a conservative estimate of the conversions would put them from twenty-five to thirty. Some say more. There were eight accessions to the church, all on profession of faith, and good material.

The second service of our meeting it was found that our house was entirely too small for the vast congregations, so Monday a. m. the brethren erected a brush arbor of pretty good dimensions, and it was soon seen that the arbor was just about half large enough. The people came from far and near—and I must say the Christians worked, and prayed, and God heard and answered as by fire. To him be all the glory. Pray for me and mine. God bless the Advocate and the editor and all concerned with the paper.

The Alaska Packers' Association furnishes the Government thousands of cases of salmon each year. Out of 240,000 cans inspected by the Government at Camp Thomas during the Spanish War, only four defective cans were found. The Association packs the celebrated Argo Red Salmon.

HAYNESVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have just closed three protracted meetings—Colquitt, Dykesville and New Salem. Brother H. W. Bowman did the preaching. He is a fine preacher. At Colquitt they had with them one of their old-time friends and a brother they received into the church thirty-four years ago, and licensed to preach twenty-two years ago, viz.: Brother J. H. Foreman, of Hermanville, Miss. The people out here love Brother Foreman. He preached twice to their delight.

We have received into the church this year sixty, and five more to be received. We have organized four Sabbath Schools; one prayer meeting; sold five Bibles, fifteen New Testaments, six "Man of Galilee," by Haygood, six Methodist Hand-Books, by T. N. Ivy, and secured new subscribers and renewals to the Advocate, ten. My work is moving on nicely.

Yours in Christ,
W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

A SUFFERER FOR TWELVE MONTHS.

Every other had failed: "We had just as soon be without quinine as to be out of Hughes' Chill Tonic. One of the most wonderful cures of chills and fever came under my observation. A man suffering for about twelve months from a most obstinate attack of chills and fever tried every remedy that he could hear of, all to no purpose. I persuaded him to try a bottle of Hughes' Tonic; from that time over twelve months ago, he has not had a chill." Sold by Druggists—50c. and $1.00 bottles.

FOREST, MISS.

Dear Advocate: I am glad to report a very gracious revival in the town of Forest. Some say it is the best meeting ever held here. The services were largely attended, and it is said that the congregations were the largest ever assembled in the history of the town. The membership of the churches were greatly revived, and especially that of our own. There were twenty-three valuable accessions to the Methodist Church, a number of conversions and several family altars established.

I desire to express my appreciation of the earnest preaching of Rev. William G. Harbin and the tender and effective gospel singing of Rev. C. N. [illegible]. These brethren captivated all hearts from the first and greatly endeared themselves to this people. I am sure their work will abide.

While I have only served this people seven months, I can say many good things about them. Some furnishings have been added to the parsonage, besides a new fence, waterworks and electric lights in the church. The prospect for the future is encouraging, and the pastor cheerful and happy. Cordially,

H. MELLARD.

Place your grocer order for a few cans of Argo Red Salmon and with an Argo Cook Book at hand you can prepare many palatable dishes.

REVIVAL AT VARDAMAN.

A revival of unusual interest was conducted at Vardaman, Miss., July [illegible]. Rev. W. S. Lampton, Conference Evangelist, conducted the meeting, assisted by the pastor, Rev. A. G. Hill, recently of [illegible], Miss. Rev. W. H. Graves, pastor at Houston, was with us a few days and labored earnestly for the salvation of souls.

The whole town and community has been greatly blessed by this meeting. A more powerful, convincing and [illegible] series of sermons has never been heard in this section of the country than was delivered by Brother Lampton. He is an untiring worker, a powerful pulpit orator and very successful in bringing souls to Christ, as the results of this meeting show.

There were [illegible] conversions and [illegible] additions to the church. [illegible] Christ and united with the church.

The Russian Douma has adjourned. They will reassemble some time after October. This is the first time that a Russian Douma has been permitted to conclude a session with the understanding that the same body would reassemble. The first two Doumas did nothing but fight the government, and attempted no practical legislation; but this body has proven itself a practical legislative assembly.

War prevails in Honduras, with danger of other Central American countries becoming involved. It is very hard to keep track of these Central American wars. They spring up in a night, and have so much of the nature of personal feuds that it is not easy to tell whether it is a case of disappointed ambition, or of real wrongs to be righted. The Spanish American does not seem to know how to submit to the rule of the majority. The description of one of their elections reads very much like the inside history of some of the elections of the early day in this country, except that with us, the outmanœuvred candidate did not get a gun and gather his friends around him.

CAMP MEETING ON CHESTER (MISS.) CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I want to tell you of the great camp meeting of South Union that has just closed. It was good to be there. Truly God was with us and gave us a glorious revival by the preaching of His word by Brother Thames, our beloved elder; Brother Raper of the Louisville Circuit, Bro. Duncan, of Durant, Bro. Simpson, of Ackerman, and Dr. Weir, of Sartinville, and Brother Chapman, president of Montrose Preparatory School. Shouts of praise went up to God, a wave of glory swept over the soul as they sang that dear old hymn, "Oh, who will come and go with me? I am bound for the Promised Land." The attendance was not good owing to the inclemency of the weather. There were several conversions, and twenty-five were received into the Church. I believe every attendant received a spiritual blessing. Some say it was the best meeting we have had for years. It was conducted by our most able pastor, W. F. Rogers, a truly consecrated servant of God; we are proud of him. He takes a great interest in the prayer meetings and Sunday schools, visiting those sick or in distress with his words of comfort. This camp ground was established in 1872, and thirty-seven meetings have been held there. They are going to enlarge the encampment; it is not large enough yet. We have a splendid spring of water, and the most healthful locality in the county. Doctor, we should be delighted to have you come next year and see for yourself that this is one of God's chosen places, and partake of the hospitality of these people. You go there a stranger, but you do not go away one. A feeling of sadness sweeps over you when you have to leave. It is a shady, cool place where both church and tabernacle are located. The entire encampment is almost surrounded by woods.

The preachers did their best toward pleasing the people, and we thank them. Rev. J. R. Bright, a young man just starting in the ministry, gave us two excellent sermons, and I believe he will some day be one of the most highly honored ministers of the Church, for he has conquered many things when others would have [illegible]. We had an excellent [illegible], and sweet singing. We had those dear hymns, "Just as I am," and "I surrender all," and "Take my life and let it be consecrated, Lord, to Thee," so uplifting to the soul. Very truly yours, in His Name, A.

FROM MANSFIELD CIRCUIT.

Dear Editor: We report with pleasure the greatest meeting held at old Bethel Church for years. We began the meeting Saturday night with an attentive congregation and much interest manifested and much good was done.

The Rev. F. R. Power arrived Monday at eleven a. m., and began his work with an exhortation to the Christians as to their duty, and a strong appeal for much prayer. He preached with much interest and to the delight of all. Each sermon was more effective on the sinners and awakened the Christians more and more to their duty. The Lord was there in great power at each service. We hardly know how to estimate the results of the meeting. There were more than one hundred stood as a sign that they were blessed during the meeting. We received eleven into the church, nine on profession of faith, baptized one infant. The judgment only will reveal the good that was done. Pray for us that the good work may go on in our midst.

Brother Power left after preaching Thursday night to begin a meeting on his charge near Provencal. Our prayers go with him. May the Lord bless his labors at home as well as abroad.

Yours in the faith,

LESSON FOR AUG. 16, 1908.

SAUL TRIES TO KILL DAVID.

I Samuel xviii, 6-16.

Golden Text: "The Lord God is a sun and shield."—Psalms lxxxiv, 11.

There was something to tell in Gath and in the streets of Askelon, as the panic-stricken army of the Philistines fled away. The army of Israel was in full pursuit, pressing the enemy so hard that in escaping from the Valley of Elah they were divided, some fleeing toward Ekron on the north, and others toward Gath on the south. The Israelites returned from chasing the routed army, and gathered up the spoils of battle on their way returning to Gibeah. David came in with the giant's head in his hand, and was met by Abner, the king's cousin, and brought before Saul. All flushed with victory and conscious of having the Spirit of God, which changeth and lighteth the countenance, David did not seem the same as when, with skilled touch, he drove away the evil spirit by the soft strains of the harp. The king did not know him, so changed was he. "Whose son art thou, thou young man?" asked King Saul. "I am the son of Jesse, thy servant of Bethlehem," was the modest reply. Jonathan was standing near, and looked upon David with the admiration born of a generous, manly nature. What a difference between this young prince and the king, his father! Jonathan was the true nobleman; one of God's nobility was he, and he saw in David the virtues he aspired to. His heart went out to the shepherd lad, and in the face of the knowledge he must have had of David being anointed as future king there was no envy or jealousy in him at all. In his eagerness to show his love for David, Jonathan began to shower upon him gifts of the best he possessed. His princely apparel was none too good for the brave boy that had done that day so much for his father's kingdom. He was skilled in archery, and David should have his best bow; even his sword, hanging to his girdle, should attest a love that had begun, and was to last until his life was given in service to his father's kingdom.

David's popularity was universal; all Israel and Judah loved him. While the king and Abner were holding audience with David, outside and within hearing the women of the cities of Israel that came out to meet the returning warriors were singing and dancing in very joy. The words of their song fell upon the ears of the king, and he was wroth because more honor was ascribed to David than to his majesty. "And what can he have more than the kingdom?" and from that day forward "Saul eyed David," and it was with an evil eye—an eye that looked out of a heart filled with treachery and murder.

It must have been a sleepless night for the king, for on the very day following the great rejoicing that greeted the return of the victorious army, Saul fell again into despondency. In the deep gloom that comes upon all "that are not kept in perfect peace" from having their minds stayed upon the God of Peace, Saul called for David to come and bring his harp and play sweet music to lull the tumult that racked his soul. The soft strains of the harp had not the soothing power of aforetime. The spirit of jealousy and hatred arose in the heart of him who was far from good in his best days, and there being a javelin in his hand, as quick as thought, and with deadly intent, the king hurled the weapon at the fair young musician, muttering between clenched teeth, "I will smite David, even to the wall." David fled uninjured, because the Lord was with him. Saul knew that God was with the son of Jesse and for that reason he was afraid of him. The wicked are afraid of God and there is but one way to dispel their fears and that is to teach them that God is love.

Even after this frightful deed, Saul would [illegible] gladly [illegible] shown [illegible] sign of repentance he could not [illegible] the Spirit had departed from him, and the [illegible] was slowly but surely losing his reason. With an unreasonable rage filling the heart of the man who has no hope or trust in God. What a contrast between the lives of the king chosen by the people and the young king chosen of God. David's reflections were that he was protected from all danger by the ever watchful eye of the Almighty. When alone in the forest the beasts of the field did him no harm; the mighty giant was overcome; and now he was delivered from death by the javelin hurled by the hand that should have kindly helped him. The coat of mail that David wore was unseen by man. He had on the breastplate of righteousness, through which no fiery dart of the wicked could pierce.

Some have wondered that the evil spirit within Saul was sent from God. Why wonder? Had not Saul the benefit of counsel and companionship of one of the best men of the age? Had not Samuel prayed, wept and pleaded for him? If these good influences could not avert ruin, then there was recourse to the evil spirit to torment him, so in the course of life he would be forced to seek for peace from the right source. It is worthy of belief that our God uses all of his wisdom in saving a soul from death. The way of the transgressor is hard; the wicked have no easy time in life. It is only the child of God clinging to the cross that finds peace within, while the storm is raging all around.

Let us turn from this picture to one of love and light. Consider Jonathan; how noble, how loyal! Loving and protecting David, yet he was true to his father. He was as the Christian, filled with ardor for the cause of the Master, yet having compassion and pity for a sinful world. It is the privilege of the godly man to act as mediator between the sinner and God's wrath—true to both the offender and the offended Lord. This is a part of the work consigned to us by the great Mediator between God and man. The great apostle was thus inspired when his very soul cried out from within, "I pray you, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." Blessed be the Lord, who is a sun and shield, while we go from strength to strength.

Henri Farman has made several successful flights in an aeroplane at Brighton Beach. The machine was said to have risen from the ground and lighted as gracefully as a bird. Man may yet make conquest of the air.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

FROM CARROLLTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Let me say in reply to your and Brother Bingham's pleasantry, I saw the Prince of Wales, but have a lingering suspicion that I didn't see much. If I read his face aright, there is very little that is common to us both. I do not envy him his lot. I had rather be a Methodist preacher than to be heir to the English or any other throne.

I had on the trip to Quebec an excellent traveling companion, Dr. Yarbrough, of Como, Miss. We spent two days in Chicago, seeing the sights. Armour Institute and Lincoln Park were most interesting to us. Chicago has a great park system, anyway.

We saw Niagara Falls—too great for description. I have seen Shasta, Pikes Peak, the ocean, the desert and numerous other smaller things, but beg leave to record Niagara as nature's greatest impression of solemn and terrific majesty on me.

We spent Sunday, July 19, in Toronto, attending Sunday School and preaching at the Metropolitan Methodist Church. The pastor, Dr. Cleaver, was away, but we heard a good sermon on the "Fatherhood of God," by Mr. Large, assistant pastor. The Canadian Methodists have their evening services before dark—7 o'clock. Sensible plan, I think. We attended Sherbourne Street, Dr. Jackson's Church, at 7 o'clock. We missed hearing him for he had gone to Europe. We heard a visiting brother on, "Where the Carcass Is," etc. The eagle's taste leads him to the carcass, the humming-bird's taste to the flower, so what we are within accounts for our mental and spiritual affinities. Then the cure for bad taste, makes a brief outline of his thought. We sought nor saw anything but the religious side of Toronto.

We spent a day in Montreal, the New York of Canada. We met this story there: That Benjamin Franklin, with some other Americans, came there to enlist Canada in the War of the Revolution, and would have succeeded, but for the French element of the country. We visited a great fur store, also a large diamond store, but bought nothing, though we might have had cloaks for a thousand dollars, more or less, or rings for two thousand, some more, some less, but for the sake of the ladies who may read, I leave out the mention of all other wraps and precious ornaments. We arrived at Quebec in time to witness the reception of the Prince, who, with a number of England's war vessels, came to help in the festivities of the three hundred-year celebration of Quebec. We heard the firing of cannon in honor of His Royal Highness then, and as he visited the warships next day, all of which Dr. Yarbrough characterized as "tommy-rot."

We saw the beautiful electric display by night, and the profuse display of flags by day, the vast thousands of visitors, but the monuments, the fortress, the Gibraltar of America, the plains of Abraham, the historic battle-ground, interested us most.

We slept for a night on a steamer on the bosom of the great St. Lawrence River, which is made by the outflow of all the great lakes, as the school children know. The haying season was on. The reapers were cutting wheat, barley, oats, some fields not yet ready for harvest. We saw cattle, horses, and sheep, but hogs only a few. My friend remarked on the scarcity of dogs. The one I heard did not convince me of his superiority to our Southern dogs, for he was chasing our train. We saw the common black crow, the blackbird, the field lark and the turtle dove all along. I have seen all these, I think, from Quebec to Encenada, lower California, so I take them to be common to our continent. In Montreal and Quebec we heard little but French. It made us home-sick for our native tongue. We had an impression it was a priest-ridden country, and after seeing their great churches and other buildings, and the great swarms of priests at Quebec, we were prepared to believe it. The wonder to me is how our Canadian brethren have done so much with the overshadowing architecture and dominant influence of Rome on every hand. I doubt if Methodism has had a harder field than Eastern Canada.

Having missed one Sunday from my charge, I returned in time to fill last Sunday's appointments, and to take up anew the pleasant tasks of daily life. To preach the Word, to comfort the grief-stricken, to minister to the sick, in short, to do the pastor's work comes to me more in the light of highest privilege than ever before. And so, with grateful heart, I take it up again.

In a few days the battleship fleet will start across the Pacific on its way home around the world. Many official visits will be paid, and much interest attaches to the voyage. It was continually reported in European circles that the American war vessels were little better than junk and utterly unserviceable. If they come from the long voyage around the world in as good condition as they reached San Francisco there will be a new respect for our navy. We want a strong navy not to fight, but to be able to keep from fighting. Since this is an important part of its use it is just as important to let the world know that it is strong, as to be strong.

The German army maneuvers will be on a gigantic scale this fall. They will have over a million men in the field. This is making the game of war almost as formidable as the reality. When the Prince of Peace reigns this wonderful expenditure will be for welfare and not for destruction.

Glances at the World.

The citizens of New Zealand, a flourishing British colony in the South Pacific Ocean of nearly one million inhabitants, are greatly interested in the question of prohibition. Some sections of the islands are under local option, and the desire is to extend its benefits still further. A vote will be taken on the question in November. Between now and the day of election they want all the information they can get, especially do they desire to learn the experience of the people in the United States. To this end, interested persons have sent several questions bearing on the matter, and greatly desire all who will to send them answers. The questions are: (1) Was No-License or Prohibition carried in your State? (2) If so, has it benefited the community morally and financially? (3) What American States have carried Prohibition of Liquor? If any of our readers, anywhere, will answer these questions, let them direct their letters to The Times Editor, Wellington, New Zealand. All who answer these questions are promised a reply newspaper, if they request it. Postage to New Zealand is 5 cents.

For the purpose of securing to women the right to vote, a thing both novel and serious is proposed. If accepted by the women, and they attempt the business on a large scale, there is no telling what will be the result. A dispatch from Chicago, Aug. 8, says: "Women were advised by Mrs. Florence Richards, of Ohio, in an address at the Lincoln Temperance Chautauqua in Austin yesterday, to go on a strike until they are permitted to vote. 'If we refused to do the housework and take care of the children,' said Mrs. Richards, 'we would be led to the polling places on our husbands' arms before a month. Then the saloon doors will cease to swing. No man wants to cook and do housework,' said the speaker, 'and a universal strike will bring them to time.'" Women are universally accorded good sense and good hearts, but the proposition made by Mrs. Richards indicates an addled brain and a poisoned soul. She will rally around her but few sympathizers. Woman suffrage must be in a bad way if its advocates can see no prospect of success, and must resort to measures that would inflict great suffering on innocent little children. How the women themselves would fare under such a regime we are not informed. We imagine they would also be victims of their scheme.

Some weeks ago a negro, at Pensacola, Fla., guilty of the crime for which so many are lynched, was arrested and lodged in jail. Immediately a mob was gathered, bent on putting the negro to death. The sheriff and several deputies armed themselves and undertook to defend the prisoner. The members of the mob were fairly warned by the sheriff, but they paid no attention, supposing that, like nine-tenths of other officers under similar circumstances, at the last moment he would yield to their demands. But he was true to his word, and when the mob attacked the jail he fired and killed two men and wounded several others. This action of the sheriff, though a very popular man, enraged the citizens, and they threatened vengeance. The whole thing, of course, was deplorable; but the citizens should have applauded the man for his courage and respect for his oath of office. The Birmingham News, in commenting on the affair, says: "The sheriff and his deputies did their duty, and both deserve credit for the brave stand they took in defense of the law. Had they permitted the mob to take the prisoner without resisting they would have been guilty of gross neglect of duty, and would have deserved to be punished by loss of their positions or by criminal action against them. They were among the comparatively few officers of the kind in the South who have taken prompt and determined stand against the mob for several years, and they deserve the commendation of every law-abiding citizen of that community for the stand they took." What encouragement has brave and true men to offer their services, if, in the time of trouble and danger, they are to be condemned and abused for doing their duty?

The law of the new State of Oklahoma requires the banks to establish a guaranty fund, which may be drawn on to pay depositors in full in case of failure or trouble with the banks. A bank commissioner is charged with the execution of the law. A certain bank in the State was recently closed because its active managing officers had violated the law of borrowing money—the president $7,067, and the cashier $4,614. The bank had on deposit $30,744, with only $1,574 cash, and $7,564 due from other banks—not half enough to pay the depositors. Within one hour after the bank commissioner took charge, he had authority to draw on the State guaranty fund and pay the depositors in full, which he did inside of two days, except to a few depositors outside of the town. The stockholders of the bank will not come out so well. In the final liquidation they will realize about fifty cents on the dollar. This Oklahoma law, like its prohibition statute, seems to be a good thing. The Democratic Party in its national platform has a plank favoring such a law for all national banks of the country.

That there are too many ill-considered and unhappy marriages no one will deny, but it does not follow that divorces occur or are justified because an unhappy wife or husband happens to meet what is called these days an "affinity." Taking up with an affinity may turn out as disastrously as the rightful marriage in the first instance. A man who will deliberately turn away from the wife of his youth and join himself to an affinity with whom he thinks he can live happier, violates a solemn trust. He is a criminal before God, and a sinner against society. A woman who acts likewise is no less a sinner. Passion is more responsible for such conduct than the desire on the part of men and women to find their "affinities." This evil business in our country attracts attention abroad. In far-away New Zealand a native, who seems to have some concern for the purity of the home, proposes a novel but heathenish method for curing the disorder. He says "there would be fewer affinities and divorces if all married women in the United States were tattooed on the chin," and "I think I shall ask President Roosevelt to use his influence to have such a bill put throgh Congress." Such a law, if enforced, might not lessen the number of divorces, but we fail to see how it would stop the "affinity" business, for untattooed men and untattooed single women would still have an open field. Rigid laws against the evil-doers would help, but nothing save a complete reformation of society on gospel principles will effect a radical cure.

A surprising piece of news comes to the public through the Catholic Standard and Times, according to the Baptist Standard. It is to the effect that Roman Catholics have taken steps to influence the Postoffice Department to exclude from the mails a book entitled, "Errors of the Roman Catholic Church." Since the establishment of our government, which guaranteed liberty and free speech, books, pamphlets and newspapers have been printed devoted to the discussion of church doctrines and polity—the different writers defending or opposing as they saw fit, and all have freely gone through the mails. Not until we saw the paragraph from which we quote did we ever hear of members of one denomination trying to interefere in the matter. The interference is nothing short of a high-handed piece of business. It is inexcusable arrogance. If we were called upon to point out the bitterest partisan paper, with one exception, that ever came under our observation we would name the New York Freeman's Journal, a Roman Catholic paper. This journal has often fretted and affronted us, but we never for a moment thought of calling on the Postoffice Department to exclude it from the mails. The Roman Catholics will have on hand a big contract if they undertake to exclude from the mail-bags all the books and papers printed in opposition to their Church. The people of this country cannot too soon rebuke the action of these meddlesome Jesuits, who, if they succeed in one particular and another, will soon undertake to exclude Protestants from their pulpits, and put a padlock on the mouths of Protestant preachers.

THE "ORIGINAL SIN" PROBLEM NOT YET SOLVED.

BY REV. D. M. GEDDIE.

No. 6.

Another consideration that Dr. Mahon offers as evidence of the imputed guilt of Adam's sin is human suffering. But taken in itself, suffering of no kind or amount is proof of guilt. The innocent suffer quite as much and often more than do the guilty. They suffer in consequence of the guilty. It is a common occurrence for a wayward son or daughter to cast a frowning shadow over an entire family. Many of us have known instances in which one single deed of a disobedient son or daughter has wrecked for all time the happiness of a Christian home. No other member of the family was in the least guilty, but its light faded into the gloom of midnight darkness, its songs of mirth and innocent happiness were changed to the discordant dirges of saddest disappointment, and its domestic peace into inexpressible anguish of soul that even the grace of God itself could scarcely relieve.

Thousands of women are suffering from the crimes of their husbands. They have been robbed of luxuries, comforts and even the stern necessities of life. In no sense are they guilty. No court of justice in the world would convict and punish them. But their refined and sensitive natures suffer ten times more than do the coarse and brutish natures of the guilty criminals.

A gentleman who was sober from his childhood, and who was an efficient leader in all religious and public enterprises, and who was held in high esteem by all who knew him, bore every physical mark of his father's drunkenness, and even inherited the taste for strong drink; but he did not bear his father's guilt or suffer the penalty of his father's sin. He simply suffered the physical and moral consequences. So we all suffer the consequences of Adam's sin, but not its guilt and condemnation. And not only man, the offspring of Adam, but also the whole inhabited globe, suffers these consequences. "For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope, Because the creature shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." (Rom. [illegible] 22.) [illegible]

"GILDEROY," AS I KNOW HIM.

BY REV. W. G. HARBIN.

[illegible] years before the readers of the ADVOCATE [illegible] "Gilderoy"—a man of wide experience, [illegible] observation and the [illegible] skill to set [illegible] forth in well-turned phrase and happy [illegible]

"With [illegible] his valor did enrich his wit,
His wit [illegible] down to make his valor live."

Yet, while his name is, his personality and character are [illegible] known to many. When he dies—and passes [illegible] smile to heaven's brightness—the columns of our Church papers will have much to say of him. Garlands will rain upon his ashes. I am sure there is no bad taste in a friend writing an appreciative word while he still lives; and so I am about to try to set before his wide circle of friends something of "Gilderoy" as I know him.

My first meeting with him was in 1900, but a little short of eight years ago. A boy-preacher then, I was helping in a meeting at old Wood Street Church, in Water Valley. Gilderoy was the presiding elder. My attention at our service was attracted to a slim, short man, with a very sedate white beard, bearing the same relation to a Vandyke that a Chesterfield coat does to a cutaway. On either side of a strong, characterful nose two merry Irish eyes gleamed with a mischief that sorrow never quenched nor burden crushed. Above an ample brow, black hair, almost silvered with the years, waved in a boyish roach. It was easy to select my key-listener, and those keen, merry eyes, gleaming with enthusiastic appreciation, clouding sadly with disapproval, or twinkling with good-humored amusement at some boyish awkwardness of thought or expression, lighted me along all the track of that sermon.

Gilderoy preached during that meeting. He was the first preacher I ever saw make gestures with his feet. Leaning far over the pulpit, clutching it with both hands with a death-grip, he pawed like a mettlesome thoroughbred as he wrenched from his mind and heart thought and feeling and hurled them upon the congregation. A few weeks later Conference met. I received my first regular appointment, a station in Gilderoy's district. The same Conference sent him to Oxford Station.

The following October I was honored by an invitation to help him in a meeting at Oxford, and spent two weeks in his home. His children were all scattered into the world, and he and his wife, in the beautiful little parsonage, were living a life of Arcadian sweetness—as, quoting Mrs. Malaprop, he loved to say, they were enjoying their "otium cum digitalis." After long years of married life, Mrs. Porter had a boyish sweetheart still, who loved to tease and pet, and did it as he did at 20. Women are not that way; they grow up, although they maintain a sweetness manhood never realizes. She looked upon the sweet-home capers this white-haired boy would cut with indulgent deprecation. If she had ever tried to train up her husband in the way he should go, she had long since given up the effort, and felt a great peace-of-heart in having done so.

Gilderoy's preaching is as lucid as his writing. He told me once that his one aim had ever been to make himself understood. He loves the great doctrinal themes. He has studied deep and to great purpose. His exposition of passages like Romans viii, 29-30, and kindred difficulties in Ephesians and John are unexcelled by any I ever heard. The world's demand of funereal seriousness on the part of the theologian has kept this merry-hearted Irishman from being appreciated as the keenest and clearest theological thinker in Mississippi Methodism.

To keen logical thinking Gilderoy added a mental faculty rarely seen in such company, a sense of humor as untamably spontaneous as a [illegible] years I have [illegible] several difficulties, [illegible] his own fresh [illegible] characteristics, [illegible] clearly [illegible] Conference [illegible] owned hundreds of books [illegible] send him copies for review. And yet to show his liberality [illegible] He has given his books [illegible] younger brethren [illegible]

Biloxi, Miss.

LETTER FROM GILDEROY.

I think it necessary [illegible] from all such [illegible] and women [illegible] prayer, or in what they [illegible] about all the affairs [illegible] they are a [illegible] with. The [illegible] direction, the [illegible] their own [illegible] it may [illegible] that they [illegible]

Some preachers I have known have a way of constantly reminding their congregations that they have consulted God about this, that and the other matter, and that they have the approval [illegible] not [illegible] what [illegible] the quality and texture [illegible] I am governed by my own [illegible] and taste. In all church matters I [illegible] same way, praying God's blessing [illegible] to overrule any mistakes [illegible]. In the preparation and [illegible] I seek divine enlightenment [illegible] the Word of God and divine [illegible] of my message; and I rarely [illegible] presence and blessing. [illegible] sense of God, [illegible] private and in the pulpit. In building [illegible] sermons I build after my own plans and according to the [illegible] of my own mind. I use such words as I think best suited to convey my [illegible], remembering that I have a small vocabulary to select from—perhaps two thousand words. The Holy Ghost never causes me to use [illegible] I do not know or understand, nor does He inspire me with fiery and furious messages, more expressive of hot temper than of sound sense.

When two divinely-inspired laymen or preachers meet together in the same church or meeting, and God has directed one of them one way and the other another and opposite way, the tug-of-war has come. I have known this to happen, and it results in confusion confounded. I do not believe that God sets men at cross-purposes, except it be at the foot of some tower of Babel. No matter what a preacher may claim in the way of divine direction and inspiration, I do not believe God ever inspired any preacher to say or to do unwise and foolish things, or to use rough, uncouth, bullying, braggadocio speech in the pulpit. I have a better opinion of God than that, and I do not like for my Lord to be slandered in that way. It is charging God falsely to claim that He has inspired such speech. He has not, never has, and never will.

Young preachers should avoid borrowing the billingsgate of the world as a vehicle in which to reprove sin. It lowers the dignity and purity of the pulpits and preachers, and lowers respect and reverence for the gospel of Christ. Yours,

GILDEROY.

CENTENARY COLLEGE NOTES.

The most popular pleasure trip about Shreveport is by the new car line out to Centenary College. Every day large numbers make the trip. Friends from all parts of Louisiana are frequent visitors.

The contract calls for a deep well to supply our building with an abundance of pure water. With our own water supply and a building furnished with all sanitary appliances, we have everything that makes for cleanliness.

Prof. George L. Harrell, of the Department of Mathematics, is already in Shreveport. After four years' service in Epworth University, Oklahoma, he returns to Louisiana to give some of the best years of his life to Centenary. Prof. Harrell has at once thrown himself into Church work. He has already occupied the pulpit of Noel Memorial Church twice, and is engaged to conduct a service of prayer-meetings for First Church.

We are on the home-stretch now, and whatever our pastors intend to do in the way of sending us boys must be done quickly. One of our presiding elders sends in every little while the name of some boy he has met on his rounds. His is an example good to follow. A good guesser would look to the Monroe District for this elder, wouldn't he?

The first student to enter for the new year is already on hand. He has come up from Bogalusa, and will make himself very useful in these strenuous days of getting things ready for September 16.

Have you heard of our $100 Club, whereby all our friends are enabled to take part in putting Centenary on a firm foundation? Watch the ADVOCATE for full particulars. We want 250 members to our Club. One subscriber has already applied for fifty memberships.

"THE DEARTH OF PREACHERS."

No doubt preachers are scarce in some sections; but that withering, blighting dearth that seems to cause sleepless nights to some of the brethren (judging from their lugubrious wails through the press) has not struck the Mississippi Conference. This Conference, at its last session, took in recruits as follows (not counting transfers): Admitted on trial, 13; readmitted, 3; received from other churches, 1; total, 17. This number was more than adequate to meet our needs. I say more than adequate, and here are my reasons for saying so: There are only seven charges served by local preachers as supplies, and yet there are several local preachers who would be glad to serve as supplies, and who would be acceptable and efficient. In the Meridian District there is not a single supply. Again, there are churches with a small membership and no prospect of much increase that are paying station with a salary of less than $300 a year. This may be the result of a "dearth" of preachers, but I have been accustomed to call it by another name.

W. C. BLACK.

A PRAISEWORTHY WORD.

After a visit to the North Mississippi Conference, and conducting a revival for the pastors at Cedar Bluff, I cannot refrain from saying a praiseworthy word for the pastor of the Methodist Church there. Brother J. A. Coleman went from the Southern University at the close of its last session to the Cedar Bluff charge. From the reports made by the citizens, the Church was inactive and spiritually dead. Through his earnest efforts the congregation has been brought together again, and a healthy organization effected. [illegible] which had not been entered [illegible] by a Methodist preacher for years were visited, and everywhere his classes and [illegible] are very highly [illegible]. I wish [illegible] that our young preachers who are [illegible] to even [illegible] may no longer be backward. If they could all see the esteem in which Brother Coleman is held, and see how much better he is equipped for the work than his co-laborers in the same vineyard, no longer would they halt between two opinions. Brethren, let us not despise the youth, but let us realize that when God calls an individual to preach, he intends for him to preach whenever and wherever opportunity presents itself.

WHO IS CORRECT?

Mr. Editor: On page 138 of the Church Extension Handbook, under a picture of McKendree Chapel in Missouri, the statement is made that it was built in 1809, and that it was the first Methodist Church west of the Mississippi River. On page 555 of McTyeire's History of Methodism we are told that James Axley, who served the Opelousas Circuit in Louisiana during the year 1808, built, largely with his own hands, the first church on the circuit, which was known as Axley's Chapel. Now, who is correct—Bishop McTyeire or the editor of the Handbook?

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Pursuant to announcement, the Newton District Conference met in Montrose, Miss., July 8, 1908, with Rev. J. M. Weems, D.D., presiding elder, in the chair, the opening sermon having been preached the night before by Rev. W. W. Graves. T. J. O'Neil was elected secretary, and B. F. Meigs assistant secretary. The pastors were all present, except those of Edinburgh, Forest, Harperville, Lake and Indian Mission. A written report was sent by the pastor of Edinburgh, but no reports were given from Harperville, Forest, Lake or Indian Mission.

Five local preachers were present, besides the supplies and the new [illegible] at this Conference, and twenty-five lay delegates were present.

The reports from the pastors show the financial and spiritual condition of the District to be encouraging. The entire Conference—preachers and laymen—seem to be [illegible] purpose to make this one of the best years in the history of the District.

George L. Nicholas, W. B. [illegible], W. [illegible] D. D. Barrett were granted license to preach, and J. G. Ware was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission into the Traveling Connection.

NATCHEZ DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

On Wednesday morning, May 13, the preachers and lay delegates of the Natchez District met in the Methodist Church, in the historic city of Woodville, and for three days looked into the condition of the several interests of the church within the bounds of the district. From the opening address and earnest talk to the members of the Conference to the final benediction at the close of Conference, the presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, by his gentle yet firm administration, tact and earnestness, fully justified the action of Bishop Hendrix in making him a presiding elder. The writer was elected secretary.

The several interests of the church received careful attention, special sessions being devoted to Missions and Epworth League. A missionary institute was held in connection with the Conference.

The reports from the several charges were encouraging and showed a general advance in every department of the work committed to the Church.

Dr. W. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College, addressed the Conference in behalf of the College, and many of the preachers say it was the best talk on that subject they had ever heard.

Rev. W. M. Williams, superintendent of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, and Rev. W. L. Hightower, treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance, were with us and made helpful talks concerning the special work committed to them.

Among the many important things done by the Conference were the adoption of a resolution transferring the control of the Sam Jones Campground to the Quarterly Conference of Gloster charge, and a resolution giving due notice to all local preachers in the district that at future sessions of the Conference written reports would be demanded and a failure to so report would be taken as prima facie evidence of insubordination.

The Conference attended a reception given at Edward McGehee Female College and everyone was delighted with the work done by Miss Swanson, the able president of this institution. The Conference, by unanimous vote, pledged to work diligently in securing pupils from the district for this school.

R. E. Hines and W. H. McCraine were elected members of the District Board of Trustees. L. L. Stokes, D. E. Kelly, E. A. Enochs and I. M. Sessions were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with W. O. Elgin and H. McCraine alternates.

After the adoption of a resolution of thanks to the people of Woodville, and the faithful, energetic and whole-souled pastor, W. L. Linfield, the Conference adjourned to meet next year at Fayette.
H. C. BROWN, Secretary.

FROM REV. W. S. LAGRONE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I send you report of the treasurer of the Board of Missions, North Mississippi Conference. It shows what has been paid for Domestic and Foreign Missions in the charges and districts. If all the charges (and many of them the best) had paid as well as those reporting to date, we would make a much better showing. Many of the best stations and circuits have paid little or nothing. It is now only three months until Conference, and not one-fourth of the assessment has been paid. Out of an assessment of $17,735, we have paid only $3,679.80, leaving $14,056 to be collected in the next three months. It will take a united and persistent effort of every presiding elder and pastor and loyal layman in the Conference to get it. We cannot afford to fail this year. The whole Church is advancing. Shall we fall behind?

We are planning to hold missionary institutes in each presiding elder's district in the month of October. The dates are as follows: Winona, Oct. 1, 2; Durant, Oct. 6, 7; Columbus, Oct. 8, 9; Aberdeen, Oct. 13, 14; Corinth, Oct. 15, 16; Oxford, Oct. 21, 22; Sardis, Oct. 27, 28; Greenville, Oct. 29, 30.

The presiding elders will please name the place and arrange the programme. One day and night will be given to a place. I will arrange with the presiding elders to spend Sunday where they think I can do the most good. These institutes can be made a means of creating an interest and helping to arouse everybody to see the importance of this work. Yours in Christ,

W. S. LAGRONE,
Conference Missionary Evangelist.

BY [illegible]

[illegible] From this passage we [illegible] narrow way [illegible] repent of all his sins, and that means such a sorrow for them that he not only turns away from them but purposes never to commit them again, and also he must exercise that faith that brings pardon of all his sins, [illegible] He must be born again [illegible] Holy Spirit. What a change in him when born of the Holy Spirit! "Old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." (II. Cor. v. 17). "He is a new creature." He is so completely changed that his [illegible] relatives, friends and even his enemies can see that he is changed. Changed in heart, in looks, in words, glory be to God in his whole life! He does not think, talk and do like himself before his change. "He is a new creature," "created in Christ Jesus." Eph. ii. 10. He is not of the world as the Lord declared when he said in speaking of his disciples: "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." John xvii. 16. He does not think, talk or do as those of the world. He is different from them because he is completely changed by the Holy Ghost and they are not. His change is not a [illegible]—an expected [illegible] life, a [illegible] conscience, an ever and [illegible] to God. It is an [illegible] in every fibre of his mortal and spiritual [illegible], such a change that he knows it has occurred and hence is not dependent [illegible] pretended friendliness [illegible]. He knows it; he feels it and he delights to live it. He does just as the poet declared he would do, when changed:

"Then will I tell to sinners round
What a dear Savior I have found"

or as our Blessed Savior said: "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Matt. xii. 34. The worldlings are full of corn, cotton, trade, speculation, money-making, newspapers, worldly honors and pleasures, and they talk them; but the changed man, the man who has passed through the "strait gate" into the "narrow way" is full of God and heavenly things, and hence talks them, sings them, and lives them everywhere and under all circumstances, because he is in the world, but is not of the same. He is no longer the [illegible] of pleasure. His affections are on things above and not on things [illegible]. He is like our Blessed Lord.

We have noticed the change of heart that must take place before one is saved from sin, and now let us see what is essential for final salvation, or salvation in heaven. [illegible] Paul expresses the whole thing when he said: [illegible]

[illegible] salvation with fear [illegible] and again, "Let [illegible]

DOG AND KITTEN.

The servant man of a family took a kitten [illegible] a pond with the intention of drowning it. [illegible] master's dog went with him, and when the kitten was thrown into the water the dog sprang in and brought it back to land. A second time the man threw it in, and again the dog rescued it; and when for the third time the servant tried to drown it, the dog, as resolute to save the little helpless life as the man was to destroy it, swam with it to the other side of the pool, ran all the way home with it, and deposited it before the kitchen fire. From that time the dog kept constant watch over the kitten. The two were inseparable, even sharing the same bed.—Youth's Companion.

THE BEST PLAN.

"Mother," said Cliff, "what am I going to do with Joe Blair?"

"What's the matter?" asked his mother, looking up from the work in her lap. The sea air blew freshly in her face, and her eyes roved past the angry little questioner to the shimmer of sunlit waves and the gleam of white sails.

"Why, we are building a fort, mother; and Joe will build it so near the water that in a few minutes it'll all be washed out to sea."

"Why don't you get him to build it higher up then?"

"I can't make him do it," cried Cliff, stamping the pebbly shore in vexation. "I've tried and tried, and I can't."

"How did you try?" asked the mother.

"Why," said Cliff, hesitating a little, "I first said that he mustn't."

"And then?"

"Why, then I told him that he was a big goose."

"And then?"

There was a little pause before this answer came: "I jerked his paddle away."

"And then?"

This time his mother thought she wouldn't get any answer at all, but at last Cliff said, hanging his head, "Then I knocked him over and made him cry."

"O my, my, my!" said the mother, shaking her head sadly; and Cliff felt very mean, indeed. "You have tried your own naughty way and failed; now suppose you try God's plan. He says that you must suffer long and be kind; go back and try that, little son."

Cliff went back very slowly. He didn't at all like God's plan of treating Joe; but he must have tried it, after all, for the two little boys built their fort without any more quarreling, and it lasted a whole fifteen minutes.—Selected.

TWO SUGGESTIONS.

BY BISHOP O. P. FITZGERALD.

My beloved brother and former partner in Methodist journalism, Dr. Boswell, will, I trust, permit me to make two suggestions through the columns of our NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

First—While there may be some differences of opinion with regard to some questions concerning the management of the fight going on in our country against the liquor traffic and the drunkenness it produces, this one thing may be put down as certain, namely, that this fight will go on until the open saloon is abolished in all this land. To this end we may direct our plans and efforts in this sacred cause.

Second—The needless rivalry, the friction and the waste among the people called Methodists in these United States of America must cease. All of us can see thus far, and agree to this extent. As to anything further, sufficient unto its day will be its responsibility.

Nashville, Tenn.

One who seeks first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness makes investment for two worlds. The dividend will be happiness here and hereafter. This is "nominated in the bond." It gives "promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

The folly and extravagance of this age are amazing. Hundreds of persons, laboring under the impression that it is necessary to their well-being to live as high and dress as well as their wealthy neighbors, live fully up to their income. Many go beyond and either involve themselves hopelessly in debt, or secretly appropriate another man's money to their own use. These facts account for many society scandals and public defalcations.

If God can be trusted and thanked when the seasons are favorable, and everything prospers with us, why not when everything seems to be against us? God's goodness never changes. It is no credit to our religion if we are happy and trustful only in prosperity. Anybody can walk by sight. It is when darkness comes that our faith is tested and proves helpful. Happy is the man who, in the darkest hour, can put his hand in God's and say: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him."

A NEW AND MORE FRUITFUL BIBLE.

One of the leading preachers of New York, speaking of the critical study of the Scriptures, says: "Criticism—searching, daring, strong—has given us a new Bible, or rather, it has made the old Bible live again. It has given us a Bible more real, more fruitful, more inspiring. The educated man no longer thinks the thoughts his fathers thought." Notwithstanding, this same preacher mourns over the short-comings and decadence of the various evangelical Churches, especially in the city of New York.

We infer that this preacher has accepted all the conclusions of the Biblical critics, and carries into his study and pulpit the "new Bible"—the revised and expurgated edition. We infer also that other disciples of the critics do the same. Were we disposed to wonder that the churches have lost in spirituality, influence and members, this fact would arrest our wonder at once. Spiritual religion cannot flourish under the care of such preachers. The new Bible may be all that is claimed for it, but has not yet established itself in the confidence and affections of the common people from whose ranks the strength of the church is drawn.

Again, this preacher says: "I have been made sad at heart again as I have seen the cultivated, the aspiring, the brilliant among our young men and young women turned away from the church by the foolish and ignorant fulminations of the preacher." This is said of preachers in England who try to defend the Bible against the destructive critics. We venture to say that where one of these "ignorant and foolish preachers" turns one away from the church, the preacher who carries his criticisms into the pulpit drives a dozen away from Christ.

The preacher neglected to tell his hearers wherein the new, live and more real Bible is "more fruitful" than the old Book from which our fathers and mothers drew their inspiration.

Solomon said, "Great men are not always wise." More than once the truth of the saying has been forced upon our attention.

THE DIVINE MAN.

The term "divine man" is often used by modern writers and speakers in alluding to the person of our divine Lord. The purpose, with many, is to convey the idea that Jesus was less than God—only a man with a pure and holy character. For this there is no Scriptural warrant.

Our Lord was born a little child. He grew as other children grew, and "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." But neither at birth nor in the course of life did he assume the nature and characteristics of the Divine Being. He was already a self-existent Divine Being—had always been. He assumed human nature and came into the world for the purpose of making effective the plan of salvation. His name was "Immanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us." St. Paul says: "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." St. John says: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. [illegible] flesh, and [illegible] the [illegible] Father), [illegible] grace and truth."

Thus we see that all [illegible] witnesses, it was not the human [illegible] upon himself the nature and [illegible] but the Divine Jesus, the [illegible] took upon himself the nature [illegible] it behooved him to be [illegible] his brethren, that he might be a [illegible] high priest in things [illegible] make reconciliation [illegible] Hence it [illegible] was manifest in the flesh. This is [illegible] St. Paul [illegible] godliness.

[illegible] than a human [illegible] being. [illegible] Scriptures [illegible] human [illegible] the oper- [illegible] that such [illegible] The [illegible] his at- [illegible] In a very limited degree several of the attributes belonging to God may be communicated to man—he at least [illegible] communicated in [illegible] is concerned [illegible] may be communicated [illegible] that the Godhead may be transferred [illegible] is impossible. [illegible] that in Jesus Christ dwelt all [illegible] the Godhead bodily. [illegible] had been with God [illegible] Hence it is impossible [illegible] was only a man—a bright example [illegible] living and he- [illegible] from sin, to [illegible]

We are aware that this subject involves the question of the virgin birth of our Lord, to which we give hearty assent [illegible] we make [illegible] The Scriptures [illegible] They [illegible] was born of a virgin. The doctrine enters into the confession of faith of every evangelical order of Christians. [illegible] in the faith once delivered to the saints. To reject it is to deny to Jesus the power of atonement, for it makes him the [illegible] and therefore a man after the ordinary [illegible] the human race—superior only by virtue of an acquired blameless life and his [illegible] philanthropy.

The Scriptures [illegible] that Jesus was born of a human mother, but at the same time are careful [illegible] that he was born without sin. Whether the virgin herself was without sin the Word [illegible] is silent, [illegible] but whether sinless or not, [illegible] difference whether or not she was born sinless [illegible] derived [illegible] from his Father, who is God. The angel [illegible] Mary [illegible] The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

With many, especially with young and aspiring preachers, this talk of the "Divine-man" is not the result of wrong views of the nature and character of our Lord, but of a desire to catch and use modern phrases under the impression that they are attractive and apt to hold the attention of cultured hearers. In some instances it is perhaps due to a desire to restate New Testament truths in "up-to-date language." Truth gains nothing by such efforts.

The Christian Advocate (New York) prints in part an interview by a staff correspondent of the Baltimore Sun with Cardinal Gibbons. He expressed great concern over "the political condition of this country." He looks upon it as sad and alarming, and attributes it to the fact that religion is excluded from the public schools. He said: "There are no polities without morality. There is no morality without religion, and without religion there is no God. * * * The public school is the only place to begin. There are so many cunning little schemes being always devised by atheists, unbelievers and non-Christians to put God out of the public schools that the authorities of this country and in every State should exclude atheists and non-Christians from any office of authority, be it supervisory of the public schools, or not." To remedy this tendency to corruption he would "segregate the public schools—let each denomination maintain its own schools, with its own Christian teachers," and support these schools out of the public funds—each denomination to draw its proportionate share. The Cardinal is a wise man, and knows much about the government and polities, and of course, he knows all about his own Church, but he knows absolutely nothing about the religious life of the country at large. Under such a scheme it would be impossible to support all the schools. Take one little town and make the calculation. It has nine churches of white people, all organized and working. It has several churches for negroes. It has a large element of Jewish citizens, though no synagogue. At present one schoolhouse with six teachers for white children, and one good school for negroes. Our public school teachers get a scant living now. They get all the State is able to pay. What would they get with the number of teachers doubled? And they would be more than doubled under Cardinal Gibbons' plan. In some places the Roman Catholics would get the lion's share, in other places Protestants would get it and vexation and trouble would ensue. Cardinal Gibbons would do far better for the country if he would join Protestants in helping to put the Bible in our schools, and let the children learn that it is God's Word, and the authoritative source of all good. But this he will not do.

PERSONAL.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, pastor of Felicity Street Church, is engaged this week in holding a meeting at Ethel, La., a church which he served while a student at Centenary College.

A lady stenographer and type-writer, competent and experienced, desires a situation. She can give satisfactory references. For information address Rev. I. L. Peebles, Bolton, Miss.

We had the pleasure of a good talk with Rev. R. W. Vaughan, of Franklin, on Monday last. He was passing through the city on his way to some point in the northern part of the State.

Dr. Sawyer keeps busy going and preaching, notwithstanding the hot weather. He spent several days last week at the [illegible] Creek camp-meeting, preached six times, and went to [illegible], where he preached on the Sabbath. He is now at home resting for a few days.

Rev. O. B. Armour, of Aberdeen Circuit, has had two revivals with fine results. He is now closing out his fourth year of the work, and is planning to have his parsonage painted and fixed for his successor. He writes that the indications are his fourth year will be his best.

For two Sundays past Rev. K. S. [illegible], late of Mississippi, but now living at Hammond, La., has filled the pulpit at [illegible], the pastor, Rev. S. L. Riggs, being in New Orleans waiting on his wife, who, we understand, is under treatment at one of the infirmaries. We trust her illness is only temporary.

Rev. W. G. Harbin has been engaged in a meeting at Florence, Miss., with excellent results. Six persons joined our Church and five other churches, and nine family altars were erected. Some of the conversions were of old time power. In his meetings Brother Harbin never forgets the ADVOCATE.

Dr. Reagan and Rev. S. L. Pope, from Mississippi, both of whom are under treatment at the Pasteur Institute of the city, called at the office last week. They are both well and in fine spirits. Each one feels safe from rabies. Brother Pope's course of treatment ended on Monday, the 17th. We trust he is entirely safe.

We know our readers will enjoy the character sketch of "Gilderoy" in this issue of the ADVOCATE. Gilderoy has often pleased and edified the readers of this paper, and all the papers of Southern Methodism. He has written many sketches of others, but, as far as we know, this is the first time he has ever been sketched in print. Nobody will be more surprised to see this sketch than Gilderoy. We did not ask him for the privilege of printing it.

The Helping-hand Mission, conducted by our friend and brother, Rev. J. J. Hoffman, assisted by his worthy wife, is a "helping-hand" indeed, and well deserves the recognition and support of the good people of the city. It is located in the rear of Brother Hoffman's Bible House, 610 Bayonne Street. It is now at the close of its eighth year. The annual report will soon be made public. It will be a pleasant surprise to those who have no acquaintance with the institution.

We are under obligation to Hon. W. R. Dodson, Director of Experiment Stations of the Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College, for Bulletins Nos. 106 and 107, the first "A preliminary report on the so-called cerebro-spinal meningitis of horses;" the second, "Preliminary tests of sugar-house machinery." These publications are of interest to Louisiana planters, and may be secured free of charge by addressing the director, W. R. Dodson, Baton Rouge, La.

Rev. Tobias Gibson, pioneer of Methodism in Mississippi, organized a church in Washington, Adams County, in 1799, which is still in existence, with Rev. H. C. Brown as pastor. When the first house of worship was built we do not know. The present building, a picture of which appears in the Washington [illegible] of August 7, is of brick, after the style of the early years of the last century, and was built eighty-eight years ago. The charter members of the old church numbered eighty-six white and two colored persons.

Two or three letters have reached us asking why reports of certain district conferences have been delayed. In reply we say: Such matter is always on the docket as "preferred matter," and we print it as soon as practicable. We have so treated the reports in question, except the one from Newton District, by Rev. T. J. O'Neil. It was received in due time, but, unfortunately, in sorting out the matter for the week, it was overlooked. It should have appeared last week. Brother O'Neil is not to blame. The editor's [illegible] overlooked it. We throw ourselves at the mercy of the court.

Of more than common biographical interest should be the paper in the September Century, "The Early Life of Robert Fulton," by Alice Crary Sutcliffe, a great-granddaughter of the inventor. Miss Crary has been entrusted by the Fulton family with the preparation of a volume which will be virtually a new presentation of this [illegible] man, who, as painter and inventor, fairly challenges the attention of his compatriots. Researches have discovered a number of new portraits of and by Fulton, and have brought to light new material in regard to his whole career. The September Century paper and later accounts will be taken from the most interesting of this new material.

Rev. P. H. Howse, from Carriere, Miss., made a very pleasant call at the ADVOCATE office. He had just come from the camp meeting held on the Topisaw charge under the pastorate of Rev. J. B. King. The meeting was one of the most remarkable ever held on the encampment. There were from seventy-five to one hundred conversions, and sixteen accessions to the Church. The Church was generally revived, backsliders were reclaimed, old feuds were settled. The preaching was done by Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District; Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of McComb City; Rev. W. H. Lewis, of Port Gibson; Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Long Beach, and Rev. P. H. Howse, of Carriere. Brother Bethea, a local preacher, and Rev. J. W. Sandall were also in attendance.

IS IT TRUE?

A Presbyterian preacher told me this morning that he heard a president of a Baptist College say a few days ago that one thousand and forty Baptist young people attended Methodist colleges in Mississippi last year, and that eight hundred and twenty of them joined the Methodist Church. As our Conference schools only enrolled nine hundred and twenty students last year, the North Mississippi Conference must have done a thriving proselyting business.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

Epworth League

PRRAYER-MEETING TOPIC.

Aug. 23. The Way of the Cross for Us. Matt. xvi. 21-28; Luke xiv. 25-35.

In all of history there is nothing more wonderful than in the transformation of the instrument of shameful and cruel death into the emblem of the loftiest service and the noblest living, yet this is what the Master has done. The Romans put their criminals to death upon the cross. Nailed to its cross bar the criminal lingered out a death of hideous suffering, while he was mocked by passing multitudes. To die upon the cross was to leave a stain upon one's family, such as a death by the hangman's noose to-day. Yet when Jesus submitted himself to the hands of the Romans, and suffered for our sins upon the cross, he made it the standard of armies, a badge of Christian fellowship and the symbol of all that is pure and good.

2. The Call of the Cross.

The call of the Christ comes to every man and woman, every boy and girl. "If any one will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Great throngs are ready to follow him, who can give them bread. There are multitudes to-day, who follow for the good things which the church can bestow. If the church provides friends and influence; if it says nice things about you and tenders you the chief seat, all is well. But the Master says to those who are at ease, to old and young, take up your cross and follow me. That which Paul called the offense of the cross (Gal. v. 11), has driven many a person out of the church, and caused many others to lapse into formal Christians with meaningless lives.

3. The Offence of the Cross.

The man who was nailed to the cross, was not to be taken down, until dead. He who carried the cross, as a rule was to be nailed to the cross. When the Master invites you to bear your cross after him, he asks you to consign yourself to the death of the cross. While there may be no occasion for the suffering of physical death, yet there must be a death of self and of sin, crucified with Christ. The shame of the cross must touch your life until you can understand somewhat of the spirit of those of old, who rejoiced when they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

The offense of the cross has placed reproach upon some of the best men of the earth, as they have borne without a murmur the stigma of the faults of others.

4. The Message of the Cross.

The message of the cross is one of life and love. The hope of the world centers there. From it divine love has sent out a message of love and salvation to all the world. Here is the great difference between the practical effect of the cross in the life and all the systems of asceticism of the heathen world. The heathen conception of sacrifice is one of so much effort bartered for so much personal gain. The sacrifice of the cross means the surrender of so much of [illegible] life and so [illegible] the welfare of others and the [illegible]ing of the Master. To all the world the cross stands as a symbol of divine love sending forth a message of universal love to all. In your life the cross is [illegible] means that you are [illegible] to sacrifice your self for the welfare of those for whom the Master died. [illegible] follow [illegible] into the thick of the [illegible], so will you follow the cross wherever the Master leads. As the standards of [illegible] symbols of its glory, so the cross will stand for the glory of your Lord. At the last, before the Master, you shall exchange the cross for a crown, if you have been faithful unto the end.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT CEDAR BLUFF, MISS.

We have just closed possibly one of the greatest revivals ever held at Cedar Bluff. The meeting began July [illegible] and continued through August [illegible]. All the different churches united and invited Rev. E. A. Shafer, from Mobile, Ala., who was assisted by his singer, Rev. B. C. Glenn. He preached like one of the Old Testament prophets when he said, "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." His sermons were simple, though very impressive. He impressed upon the Christian people the importance of personal work, especially at the close of each service.

In spite of the incessant rains, he had fine congregations. The seating capacity of the church is about 450; the house was crowded with a hungry, thirsting multitude of people who were anxious to drink in his words of truth and wisdom. As the week grew older, the interest increased. Crowds were seated in buggies and wagons by each window and door, electrified with his dramatic eloquence. The Holy Spirit could be seen operating in the minds and hearts of all his hearers. After each service an opportunity was given for any who wished to unite themselves with the Church. As a result of the meeting about 5[illegible] united with the different churches.

On August 2 he preached a sermon to men only, on the importance of living purer lives, and teaching them that in the Church is the place to rear their children. Fraternally yours,

J. A. COLEMAN.

Argo Red Salmon is ready for the table as soon as the can is opened, or it may be served in 77 different ways.

In Germany the authorities have discovered what seems to be an excellent way to put an end to the caterpillar plague that has done such serious damage to the local forests. They catch the brown nun moth in enormous quantities, which lay the eggs from which the caterpillars come. Large and powerful reflectors are placed over a deep receptacle and powerful exhaust fans. At night two great streams of light are thrown upon the mountainsides a half-mile distant. The results have been astonishing. The moths drawn by the brilliancy come fluttering in thousands along the broad rays of light. When they get within a certain distance of the reflectors the exhaust fans take up their work and with powerful currents of air swirl them down into the receptacle. On the first night no less than three tons of moths were caught.

FROM AMERICUS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We are glad to report progress on our charge. We have a large circuit, containing six societies, having a membership of about three hundred. Though widely scattered, they attend services quite well. We have bright conversions at some of our regular services, and, of course, accessions where this happy work is in progress.

We have held three protracted meetings, viz.: Big Point, Salem and Pleasant Hill, which resulted in nine accessions and the quickening of the membership at those places.

Brother C. M. Chapman, of Montrose, did the preaching for us and did it well; also Brother L. R. Roberts helped at Pleasant Hill.

We have seven Sunday schools and four prayer meetings. Two of these are men's prayer meetings, and are doing good work, as they reach our young men, and train them for usefulness in the kingdom of God.

The spiritual atmosphere is getting better about here all the time. We pray the good Lord that great results may come as the reward of the faithfulness of his servants. At our last Quarterly meeting we reported nineteen accessions, twenty-four infants baptized, eighteen new subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and our missionary assessments paid in full. We hope to have a full report at Conference next December.

We have four more meetings to hold, besides the camp meeting at Salem. Hence, we have to improve somewhat on what we have already done, God helping us.

Doctor, before closing, would like to say that our people have been very kind to us. So many useful things have been given to us this year, that help a small salary as to really make the salary larger than the figures indicate. May the Lord richly reward them all.

With a promise for another report this year, I am yours,

W. W. PERRY, P. C.

SOUTH UNION CAMP MEETING.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have just closed a glorious, old-fashioned camp meeting at South Union. It was the best meeting that has been held for years. Throughout the entire meeting the Spirit of God was manifest. Especially during the latter part great interest was taken in the reclaiming and saving of souls. It was a beautiful sight to see fathers and mothers among their children working in behalf of the Master, friends and relatives in the altar praying for unsaved souls, and it was gladsome to the ear to hear the shouts of Halleluiah ringing through the whole encampment, as backsliders were reclaimed and sinners brought to Christ.

We were blessed with splendid ministerial help. Brother S. M. Thames, our presiding elder, was with us and did some good preaching. Then we had Brother J. W. Raper, of Louisville; Brother W. N. Duncan, of Durant; Brother T. C. Weir, of Starkville; Brother J. D. Simpson, of Ackerman; Brother J. R. Bright, of Robinsonville, and Brother C. M. Chapman, president of Montrose College, from the Mississippi Conference.

Brother Chapman is doing a noble work, preparing boys and girls for the higher colleges and universities and for a noble Christian life. May the Lord bless him in his work.

Our children's services were conducted by Brothers Raper and Chapman. These services were among the best, for there is nothing that pleases God more than the bringing of children to his kingdom.

Twenty-five were received into the church, besides the reclaiming of many luke-warm Christians.

W. F. ROGERS.

Chester, Miss.

FROM JONESBORO CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have just closed our first meeting for this season, which was at Stateline. We were assisted by Rev. Olin Ray, who preached five of the eight sermons [illegible] the meetings; also by Rev. [illegible], of [illegible], Tenn., who preached three times; and Brother [illegible], of [illegible], who preached three times and proved himself to be an interesting and successful altar worker.

We had forty-two conversions and thirty-six additions to the church. The meeting continued for nine days. We had a great revival in the church as well as among the sinners. The people say it was the best meeting that ever was known at Stateline. They are taking steps to seat the house and paint their church.

We have asked the Lord to give us one hundred additions to the church this year. In one-fourth of the meeting he has given us thirty-six of the number and more to follow at that church. Yours truly,

E. C. SULLIVAN.

REPORT FROM INDIAN MISSION.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I send you a report from the Indian Mission. I have been giving my whole time to the work this year and we are having a good time. We have just had a good meeting at Phillips' Chapel. Two backsliders were reclaimed and one other Choctaw joined the church.

We expect to hold a ten day's meeting west of Pearl River the fourth Sunday in August and a meeting at Tallachulac the second Sunday in September. Then we are to have a meeting two miles south of Philadelphia, and another five miles northwest of Philadelphia.

Our Sunday School work is doing very well, and we are trying to have a school at Moscow. I hope the Editor and readers of the Advocate will pray for me and the Choctaws.

SIMPSON J. TUBBY, P. C.

PROVENCAL CHARGE.

Dear Advocate: I write you from Shady Grove, one of the churches of Provencal Circuit. Our pastor and preacher, Brother Frank Power, who has accomplished great and lasting good to our church, began a protracted meeting on the 24th of July, lasting ten days, with the most happy results indeed for good.

There were some eighteen accessions to the church. The Lord being with us, everybody seemed deeply interested about their salvation, testifying to the glory of God, acknowledging their determination to lead a better life. We felt the power of faith and blessed the Lord for his great goodness. The old and stout-hearted sinner was made humble and penitent. It was a joyful time with the Christians.

Brother Power being alone, deserves much credit for his great zeal and faith in his calling to preach and teach the love of Jesus Christ to a dying world. He was made happy seeing his efforts were not in vain. May God bless our dear and beloved Brother. When his earthly toils are ended, may he be taken home to receive a rich reward.

With the hope we all meet again, I remain your brother,

C. A. PRESLEY.

MIGHTY FINE DOCTOR

"I had a mighty fine doctor," writes Mrs. Hattie Cain, "and he advised me to take Cardui for my troubles."

Mrs. Cain's case was a strange one and rather unusual, in that she had suffered so long before she obtained relief, so it makes it all the more interesting to learn how, at last, Cardui relieved her.

"For 16 years," she writes, "I suffered dreadfully. I would have to have a doctor every three months, and Oh! how I suffered! I would cramp and have convulsions, till it looked like I would die.

"My doctor said an operation was necessary, but I said I would rather die, so he advised me to try Cardui, which I did. I began to mend right away, when taking the first bottle, and now I have been well for 7 years and can do more work and walk and go where I please."

All reliable druggists sell Cardui. It is a standard remedy on their shelves, for which there is a steady demand, due to its genuine merit. Full directions for use accompany every bottle.

STEWARDS' INSTITUTE AT PELAHATCHIE, MISS.

At the Stewards' Institute for Harperville, Shiloh and Morton and Pelahatchie Circuits, ordered by the presiding elder and appointed by T. J. O'Neil, the authorized organizer, held at Pelahatchie, Miss., July [illegible], 1908, the following programme was discussed.

I. The Relation of the Steward and the Pastor.

II. The Relation of a Liberal Support of the Institutions of the Church to Temporal Prosperity.

III. The Claims of the Pastor Upon His People for a Support.

IV. The Claims of the People Upon the Pastor for His Time and Labor.

V. Should Each Member of the Church be Taught and Expected to Support the Institutions of the Church as a Religious Duty?

VI. The Relation of a Liberal Support of the Institutions of the Church to Spiritual Life.

There were only seven stewards present, but the discussions were lively and interesting. Mr. Ed Rhodes of Shiloh read an especially interesting paper on "The Relation of a Liberal Support of the Institutions of the Church to Temporal Prosperity."

A number of laymen other than stewards (and women) were present and some of them took part in the discussions.

Prof. John Rundle's presence and speeches contributed largely to the success of the meeting. I will say, by the way, Prof. Rundle is one of the best Sunday School Superintendents I ever knew.

The stewards present were so well pleased with the meeting they asked that another be appointed. This seems to be a time of great awakening among the laymen.

Some of the people pledged themselves to [illegible]. We are going to have prayer meetings, reorganize our Sunday School and live better than we have ever lived before.

We pray God to [illegible] more men in the ministry like our pastor, W. V. Shearer. He [illegible] at Lochtown(?), Miss. If we had more men in the ministry like him there would be better men and women and there would be [illegible] homes.

About fifteen [illegible] professed faith in Christ, five joined the Methodist Church, [illegible] the Baptist. The whole neighborhood was stirred as it has not been for years. Thank God for the victory that overcometh the world.

Subject: Friendship of David and Jonathan—1st Samuel xx, 30-42.

Golden Text: A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity—Proverbs, xvii, 17.

Every one that knew David was attracted to him. While he was not without faults, there was a grace about him that was not far from [illegible] loving. God loved him, and is it a wonder that he was loved by all that were capable of loving?

The elders of the people [illegible] loved him because he was a kind son, loving and obeying his father; he was the idol of Jesse's home in Bethlehem. He was attractive to his companions, those of his own age, for they knew that this gentle, modest boy had overcome a bear and a lion when he was alone, watching his father's sheep. Such bravery came from an inward consciousness of always doing that which he thought was right. This fearless spirit was clearly seen in after years when he became the beloved king of God's chosen people. While he abode in the king's house, David won the heart of Michal, the king's daughter, even then proclaiming himself unworthy to be the king's son-in-law. When Jonathan first saw David he loved him, and it was a love born of admiration akin to hero worship—a love that was constant and abiding until the day of his death. There were many causes that made it strange that Jonathan should love David. Jonathan was the prince, the heir apparent to the throne of Israel; but the nation had joined in the song of praise to David led by the dancing of joyful women. But jealousy never once entered the heart of the king's son. The same cause that produced affection for David in all except the king, made King Saul hate the shepherd boy with a murderous hatred, and it was galling to see how his own son loved him. "As long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom," said Saul, urging Jonathan's approval of putting David out of the way. Jonathan showed his opposition so strongly that Saul cast a javelin at him, having in his heart to murder his own son. Jonathan escaped the javelin and departed in fierce anger. The means adopted to separate the two loving friends only made their love stronger. Jonathan went at once to David and told him all that had taken place. They met in the same field where, a few days before, they came together and made a covenant one with another; their meeting must be in secret, for both of them were in danger. They had sworn eternal friendship; that is, Jonathan required David to swear, but David's confidence in his friend needed no such safeguard. Sincerity is never suspicious. David knew Jonathan better than Jonathan knew David. It was a scene full of pathos, there in the field, away from all save the young [illegible] who gathered the arrows, [illegible] two friends [illegible] danger that so unjustly [illegible]. "As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, there is but a step between me and death," were David's words to Jonathan, after [illegible] the king was [illegible] in his cruel pursuit of David. Now Jonathan was [illegible] David. For [illegible] the [illegible] arrows, the lad [illegible] between two [illegible] each other as they loved their own souls. As the lad was gone, David came forth from his hiding place, and as he advanced he bowed himself three times as a token of [illegible] to the prince before him. After this ceremony they kissed one another and wept with one another. It was right that David should love [illegible] was ready to serve him as the apple of his eye. [illegible] himself to [illegible] the affection of the king's son. Jonathan was a most [illegible] character. No act of his ever cast a shadow to dim the brightness of his life. Bowing to the will of God, he laid aside all claim to the throne of Israel and devoted his energy to aid him who had been chosen of God to succeed his father. David put [illegible] trust in Jonathan as a true and powerful friend. This earthly friend seemed to make David forget for the time the protecting care of the Almighty God, or else he would not have fled from Naioth, where he was perfectly safe.

There are times when the Christian seeks help from earthly sources when the heavenly Father is only waiting to answer prayer. David learned this [illegible] after years when he wrote in Psalms xxvii: "When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up." Taking an earthly view, Jonathan had cause to prove false to David, but David knew he would not do it. So after they both were satisfied that David could no more come safely to the king's house, they made a covenant of friendship one with another, an everlasting covenant Jonathan desired, and after events proved how sacred David considered his vows to his friend.

There is a friend, the sinner's friend, who stands between the Father's wrath and the offender. He gave up his throne and took upon himself the form of a servant that he might prove his friendship. He who is the greatest offender appreciates this friend the most, and loves him most. If such [illegible] can so closely bind two mortals as David and Jonathan, what can be said of him who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son to suffer and to die that others might have life. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" said Jesus and then gave his commandment, "That ye love one another as I have loved you." All who love the Lord, all who are named as his, ought to love as did David and Jonathan. Love as the very soul is loved. When there is such love as this among God's people, then all obstacles are removed, and the gospel has "Free course and is glorified." Alas! we cannot find such love on earth, and we turn to our Father in heaven for we cannot live without loving and being loved. [illegible] our prayer ever be that we may be able to comprehend, with all saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that we might be filled with all the fullness of God."

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting opened Friday, Aug. 7, 1908, and lasted ten days, closing last Sunday night. The weather was dry and warm, with the exception of a hard rain last Sunday afternoon.

The campground is situated on Bluff Creek, and is eleven miles from Clinton, La., in East Feliciana Parish. Rev. J. P. Haney, of Greensburg, was in charge of the meeting, and there were between 1500 and 2000 souls in attendance at one time or another during the ten days. Nearly all of the tents were occupied, and the meeting was conducted on the plan of fifty years ago. There were four services each day, and many persons professed Christ as a personal Savior and promised to live closer to God.

The preaching was of a high order, the sermons being forceful, earnest and to the point. The writer is safe in saying the preaching was as good as any he has ever heard. The preachers were Rev. R. W. Tucker, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District; Dr. J. T. Sawyer, Conference Missionary Evangelist; Rev. F. M. Freeman, of Clinton; Rev. A. S. Lutz, of New Orleans; Rev. J. P. Haney, Rev. J. E. Craig of Tickfaw, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb of Mount Hermon. Besides preaching several sermons, Brother Lutz conducted a Bible institute for young people and led the singing.

Our publisher visited the meeting and remained three days with the brethren. He was entertained part of the time at the tent of Brother and Sister Joe Young, of Montpelier. He also spent to profit a part of his time with the preachers at their tent. His hosts were untiring in their attentions to him, and he reports an exceedingly joyful stay on the campground, with many courtesies shown the AAVOCATE and its representative.

Rev. J. W. Harper, on whose work the campground is located, has been ill for a week or more, and was unable to attend the meeting.

CAMP MEETING.

Lake Camp Meeting will begin Aug. 28, 1908, at 8 p.m., and close Sept. 3, 1908.

PEN POINTS.

How sensitive some people are! If you meet them a time or two and do not happen to recognize them and give them as much attention as they think that you should, look out for them to sling at you a good, large piece of innuendo, so to speak, if they do not rebuke you directly. When you are about such, you must be on your "p's and q's," if you would avoid giving them offense.

The expression in the Psalm, "Who, passing through the Valley of Baca (weeping), make it a well," carries a beautiful thought. Patient sufferers, as they pass along through life, find wells (spiritual) from which they receive sufficient refreshment on their way to the Celestial City.

He had a sister, a young lady, who was at the tip-top in respect to modesty and real intelligence and refinement; and he was very fond of dancing and spoke strongly in its defense. A friend said to him: "I see that you do not have your sister along with you in the dances." "Oh," he said, "it would not do for her to attend one," laying much stress on the pronoun "her." This was his better nature speaking.

A certain preacher, being on a train one morning, met two young ladies returning from the city, and being assured that they had been there to attend the theatre the night before, pleasantly asked: "Did you say your prayers last night?" The answer was, "No, we felt so worn out before we retired." Selah.

NOTE FROM THE MISSION ROOMS.

In view of the fact that the Sunday School Editor has made provision in the periodicals for a monthly missionary programme, and that missionary lessons and facts are regularly furnished in all of the Sunday School periodicals, the Secretary of the Sunday School Board and the Secretary of the Board of Missions deem that it is no longer necessary to issue the Missionary Rally Day programmes as formerly. The Educational Department of the Board of Missions, however, can furnish suggestive "missionary programmes for the Sunday School," consisting of a series of fifteen missionary exercises. They have been neatly made into pamphlet form, three programmes in each pamphlet. The price of the pamphlet is 5 cents, single copy, 40 cents per dozen.

UNDIGESTED PLEASURES.

"What did you say?" asked the deaf old lady, catching hold of Elizabeth's skirts, as she was hurrying past. "He isn't going to die, is he?"

"No—the little glutton," said Elizabeth. "It's simply a case of undigested food, and he'll be all right to-morrow. That is, if he doesn't overeat again before that time."

"What did you say," asked the old lady, and Elizabeth raised her voice to repeat her statements.

"I thought the way he carried on in the night he must be going to die," said the old lady in a relieved tone. "It's too bad he overeats, but he's only a lad, and may not know any better."

"Even a boy ought to learn by experience," said Elizabeth, as the old lady still clung to her dress. "He's had three attacks just like this since he came, and he ought to know better by this time, if his mother hasn't any control over him."

They were on the porch of a big summer cottage—a cottage where the owner took roomers—and the old lady had arrived only the evening before. Being deaf, she did not hear the small talk of the place, and she was eager to know about the condition of the sick boy who had groaned so loudly as to awaken even her in the night. Elizabeth was waiting for a party of friends to go for a boating trip, so she sat down near the old lady out of pity, and because she did not like to ask to be released.

"Yes, but as long as older folks don't learn by experience, you ought to have some charity for boys," persisted the old lady, glad of a chance to talk to someone. "I've seen grown people who had no more sense than to make gluttons of themselves, though they knew they would suffer for it."

"Oh, yes!—drunkards and people whose appetites control them," said Elizabeth, "but not sensible people."

Just then there was a groan from the dining-room, and through the open windows floated the sound of the sick lad's voice: "I will have cake for breakfast. I'd like to know how a fellow is to enjoy himself if he can't have anything to eat. I don't care if I am sick."

"Ready for the boat-ride, Elizabeth?" called a gay voice. "We have to go down for some things at the store, and we'll come for you presently. I'm dead tired from yesterday, but I have to keep moving, I suppose."

"I'm tired myself," confessed Elizabeth, "but that's what we are here for. I could hardly hold my eyes open at the party last night, but I drank some strong coffee this morning, and that will help me through the day."

"More hot biscuits, Sarah!" came a voice from the dining-room.

"I just wish I had the bringing up of Freddie," said Elizabeth, to the old lady, when her friends had gone on. "I'd enjoy putting him on bread and water until he came to his senses."

"That would be a good plan," said the old lady, musingly. "You said a few minutes ago, dear, that sensible people did not make gluttons of themselves, but I've seen lots of folks who call themselves sensible act worse than that poor child in the dining-room. We have a young girl in our neighborhood who thinks of nothing but having a good time, until her life is clogged with undigested pleasures. She has no time to help her mother, no time for church-work, no time to attend Sunday School—no time for anything but pleasure. And she isn't happy either. She rushes from one thing to another, and suffers from social indigestion constantly. She pities the girls who go out only one evening in the week, and have to help with the work at home, but they have keener appetites than she has for pleasures. She always says, 'I will never be young but once,' when anyone warns her, and she actually thinks she is having a fine time."

The old lady paused to count her stitches, and Elizabeth looked at her keenly. For a moment she thought the old lady must mean her, but she remembered she had arrived only the evening before, and had never heard of such a person as Elizabeth Manton before. Swiftly the tasks she had shirked, the Sunday School class she had given up, the neglected work in her home, and all the things left undone to rush about feverishly from one pleasure to another rose up like ghosts to prove the old lady's statement. Her face was scarlet, but her decision was quickly made.

"Come on, Elizabeth!" called a score of merry voices through the grove. "The boat is ready."

"I'm not going," called back Elizabeth. "Mamma isn't feeling well this morning, and I'll stay with her to do the work in our room. Don't wait."

Then she added to the old lady as they moved on without her: "A little work may help me to get rid of my undigested pleasures."

"I wouldn't wonder," said the old lady brightly. "It wouldn't surprise me in the least."—Advance.

Glances at the World.

The life and conduct of public men have no little influence over their fellow-citizens. No good man would dare to assert the measure of his influence in his community. A bad man with a conscience would shudder could he learn how many souls he has led astray. It is especially important that a man, offering for high position, both of honor and profit, should do nothing, by precept or example, calculated to lessen the respect of his constituents for morals or the plain commandments of God. These reflections are made in view of the fact that one of the candidates for Congress in Louisiana, Mr. George K. Favrot, in naming dates for speaking to the people, included two Sabbaths, one speech for Sunday, Aug. 23, and two for Aug. 30. The Sabbath is holy, and to be kept holy, and while there is no law in Louisiana forbidding political meetings on the Sabbath, a large proportion of the citizens of the State are Christians, and abstain from all secular work on the Sabbath. Mr. Favrot's disregard of the day is obliged to be an offense to very many people, even among those who do not profess to be religious. We do not understand how a man of his high position, in a Christian land, can so far forget, or disregard the law of God, which says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

Under title of "Something better than money" the New York Herald prints an article full of thought and suggestiveness, from which we extract the following paragraph: "What is the greatest underlying need in the commercial world to-day? It is not simply more wages. Men are having larger wages than they have ever had in the history of mankind. It is more sympathy. It is a greater willingness on the part of those in position and power to enter into real appreciation of the trials and anxieties of those whom they control. It is a greater willingness on the part of the employe to realize that his employer has his cares as well as he; that he has his sleepless nights too, and thus, just as often as he can, to give him credit for at least trying, amid many perplexities of his own, to do his best." If these suggestions were put into practice generally, how much better the world would be! We would really have no need for labor organizations, or organizations of capitalists for mutual protection. Every man, rich and poor, would receive "a square deal."

Occasionally meat prices go skyward—at least high enough to put the best portions beyond the reach of poor people, and much pity is expressed on their account. It is wasted sympathy, for meat, either the best or the worst, is not at all times essential. We know some people who live well and are as healthy and happy as their neighbors who never eat meat of any kind or at any time. When the packers raise the prices there is one thing the consumers can do. The Philadelphia Inquirer says: "They can cut their consumption of meat down to a minimum or even do without it altogether. The doctors, who differ in so many things, agree in this, that we eat too much meat anyhow, and there is no doubt that we should be happier and healthier and a good deal better off in pocket if we ate less. With the markets full of fruits and vegetables, this is an especially good time to reduce the meat bill by dispensing with steaks and chops for breakfast and by lessening the meat allowance all around. It is quite possible to keep well and strong on a vegetarian diet."

A curious freak of the law is reported from France. A man and woman married. In the course of time they disagreed, and the woman secured a divorce and after a while married another man. In a trial that followed, the court decided the second marriage of the woman to be legal, but that the law did not free the man, and hence the court could not grant him the right to marry again. This virtually declares that he is still the woman's husband, though she is another man's wife. A husband without a wife seems to be a contradiction. It is sometimes the case in our United States that a decree of divorce carries with it the right of one party to re-marry, but denies it to the other, never though, as far as we know, decreeing that the divorced man is still a husband, or a divorced woman is still a wife. It seems to us that there should be not only a uniform divorce law for all the States of our Union, but an international law to regulate the business throughout the whole civilized and Christian world. Our divorce laws are a disgrace—not only a menace to society and the family, but in open violation of divine law.

Seldom in the history of our country do such race riots occur as occurred last week at Springfield, Ill. A negro guilty of assault upon a white woman infuriated the citizens of the town, and they gathered in uncontrollable mobs. The guilty negro was arrested and quickly carried to another town for safe-keeping, whereupon the mob proceeded to attack the quiet and peaceable negroes of the place, and to burn their homes. Many houses were destroyed, and up to last accounts at least six persons had met death—among them a feeble old negro, more than eighty years of age. His throat was cut. The riot raged for three days—the mob increasing in numbers to such an extent as to require three or four regiments of soldiers to put an end to the disturbance. This riot, occurring in the North, is but another proof of the fact that section lines are forgotten and the race instinct assertive when it comes to avenging wrongs inflicted on women. There is this difference: men in the South are content to put to death—sometimes in an inhuman way, we are sorry to say—the evildoer, while in the North vengeance is visited upon the whole negro population. The innocent are punished as well as the guilty—their lives being taken and their homes destroyed. We deplore and condemn such lawlessness, but protest long since became useless. The so-called unwritten law will prevail. True, public sentiment does not approve it, but there is always a sufficient number of men to execute lynch law regardless of the majority. The majority could not successfully interfere without the sacrifice of many lives. Such sacrifice, they feel is too great a price to pay to save the life of a wretch who greatly deserves to die.

It is amazing how much attention health authorities pay to some things, and how little they pay to others. For several years past the authorities have been making war on the mosquitoes in New Orleans. This is well, and we can certify they have been largely successful in their efforts, at least in the business district of the city. They have likewise made war on the sellers of adulterated milk — a special officer always being on the lookout for offenders, and he catches many of them. The many dairies established in the residence section of the city have all been driven out. Now they are trying, under a State law, which they induced the last Legislature to pass, to get rid of the cisterns which New Orleans from time immemorial has depended on for water. All these things were done, and are being done, in the interest of public health. The object in view is good. But, strange to say, they pay no attention whatever, as far as the public knows, to the most vicious and destructive evil with which the people have to contend. We never hear of them taking samples and analyzing the whisky and beer that is dealt out by the million drinks a day. Some of the newspapers frequently speak of the "low dives" and "vile concoctions" of conscienceless vendors, but the health authorities seem to take it for granted that the liquor sellers, one and all, deal in nothing but the purest spirits. Judging by the signs which we see on the streets occasionally, we think the liquors frequently make men sick as well as drunk, and now and then we hear of one dying of alcoholism, or "alcoholic poison." If not in the interest of public morals, in the interest of public health these dealers should be looked after now and then. If what we hear and read is true, much stuff is sold over the bar that is not pure, and could not pass inspection at the hands of an honest chemist. But it is more than we can expect for health officers in a big city to look after saloon goods. Nothing can be done save to drive the business out of the country.

The time [illegible] in one of our famous Summer cities [illegible] modern combination of [illegible] Jerusalem and classic Athens. In this city I had my first experience with a Biblical Institute for Preachers. The programme was rich, rare and racy. The speakers were men of national and international fame, and each a specialist in his own line. These men brought out of their treasuries new things and old, and the new served as a relish to make the old more palatable, and thus increased its nourishing properties. A lecture on the Gospel of Paul by a young member of my own Conference was specially fine, and I rejoiced that we had such a representation in that body of lecturers.

Did the reader ever stop to think of the fact that Paul was tramping over the Roman Empire and leavening its great cities with "the glorious gospel of the blessed God," long before a word of the New Testament was written? If you will delve there you will find a mine richer than the sands of Pactolus.

There was a series of lectures on Preaching which I did not attend. The area of my knowledge of preaching is so small, and the area of my ignorance on that subject is so vast, and my time is so short, it looked like a herculean task to contract the one and enlarge the other, and as I am no Hercules I concluded to cut out the lectures on Preaching. Altogether, the Institute was highly instructive and interesting, and afforded the audience a large measure of intellectual and spiritual enjoyment.

I have long entertained the idea that the most enjoyable vacation would be to spend the time at a country farm-house, away from the noise and rush and bustle and hustle of the madly-careering world. I knew of such a place, and wrote that I was coming. The simple answer came back, "I will meet you at the station." Here I spent two weeks of as quiet enjoyment as any seeker after happiness could desire. The whole place was a realization of my long-cherished ideal. The house had nothing about it that suggested "modesty." It was built in a time when men had not learned to combine comfort with convenience. It was all for comfort, and was thoroughly comfortable. It was situated in as beautiful a grove of oak, gum and hickory trees as an eye trained to discover the beauties of nature could ever see. Such a grove would have been a perennial delight to the fauns and satyrs of old Greece, and doubtless in some such grove Bryant was inspired to write his fine "Forest Hymn." From the porch the eye ranged over a wide area of growing crops, clothed in "living green," and rejoicing in a young life which sun and air and rain made more vigorous every day. To the right, the eye looked out upon "green pastures," where herds of cattle and flocks of sheep and droves of pigs and clumps of trees and babbling brook created a landscape that would have ravished the soul of a Turner with extatic delight. But ah me! the poultry-yard of the good housewife! That was a sight to make glad the soul of a parsonage pauper! It might not be wise for me to write of the crisp fried chicken, the flaky biscuits, the rich butter, the creamy milk, the steaming pot, redolent with the aroma of a beverage more invigorating than the ambrosia which handsome Hebe handed around among the gods of Olympus! Did the reader ever hear the lamented Dr. Wheat describe the supper which the jailer's wife set before Paul and Silas? That was a mere nothing compared with what I sat down to three times daily for ten days. The delicious memory of that feasting will serve to stay or stir an empty stomach in many a future day. HOME MISSION WORK IN NEW YORK.

BY MRS. E. R. KENNEDY.

Someone said to Phillips Brooks: "To me, you reveal more of God than any one else. I never think of you without soon forgetting you and thinking of God." In like manner, we are thus reminded in witnessing the courage of those who, by choice, are living their lives for the betterment of humanity in the slum districts of our great cities.

It was my privilege some days ago to visit the East Side in New York City, accompanied by Miss Watson, of Mount Vernon, a graduate of Vassar College. This winsome young lady exemplifies the fact that higher education may go hand in hand with the broadest philanthropy. Together, we wended our way through a seething population of Jewish men and women, along narrow, slippery sidewalks, at last finding ourselves in the parlor of the COLLEGE SETTLEMENT HOME.

The head worker, a cultured young woman, told us of the work. The Association is not connected with any religious organization; is purely philanthropic, and carried on principally by college graduates. Its object, chiefly, is to reach the women and children; to teach cleanliness and morals and a higher plane of living by training to habits of industry.

UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT.

At Eldridge and Rivington Streets is the University Settlement, with its public baths, having often a thousand young people a day come within its walls. This is the oldest work of its kind in America, an offspring of the same order in London. The funds of the Association are derived from membership dues, which range from $5 to $5000 annually, besides liberal donations from other sources. Miss Helen Gould, Mr. Rockefeller and other well-known millionaires are among the patrons of this institution.

This settlement work embraces twenty blocks and is principally among the Russian Jews, although other nationalities are largely represented. Little children crowd the narrow sidewalks, men and women call their wares, boys shout and play, and, altogether, with the rumble of the Second Avenue Elevated cars, there is a veritable bedlam of sounds, from which we are glad to move on to our next destination.

THE FIVE POINTS MISSION.

This mission, on the site of the old brewery, was established in 1850. Tolstoi says, "All religions are based on love, but Christianity is based on the highest form of love;" so we thought as the courteous Superintendent, Rev. Dr. Belcher, told us of the work. This mission surely is an expression of the highest form of love. Its object is to employ missionaries to labor among the poor of the city in the locality of Five Points; to maintain a school for the education of the children; provide food and clothing and other necessaries of life for the very unfortunate. A midday lunch is served every day to the school children free of charge, and a Fresh-Air Home provided for the Mission by the liberality of Mr. Olmsted and his sister.

About sixty children at one time, with their mothers or some older ones to care for them, are [illegible] at this home for a two weeks' outing during July and August. Others are sent when these return, and a little bundle of clothing is given each child for the trip.

As we followed Dr. Belcher over the building, looking into the class rooms, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the hard lives [illegible] of these [illegible] children, provided with these uplifting influences, we could realize the thought of the Master when he said: "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

The field for missionary effort grows wider every day; the Hebrew, the Latin races, the Mongolian are here, and for the most part crowded into our great cities—the "storm centers" of our civilization. The Five Points Mission (formerly New York Ladies' Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church) is doing a great work. It is reaching almost as vast an aggregation of foreign nationalities as in any foreign field. May the number of such missions be multiplied an hundredfold, and may we, as the Master's servants, be ready to enter the open door of the present opportunity for service in his name!

CHILDREN'S COURT.

There are many other philanthropies of similar character in this great city, all embodying the central thought of helpfulness. One specially of far-reaching results and great benefit to future citizenship is the Children's Court, where the small offenders face the judge whose decisions mean so much to these youthful criminals. Judge Wyatt, now presiding over this court, gives the following testimony: "Out of [illegible] children placed on probation from September, 1902, until the end of 1907, it has been possible by this system to set the feet of 5,503 so firmly in the way that leads to good citizenship that neither has their commitment to institutions been necessary, nor have they been brought back to the Court for recurrent offenses. There has been a saving to the State of more than 84 per cent." Save the children, and we save America; save America, and we can save the world!

GREETINGS.

Loving greetings to the dear friends and members of the Home Mission Society in Louisiana, and an earnest prayer for a great rallying of all our forces in the Master's service during this season of opportunity.

ONE DAY OF THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX.

Dear Brethren: I am just in receipt of a letter from Rev. H. L. Crumley, of the North Georgia Conference Orphanage. He calls attention to the fact that the Work-Day Offerings have increased from year to year to the following enormous figures: in 1906, $[illegible]; in 1907, $11,600. I am going to follow his instructions as closely as possible and I do hope you will do all you can to make our Work-Day [illegible] a great success. I do wish I could feel that all of our preachers would help me, and do all possible to get every clerk, stenographer, merchant, lawyer, doctor, preacher and everybody else simply give one day of 366 for the building of our new Home, and the $2,500 will reach us as easily as though sent by an angel.

I am sure every Sunday School Superintendent will help us. The Superintendent of the [illegible] Sunday School believes that school will [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Brother [illegible], Mayor of Lake Charles [illegible] Brother Schmidt [illegible] his [illegible] [illegible] Sunday [illegible] [illegible] have been deserving. [illegible] [illegible] Zion [illegible] a united front, [illegible] [illegible] we will [illegible] our big [illegible] [illegible] by Work-Day alone.

I expect to send out literature to circulate in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] etc. [illegible] help this [illegible].

THE CHURCH'S REAL POWER.

Never was there so much church machinery, [illegible] [illegible] culture, material wealth, religious [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] endeavor [illegible] [illegible] missionary and [illegible] [illegible] pastors, [illegible] [illegible]. Yet with all this, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and a felt need of some supernatural power higher than man to awaken a slumbering world, and to precipitate a Holy Ghost revival that revolutionizes [illegible] changes men's lives, opening the rent veil of Christ's torn flesh into the very heart presence of Jehovah, and that brings men to the foot of the cross, where they will ground their arms [illegible] [illegible] to the gospel of our Christ.

Where is that power? Where is the lost secret? Where is the [illegible] of all our machinery? [illegible] the delay of the long-talked-of and [illegible] revival? The answer is in this Scripture: "Ye shall receive power, the Holy Ghost coming upon you." "When he, the Holy Spirit, is come, he will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn away the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of Hosts." (Mal. iii. 5.)

The Holy Spirit coming upon you will give [illegible] power to live right, power to stem the tide of worldliness and go up stream, power to stand in the minority and though the odds are against [illegible] [illegible] go through with God. That great revival will never come until we pay the price. If we pay the price, it will be the Holy Spirit [illegible] [illegible] and we proving true to that trust. —Exchange.

THE ROD.

A silent world, a lonely path,
My feet hath trod.
A veiled face, but, ah! through it

No deadened ear up there,
No tear-dimmed eye.

And so 'tis good that I

A PRIVATE LETTER.

We feel sure that Brother P. A. Richardson, of Norwood, La., will pardon us for printing part of the letter received from him a few days since. We appreciate very much his expressions of personal regard, but we leave them out. He writes:

AUGUST 14, 1908.

Dear Brother Boswell: As I am sending my subscription to the ADVOCATE, will write a line to you to say I still enjoy your editorials. I begin to feel very lonely. Very few of my old acquaintances—indeed, none—are near me; most of them have "passed away." Present conditions and circumstances are such that I very seldom see a Methodist preacher or hear one preach. A recent visit to my two brothers, at Woodville, Miss., gave me the privilege of seeing the church building (which is looking badly—greatly in need of repairs) where I heard great sermons by great men more than a half-century ago—Kavanaugh, Marvin, Watkins, Burruss and others. Many sermons are fresh in my mind which I heard from twenty-five to forty years ago.

And now that I am growing old, to be thus situated, is it any wonder that I feel lonely? I feel a special interest in the old preachers. May you ever be the recipient of heaven's best gifts. Pardon this liberty with you. Fraternally yours, P. A. RICHARDSON.

BROTHER LEWIS AND THE EDITOR INDORSED.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I want enough space in the ADVOCATE to thank Rev. T. W. Lewis for his timely article in the ADVOCATE of Aug. 6, 1908, entitled "A Serious Situation." And also, Doctor, to thank you for your editorial of the 13th, "A Matter for Serious Thought."

When such men as Brother Lewis and yourself—men of experience and piety, men having mature judgments, men whom the Church trusts, men who, though loyal in every respect, yet have the courage to speak of glaring failures in the Church—when such men, I say, sound a note of alarm, I am made to feel that my articles in the ADVOCATE last year were not out of order.

I hope you will permit me one suggestion now, which, while not very comforting, may serve to allay fear as to the development of young preachers. In my articles of last year, which were based upon the address of the Bishops to our last General Conference, I took occasion to speak of the consideration due the young preacher. At last, the observation seems to have become more general that the young preacher is not in evidence as much as he should be, and that in consequence thereof the Church is suffering. In connection with this thought, also, it happens that the old preacher is being called from labor to reward. Will not the Church sail upon peaceful waters when she has no young preachers to consider and no old preachers to have a concern for? If it were not for ridicule, that last sentence would not look very well in a Church paper, but it sometimes happens that ridicule is more forceful than logic.

All Protestantism is suffering a shortage of ministerial recruits, and it may be that while we are looking for a general cause for such a condition we may overlook many specific causes. Why should we be searching for the mote in our brother's eye while a beam may be in our own eye? If the specific causes that produce this condition in any given church, or division thereof, be sought out and remedied, then we may be able to see clearly some general cause. In other words, if we will remove the beam from our own eye we may then be helpful in clearing the vision of our brother.

Let the wrongs in our midst be righted; let existing abuses be corrected; let obsolete notions and methods be cast aside for new thought and progressive methods; let there be a turning away from secularity unto God; and it is my opinion that God will then honor our prayers for more laborers to be sent into his vineyard.

A GOOD BOOK.

Mr. Editor: Let me call attention to "The Gist of the Old Testament," by Frank Seay, of the Alabama Conference, published by Smith & Lamar, a booklet of 86 pages that will be exceedingly helpful to those who want to get a connected view of the Old Testament.

Part I. gives the names in the book of itself, its divisions, sources, growth and the various versions, with a classification of the literature, the theme, and a glance at Israel's contribution to the world.

Part II. sketches the history of the Hebrews, the political, social, economic life and ideals in Abraham's day, the founding of the nation, the forming of the kingdom, its division, fall, captivity and the return.

Part III. traces the growth of the laws and institutions, civil and religious.

Part IV. outlines the origin and development of prophecy, with a brief account of the lives, methods, labors, distinctive doctrines and messages of the prophets, closing with Messianic prophecy and the wider outlook.

Part V. is a study of the poetry of the Bible, its forms, characteristics and contents, including copious examples of idyls, lyrics, songs of national victory and calamity, etc., the world's greatest dramatic poem being also suggestively outlined.

Part VI. traces the Wisdom Element, and describes the philosophy of the Bible, closing with suggestions as to its philosophy of history.

This rising young scholar, son of the late Governor Seay, of Alabama, deserves the special thanks of Sunday School teachers who would like to have a guide to the vital study of this most vital of all books, rather than a scrappy study about it. Its value has been proved by actual test in successful classes. Teachers who will carry their students carefully through the Old Testament with this guide will give them an appreciation of that wonderful literature not to be had by the ordinary methods.

THE SADDEST THING.

BY W. A. MORGAN.

The saddest thing I ever saw was a man with white hair and a black heart, a wrinkled face and a dead soul with vengeance on his brow, and murder in his heart; with no joy, but much trouble; with no peace, but a great quantity of unrest and dissatisfaction; with no love, but filled with hate; with no friends, but plenty of enemies; with no light, but filled with darkness; with no grace, but loaded down to the water line with sin; with no money to buy food, but an appetite for strong drink driving him to a grogshop like a beast to the slaughter pen; with no salvation, but with damnation already burning in his very bones; with no Christ to love and pity him, but with bloated-faced devils to mock and hiss at him; with no heaven in sight, but an awful hell of eternal misery just waiting for him to stagger and fall under his load of guilt and condemnation, and plunge into outer darkness where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched.

Wise is the man who knows what not to say, and remembers not to say it.—Exchange.

BROTHER BOYD NOT ANSWERED.

BY REV. [illegible]

In the Advocate of June 18th, Brother T. M. Boyd asks, "What is the difference between a sinner that does not claim to be a Christian, and a Christian that claims to sin every day?"

In the Advocate of Aug. 13th, Brother T. C. Montgomery attempts to answer this question and utterly fails; and he not only fails to answer, but he gives us some very erroneous teaching.

The fact is, as I see the matter, there is but one answer to the question. There is no difference at all. A sinner is a sinner no matter what his claims may be. It is not what we profess, but the life we live that counts with God and with men. A man is a Christian or he is not a Christian; he is a saint or a sinner.

The trouble with Brother Montgomery and a great many other people is, they seem to have no definite idea of the meaning of sin. They speak of sin as if it is what one does that makes him a sinner, while the fact is, it is not what one does but what one is that counts with God.

Sin is a state of soul, it is our attitude towards God. A man is a sinner not because of what he does, but because of what he is.

A man is not a liar because he tells a lie, but he tells a lie because at heart he is a liar. The act is but the fruit of the inner condition. A truthful man not only does not lie, but he has no desire to lie; an honest man does not steal, because he does not want to steal. The Christian not only does not habitually commit sinful acts, but if by any chance he should do so, he goes out like Peter and weeps bitterly.

Christ said he that violates the least of these commandments is guilty of the whole. I take that to mean that where there is a soul condition that will permit one to violate the least commandment without immediate repentance that this proves a state of soul which makes the man at heart sinful, and therefore out of harmony with God and in a lost condition.

It is not the amount one steals, nor the number of lies one tells, that makes him a thief or a liar, but the fact that he can steal or lie at all. So it is not the number of sins we commit, but that we can sin at all, that makes us sinners, or not sinners.

Brother Montgomery quotes I John ii. 1, "My little children, these things I write unto you, that ye sin not, but if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the [illegible]," and then says this Scripture proves that we sin. It proves nothing of the sort, but on the contrary, it proves the possibility of living without sin. The admonition is to do this, and then he adds, "if we sin we have an Advocate with the Father," we are not hopeless.

And then he quotes I John i. 8, "If we say we have no sin we deceive ourselves etc.," and says, "This proves that we sin." Wrong again! This does not prove, nor does it intimate, that the Christian sins. If he will read the whole chapter he will see that the effort of John is to prove the need of the blood of Christ to cleanse us from all sin, and he means in this eighth verse that if any man says he has never sinned, and therefore does not need the blood of Christ, he deceives himself.

He says, "There seems to be a contradiction between I John i. 8, if we say we have no sin, etc., and I John iii. 9, 'whosoever is born of God, doth not commit sin, etc.'" There is not even a seeming contradiction here; he makes his own man of straw. The first passage refers to the one who says he does not need the blood of Christ, because he hath not sinned. The other to the one who has been saved by that blood. And then he proceeds to knock down his man of straw, by saying, "it is the flesh that sins, but the spirit is innocent."

This is the doctrine I conceive which Brother Boyd said was so dangerous, and I heartily agree with him. To me this is the most glaringly false and dangerous doctrine ever invented by man or adopted by any church. The whole tenor and teaching of Holy Writ is against it, and I do not believe that there is one single passage in the Bible, when taken with its context, that can be twisted into any such meaning.

And then he misquotes John. He asks, "What does John mean when he says, 'if we say we have no sin we are liars?'" He does not give the reference here, and I fail to find any such passage in the Book. The nearest approach to it is I John i. 10, "If we say we have not sinned we make him a liar," and that means if we say we have never sinned, and therefore don't need the cleansing blood of Christ.

Again he says, "If we live above sin we are better than Paul," and here he does just what Peter said would be done, he wrests Paul's writings to his own hurt. But, suppose Paul did not live above sin, is that any reason why we should not? God never gave us Paul as our example, nor did Paul request us to follow him, only as he followed Christ. But hear Paul at the end of that life, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith." When one keeps the faith he lives without sin surely.

He says the difference between a Christian and a sinner is, "A Christian is a sinner saved by grace and the sinner is not."

What is the saved sinner saved from? From his sins, surely, and if saved from his sins, he is no longer a sinner. If so, how can he that is dead to sin live any longer therein?

Then he asks, "how are we free from sin?" and answers, "our heart is free from sin," or he says as St. Paul puts it, "our mind." Well, if the mind that was in Christ Jesus be in us we are sure not to sin every day nor any day.

Again he says, "the worst thing we can do is to tell the sinner we don't sin." That would be bad if we did, for then we would be a living lying to [illegible] of sins.

One thing is sure, the world demands of the professing Christian that he shall live different from the world, and if he don't do it, they have no respect for his claim to religion, but then he says, "we ought to be careful how we walk in [illegible]." Of what shall we be careful? Not to sin, or not to let the world know that we sin. Which? God be merciful to the mind that could conceive, and to the man that could get his consent to preach such a doctrine. Amen!

BROTHER MONTGOMERY SILENCED.

BY REV. R. F. PICKETT.

Dear Advocate: In reply to Bro. Montgomery's article of Aug. 13, I wish to say that if any other preachers had thought it necessary to reply to the article of Brother Boyd, they would not have written as he has, for I have not seen anything lately more Calvinistic than his article, and if I had written such a one I would have thought it useless to send to the ADVOCATE for publication.

Now against such teachings as this we often have to contend with, and if our brother would learn the purpose of the passage he quotes to prove we, Christians, sin, he will find that St. John in I John i. 8, refers to a class of people who claimed they had never sinned, hence had no need of the atonement, and he does not teach that a Christian cannot and may not, under any conditions, sin. But "if any man sin we have an Advocate," for he says (I John iii. 8), "He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." And this is the whole tenor of John's writings. And as to the distinction of sins of the body and the spirit as drawn from Rom. vii, there is no such distinction; neither is it an expression of the apostle's experience any more than Rom. iii. 10 to 18; but it is a description of the condition of men under the law, and the impossibility of the law to save a man from the power and dominion of sin; but he goes on to describe in the 8th chapter how we are freed from this [illegible] of sin and the law (verse 2): "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death" (and read verses 3 to 10). I should be afraid to live near a Christian who sins with his body and can't keep the commandments; he is thus licensed to slander, [illegible] and murder.

St. Paul's experience was this: I Thess. ii. 10: "Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe;" and there is nothing in his teachings to show that amid all his trials and labors and afflictions that he sinned; on the other hand, he teaches that we are to live above sin: I Thes. iii. 12-15; Thes. iii. 10-13 and v. 14-23; Titus ii. 11-15; Rom. xii. 1-2; Heb. xii. 14; I Cor. [illegible]; Eph. iii. 14-21. Mr. Wesley and even the [illegible] teaches we are to live above sin, "the absolute necessity of holiness of heart and life in religion," and along this line would ask our Brother and others who are recommending Brother Lawrence's book to read "The Perfection of the Saints," by Bishop Hendrix [illegible] Publishing Houses 10 cents.

A salvation from sin is the Bible standard; to detract from it in any way, or can anything else makes Christ to die in vain. See Mat. i. 21: "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins," and Rev. i. 5-6: "Unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father, to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen."

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

EVERYWHERE.

By Rev. H. Whitehead.

Not here, not there, but everywhere
  Let praise to him abound.
All hail the tale that love avails
  The wide, wide world around.

The night is light with radiance bright,
  He sets the world aglow.
He dries the eyes where sorrow cries
  And heals the hearts of woe.

The stain and pain were not in vain
  Upon the cross he bore;
The lost, sin crossed, and tempest tossed,
  Need bear their guilt no more.

Who heeds he leads to Christ-like deeds,
  That they may grow like him.
He shares our cares, and burden bears,
  And we shall dwell with him.

Not here, not there, but everywhere
  As men may come and go,
Our praise we'll raise through passing days,
  To him whose love we know.

New Orleans, August, 1908.

LIKE SERVANT, LIKE MASTER.

Millie Bennett lay on her bed tossing with pain and suffering. It was not much of a bed—two old boxes against a wall, and she herself covered only with an old ragged coat. The windows were broken and stuffed with paper and pieces of board; the atmosphere of the room close and offensive, for Millie was dying of cancer—slowly dying, uncared for and unloved.

She had heard of God in a dim, far-off way, and of his love for sinful men and women, but her heart had remained untouched by the story. The Savior's love had never been brought home to her heart and conscience, and she was dying—as she had lived—without God, and without hope in the world.

Linda Murray had not been long in Norchester, and was waiting for a sphere of work to open up. She was a lady of refinement and dainty instincts—her face was very sweet and gentle, and her voice low and tender.

Alone in her bedroom, with "the door shut," she had been praying to her Father who seeth in secret, that he would send her forth on an errand of love.

The heat of the day was over, and the sun setting in the west, as she left her home and wandered down into the poorer part of the town.

Pearl Alley opened out of one of the main thoroughfares, its squalor and dirt a striking contrast to the luxury and wealth of Main Street. She stopped a moment at the door of Millie Bennett's house, uncertain whether it could be inhabited or not, so dilapidated and dingy did it look. She waited a moment, then tapped at the door and tried the handle. It yielded to her touch, and she entered the room.

"Come in," said Millie, turning herself round to look at the visitor.

"I think I will stay here," Miss Murray answered, repressing a feeling of disgust at the close atmosphere.

"I have come to read to you—may I?" and she opened her Bible at the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah: "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."

"Don't read any more," cried the woman. "I don't want to hear any more; it ain't true—you know it ain't true for the likes of me. Why, you're afraid to come near me, lady; you wouldn't touch me for anything. You are the servant of the pure and holy Jesus. I guess he's like you—too pure and holy for a rag like me. It's a case of like servant, like Master. No, go [illegible] visitor."

Linda Murray [illegible] then, in a flash, [illegible] what she herself [illegible] have [illegible] eyes. [illegible] had been [illegible] Jesus Christ [illegible] to her.

Then [illegible] filled with tears. Was this poor [illegible] her Master? [illegible] Was she misrepresenting him? [illegible] With a silent cry for forgiveness and power to [illegible] what Christ would have her to do, she went forward quickly and knelt by Millie's side.

"It is true—every word is true," she cried, gently drawing the woman's head to her breast. "God loves you—Jesus Christ was wounded for [illegible]. You may, if you will, lay your sins on him, for the Lord has laid on him the iniquity of us all. [illegible] all my sins there once and he bore them all away. He died a cruel, shameful death that our sins might be blotted out."

Millie answered not a word; she could not, [illegible] this message of love had reached her heart, and [illegible] was overpowered, overwhelmed. She put [illegible] her head and grasped the [illegible]

"Oh!" cried Miss Murray, through her tears. "I think I might have gone away and never shown you how pitiful and tender the Savior is. You do believe he loves you, don't you? You do know that Jesus is offering you forgiveness for all your sins? It is just for you to accept or refuse it. He stoops very low to win our love; so, [illegible] however far down we may have got, we are never too far down to reach him because, you see, he reaches us."

Slowly the tears gathered in the sufferer's eyes and trickled down the poor marred cheeks. The good Shepherd had come very close at last, and the touch of human love had made the sin-stricken soul understand. It was easier now to believe in God's love; easier to realize he would not despise her, since one of his disciples had reflected a little of his love.

"He is seeking you to-day," Miss Murray whispered. "Shall we tell him you want to be found of him? that you are longing to hear his voice in your soul—longing that he should take your sins away?"

Millie bent her head silently. The conflict in her sin-tossed soul was over.

"God bless you for coming, Miss," she said at length. "I do believe in him now. He has sent you as his messenger to me. You don't know what it has meant to a poor outcast like me to feel your touch. It was the touch that did it, miss—that opened my heart to receive your message."

Miss Murray stooped down, and in an impulse of love and pity kissed the poor woman's forehead as she took her leave.

THE CHURCH WILL PREVAIL.

Our Lord said that the gates of hell should not prevail against his Church. It is just as plainly written in the Word that the Church shall triumph over the gates of hell. Daniel saw the Church, which he called "a kingdom," and declared it "shall never be destroyed, but shall itself break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms." David spoke in a similar strain: "The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder and cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall leave them in derision. Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath and vex them in his sore displeasure. * * * Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Isaiah said: "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper," but every weapon wielded against the powers of darkness, though not carnal, "is mighty through God to the pulling of strongholds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God."

A thousand times and oftener have men offered organized opposition to the Church, only to be repulsed, or foiled in their evil purposes. Even in the very beginning of the gospel, when believers were few and without worldly power and influence, with enemies all around them, they won the victory. They were undaunted in the face of persecution which sometimes resulted in cruel death. But the blood of every martyr proved fruitful seed that produced harvests of souls. And all along through the ages "the blood of the martyrs has been the seed of the Church."

The Church meets with no such violent opposition to-day that it did in the past, but her foes are neither dead nor inactive. The spirit of enmity is just as strong as ever. Instead of open persecution, and the calling of men to account before civil magistrates for their faith, the printing press and free speech are endeavoring to accomplish the work of destruction. Infidel literature in the shape of leaflets, periodicals and novels is being scattered over the land. Now and then a popular lecturer takes the platform to turn the people away from God. But for all the poisons concocted and sent out there are antidotes, and the Church of God continues to triumph.

Something more than one hundred years ago the most noted infidel of his day prophesied that within fifty years there would not be a Bible in existence. More than twice fifty years have passed, and the Bible lives, not only the most precious treasure of the Church, but the most popular selling book of the age. Its printing presses never stop running, and give the Word of God in millions of copies in almost every known language and dialect of the earth. So little did that infidel know of the power of truth.

The truth herein set forth finds practical exemplification now and then in modern times. Something like forty years ago a town was laid out in a developing section of country. The founder was dominated by the spirit of liberalism, and called his new-made town Liberal. Lots were sold to none but liberal-minded men. There was to be no church, no religion. There was to be no recognition of the holy Sabbath. A school was organized on Sunday for the purpose of publicly teaching the principles of infidelity. The town is living to-day, but its infidelity no longer controls. It is in the hands of Christian men. Towns of that character can scarcely thrive on American soil.

It is recorded that several years ago there was organized and incorporated in Australia a body of Free Thinkers. The idea of the incorporators was to put the churches out of business. A man of some wealth, hoping to aid in the work, bequeathed in his will an estate of $55,000 to the organization, stipulating that, if the organization was not in existence at his death, the property was to go to his son and daughter. The man died in 1905. His executors could not find the society. It had been dead ten years.

Thus says the Christian Intelligencer: "New cults of all sorts spring up here and there, make their boast and appeal to those who go about with itching ears for novelties, gather their little coteries of adherents, have their little day, and then are no more, while the marshalled hosts of the Lord, which they will not join, but attempt to oppose, march triumphantly on toward final, universal conquest."

UNION STILL IN THE FUTURE.

Something more than two years ago a strong effort was made to bring together the Congregational, the United Brethren, and the Methodist Protestant Churches. Success at one time seemed assured. Commissioners met and agreed upon the terms of union. They parted feeling that in a short time the three churches would be one. For some reason, we do not know what, progress was arrested. Negotiations are suspended if not entirely broken off. To the Methodist Protestants there came another, and a sudden call. Its General Conference was in session in Pittsburg. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session in Baltimore, sent a delegation, headed by one of the Bishops, and urgently begged the Protestant brethren to return to the old fold from which it withdrew in 1828. A delegation was never more heartily received, unless it was the delegation immediately sent by the Protestants to the General Conference still in session in Baltimore.. This delegation was headed by the President of the Protestant General Conference. In his response to the Methodist Episcopal brethren he raised the biggest shout ever heard in that shouting body.

This looked like a case of love at first sight, and an immediate marriage. But alas! "There's many a slip between the cup and the lip." The Methodist Episcopal Church seems likely to lose the cup altogether. The Protestant brethren are not as much inclined to union as at first supposed. The Methodist Recorder, the leading paper of the Protestants, does not favor the alliance. It acknowledges the existence of "excitement," and, of course, a strong sentiment in favor of union, but says the "men who were swept off their feet by the power of eloquence and wit and flattery will soon find footing again. * * * The song of the syren will die away—it is growing fainter day by day—only the faint echoes of it are heard now, and men are coming to themselves."

The Recorder says: "Something happened; some said that it thundered; others that an angel spake. The consensus of opinion is that the voice was that of an angel; but it has not yet been determined whether the angel was one of mercy or destruction. If the voice we heard was the voice of an angel of mercy let us thank God that we heard it in time to escape unfortunate alliances. If the voice was that of a destroying angel, let us speedily make ready for the time of our destruction as a denomination. Let us die like brave men in the front rank of the battle."

The Recorder doubtless voices the sentiments of many thousands in the Methodist Protestant Church. The attention of readers is called to the things which brought the Methodist Protestant Church into existence. O'Kelley and those who followed him favored "lay representation" in the Conferences, and violently opposed Bishops and presiding elders. There were no doctrinal differences then—none have arisen since. The Episcopal Methodists have conceded all that the Protestants asked as to lay representation, but retain the Episcopacy; and also the presiding eldership, only since their last General Conference presiding elders are called district superintendents. If there was cause for schism in 1828, there is just cause for remaining apart in 1908.

We do not sympathize one iota with the Methodist Protestants in their opposition to the polity of the Episcopal Methodism, but we heartily sympathize with them in upholding principles which they believe to be right. Union would prove a curse without the spirit of unity. Should these Protestants come into the Methodist Episcopal Church by compulsion, that is, by force of a majority vote, there would be friction, and often open rebellion, else in the administration there would be concession to the Protestant element that would bring about murmuring and discontent.

If union is as desirable as some seem to think, the best way to effect it is for every man who feels like uniting to go along into the body he favors on his own responsibility. That would settle the matter not only with the Methodist Protestants, but with some others who are always talking about the sin of schism, and "altar against altar."

False friends are like shadows, keeping close to us while we walk in the sunshine, but abandoning us when we cross into the shade.—Exchange.

THE BAPTIST DRIFT.

In one of our exchanges we read an article under title of "The Baptist Drift." In this article the writer tells his readers that there is "a weakening along the lines of Baptist orthodoxy—a distinctive Baptist drift." He says: "England has already drifted—the North is drifting, and the South is beginning to drift." In England, "disintegration of Baptist Churches is only a question of time if they do not stop coddling with others." "In the North, union is in the air, and a corresponding weakening of the Baptist position." "In the South, it is union-evangelism that is threatening the Baptist position."

This "drifting" indicates a fearful state of things. Trees that are uprooted, drift. Timbers dislodged, drift. Houses lifted by high water, drift. All these drift with the current. In the case of our drifting brethren, it seems they are going with the tide. Torn from the old landmarks which kept them from affiliation with the brotherhood of Christians, they have drifted into a clearer and broader sea, where the horizon is so enlarged that they can recognize others besides themselves, and have resolved to be shackled no more, but to go out and enjoy the "liberty wherewith Christ hath made them free."

All this wailing about the Baptist drift is because men and women in the Church who love the Lord Jesus see the mark of the Christ in other believers and the signs of the true Church in other communions than their own, and have determined to worship with them, and join with them in saving sinners. In the estimation of this writer, those who drift from the Baptist position, drift from Christ, and like useless driftwood, are lost.

Now, all this wailing, uttered in utmost sincerity, has back of it the idea that the brotherhood to which the writer belongs is the only brotherhood of Christ in the world, and that Christ is depending on it to carry the gospel to all the nations of the earth. This idea has begotten in him a conceit that finds no justification in reason, religion or the Word of God. Hear him: "The hope of the world's evangelization lies with Southern Baptists. They are God's peculiar people in that they 'contend earnestly for the faith.' The heathen or Macedonian cry comes to us. The religious world is looking on. God is watching us." The conceit of this paragraph lies not in the great Baptist world as the keepers and preachers of the truth, and expects them to evangelize the whole earth, but that he has chosen the "Southern Baptists," a fractional part only of the denomination, and laid on them the whole heavy burden. They alone of all the tribes are faithful, and alas! they "are beginning to drift." This reminds us of the old brother, who, deploring the low state of religion in his community, said: "There are only two good men among us: Brother Smith and myself, and I sometimes doubt the goodness of Brother Smith."

Only one set of faithful prophets left in the whole earth!—the Southern Baptists. To them alone goes out the Macedonian cry! Without in the least depreciating the preachers among the Southern Baptists, or the missionaries they send to the heathen nations, we beg to ask what sort of a cry comes daily to the Baptists of the North? to the Methodists of the North? to the Presbyterians, and Congregationalists? to the Southern Methodists, and to other smaller evangelical bodies? These different orders of Christians seem to hear a voice, and they answer. They are preaching the gospel everywhere, and sending their missionaries to the uttermost parts of the earth. They are just as intelligent, just as consecrated, just as active, and just as faithful to the Master as any people on earth. And they are preaching the pure Word of God and saving souls. But this brother does not acknowledge them as factors in the work, or as worthy of the Lord's notice. No, no. God is watching only the Southern Baptists. The religious world is looking on—standing by, viewing with astonishment the evangelization of the world by Southern Baptists. My brother, stand in your lot, and carry on your work, but be assured that nine-tenths of the religious world, attending to the Lord's business, do not know that such people as the Southern Baptists are in existence. And be assured also that if the heathen world is to depend on the Southern Baptists for the gospel, as true as they are and as faithful, the judgment trumpet will sound before the work is completed.

All honor to the Southern Baptists who are faithful and energetic and succeeding more and more as the years go by. This they are doing, as Dr. Gambrell says, in spite of "Baptist fools." We hail them, not as the sole evangels of heaven, but as brethren and co-laborers in the Lord's work.

THAT QUESTION.

Brother Boyd asked a question, and Brother Montgomery endeavored to answer it. Now we have on hand much matter for Brother Montgomery's consideration. Two of the articles are given in this issue of the ADVOCATE. What we print this week will be quite sufficient on a question so one-sided.

In this connection we take occasion to say that it is not expected of an editor to indorse all he allows to go into his columns. We by no means agree with Brother Montgomery. We were as much surprised at his sentiments as Brother Pickett was at us for allowing his article to appear. We hope the article did no harm. If it did no other thing, it brought to the public two articles of merit that otherwise would never have seen the light. That is some gain. Let us be thankful.

PERSONAL.

We learn from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate that Bishop Morrison will change his residence from Birmingham to Florida. At what point the Bishop will locate is not stated.

Rev. Robert S. Walton has been appointed by Bishop Galloway to supply Hammond Station for the remainder of the year, Rev. J. W. Tinnin having surrendered the charge.

Rev. J. A. B. Jones passed through the city last week on his return from Texas, where he spent more than a month preaching, making prohibition speeches, participating in camp-meetings and fishing. He seems to have had an "all-round good time."

Since reporting the meeting at Ackerman, Miss., Rev. J. D. Simpson has held two other meetings on his charge with good results—fifty-four persons uniting with the Church. He was assisted in these meetings by Rev. J. W. Raper and Rev. W. E. Rogers, both of whom "did splendid work."

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, writing from Scooba, Miss., says: "I have just closed a great meeting at Old Blairs Chapel Church, in Kemper County, resulting in nine accessions to the Church and a general revival of the membership. The people say it is the best meeting at that place for the past twelve years."

Four communications have reached us this week written with pencil. Of course, we cannot print them. Two we have rewritten. The others are long, and we have not the time to copy. We again ask brethren to turn to page 2, top of first column, and read DIRECTIONS. Our reason for declining to print pencil writing is good.

Rev. J. A. McKee has been transferred by Bishop Morrison from the North Mississippi to the Denver Conference, and stationed at the Morrison Memorial Church, Denver. He has requested the change of his ADVOCATE from Vance, Miss., to 3148 Lafayette Street, Denver, Colo. Correspondents will please address him accordingly.

In our notice last week of the Bluff Creek Camp Meeting we failed to mention the name of Dr. J. A. Parker. We had not learned that he was there. The pastor, Rev. J. P. Haney, informs us that he was there six days, and did splendid work. He gave the people "some of the best preaching ever heard on the campground."

A note from Rev. S. L. Pope, after his return home (Columbus, Miss.), brings the gratifying report of good health. He says he is feeling better than before he went to New Orleans for treatment. Our readers will remember that he took Pasteur treatment for dog-bite. On Sunday evening, the 16th inst., he preached a sermon at Carrollton Avenue Church to the delight and profit of the congregation.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, president of Port Gibson College for Girls, is much encouraged over the prospects for the coming session. He furnishes us with these items: "Besides the addition of an annex building, the College is spending nearly a thousand dollars upon vacation improvements. There is prospect of a large attendance. Among those who have engaged rooms are three young ladies from Oklahoma."

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Conference Missionary Evangelist for the Mississippi Conference, writes that he has been in some fine meetings. At Harrisonville there were a large number of conversions and reclamations, and seventeen additions to the Church on profession of faith. Brother Ellis requests us to say that, as a rule, he cannot answer letters "by return mail," for he often does not see his mail for three or four weeks at a time.

Rev. M. L. White, of the Pearlhaven (Miss.) Charge, writes that he has just closed a ten days' meeting at Mallalieu Crapel, resulting in a number of bright conversions and forty-one additions to the Church. He was assisted by two young men preparing for the ministry, Brothers W. D. Waldrup and Haney Johnson. They rendered splendid help. He is now engaged in a meeting at Pleasant Grove. Up to Aug. 17 he had received 65 members into the Church.

Something at last has struck "Gilderoy" that makes him blush, and feel little. Alluding to Rev. W. G. Harbin's "write-up" in last week's ADVOCATE, he says: "You and Harbin have made a mess of it. It is refined cruelty to treat a poor, ignorant old man that way. I sketch dead men. To sketch a living man is much like skinning him and putting on salt, mustard, pepper, vinegar and tabasco sauce." We know no man better able to stand a skinning, and the application of such a plaster, than "Gilderoy."

Little IRUE, infant daughter of Wiltz J. Burkett and Bertie Barr, of Campti, La., died Aug. 6, 1908, aged 1 year, 7 months and 15 days. Her sickness was short and her death unexpected, but the Lord wanted her and took her. She was such a sweet child, we all loved her, but God loved her best. We cannot understand why, but we know that God is too wise to err and too good to do wrong. Dear parents, don't grieve; your darling is not dead, but is safe in the arms of Jesus. May he comfort your hearts, and may heaven seem nearer than ever before, for Irue is just over yonder, waiting and watching for you. Think of those beautiful little hands beckoning for you to come up higher—beautiful hands, beckoning hands, calling dear parents to a heavenly land. May we all live so as to meet her there, is the prayer of her

GRANDMA.

Little FELIX, son of W. C. and Lula Dillon, of Oakridge, Miss., was called to his heavenly home July 21, 1908. He was 5 years old the day of his death. It was a sad death. While out playing with his two little sisters he fell into an old cistern and was drowned. Felix leaves in their stricken home a father, mother and five little sisters, who all loved him dearly, but his Heavenly Father loved him best, and called him to his palace above to dwell with him forever. Little Felix was a good child, with a sweet disposition, and everyone loved him. Dear parents, the Lord has taken your son to him, and since he does not err, let your hearts be comforted. Remember that dear little Felix is just over yonder on that beautiful shore, waiting and watching, and, with beckoning hands, is saying, "Come on, papa, mamma and sisters."

MRS. GEORGIA HUDDLESTON (nee Parker) died at Covington, La., Aug. 3, 1908. Mrs. Huddleston was a native of New Orleans, having been in Covington only a few months. Her illness began the 1st of April in the nature of typhoid fever. Her long sickness was marked by patience and Christian resignation to God's will. Rev. H. N. Harrison, pastor at Covington, visited her during her illness, and the evening before she passed away she told him she felt as if God was calling her. She was conscious up to the time the Master called her, and talked to her loved ones and requested that "Nearer, My God, to Thee," be sung at the grave. Her last words were, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." In a letter from one of her three children are these words: "She died a lovely Christian death, which is a great consolation to us all. We buried her in a lovely little cemetery called Sunnybrook." Mrs. Huddleston was reared in the old Carondelet Street Methodist Church, but at the time of her death she was a member of Parker Memorial Church. The writer knew her well during his first pastorate at Parker Memorial, and her Christian life was an inspiration to him. To the husband and children the writer and his congregation extend sympathy and prayers.

MISS EMMA ROUSE lost her life by using oil on the fire, which caught before expected, therefore found its way in the can through the spout, and it bursted in her face. She was burnt all over, and did not live long after the accident happened. Emma was loved by all who knew her. She was kind-hearted and ever ready to scatter sunshine wherever she went. We will miss her so much at Church. Her sweet voice, heard often in the choir, is stilled. Poplarhead has lost a good worker. Emma loved to attend Church and Sunday School, which she did regularly. She sang and prayed, and said, "Oh, I am going to heaven," and it is so sweet to think of her now at rest forever. We are left to mourn, but not as those who have no hope, for she has only been transplanted to a higher home, and we know where to find her. The death of this dear girl has broken the hearts of many, besides her parents and sisters and brothers. Her father is a faithful soldier of the cross, and has been for many years. He has had many burdens to bear in the last eight months, but he still presses on, and looks to God for a bright future. May a shower of blessings fall over his home and comfort their sad hearts, for we have a sweet assurance of seeing our dear Emma in heaven some sweet day, where parting is no more. I send this as a token of my love.

KOSCIUSKO CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I am having some fine meetings on my charge. We held a union meeting at Ethel, Miss., Presbyterians, Baptists and Methodists participating, which resulted in seventy-five conversions and those reclaimed. The Lord be praised!

Our meeting at Bethel was a success. We had a good revival and received four into the Church. The meeting at Smyrna was well attended; a good revival. I received four into the Church.

I am getting on nicely with my parsonage debt. I think that we will be able to pay it off this year. I feel that the Lord is with us in every line of Church work. I am planning to have two Woman's Home Mission Societies organized very soon. The Quarterly Conference at Springdale was well attended, and a good sermon was preached by the Rev. S. M. Thames, P. E. A good dinner was spread, and was enjoyed by all. Bro. A. P. Stephens was licensed to exhort.

PROTESTANTISM IN MEXICO.

In a report lately made public of the work of the American Bible Society in Mexico during the past fiscal year, the Society's Agent relates that one of the most notable features of the present development of Mexico is the growth of religious tolerance. In June, says the report, "over six hundred Protestants of all denominations gathered in Guanajuato for a Convention of Sunday School Workers and Young People's Societies.

"Thirty years ago Protestant missionaries were stoned and driven out of this same city of Guanajuato, and one may still see the house in which they were besieged for a whole day and night before they were rescued by government troops.

"While the Convention was in session the visitors received only courtesy on every hand. The governor of the State permitted the Convention to visit in a body the historic old prison, 'La Alhondiga,' from whose parapets, ninety-seven years ago, dangled the heads of the patriots who fought with Hidalgo for their country's freedom.

"The governor also met and cordially welcomed a committee from the Young People's Societies, sending a pleasant message to the Convention, and expressing the desire to possess a collection of the essays and discourses which might be presented during the sessions.

"All of which goes to show that Protestantism and religious liberty are making great strides in Mexico, and one of the potent factors in this progress has always been the work of the American Bible Society."

One of the very extraordinary events of the year, continues the report, was the renunciation of the Catholic religion by Senor Antonio Valiente y Pozo, a Spanish priest, who is now in the ministry of the M. E. Church, South, in this city. La Imparcial, probably the most widely read of all the Mexican dailies, published an interview with him the day after his sermon of renunciation. I translate part of the interview, whose publication in a secular paper was rather remarkable.

Being asked what had led him to take this step, Senor Valiente replied: "I commenced to study the Bible and to discover the difference between its teachings and those of the church. I tried to rid my spirit of the doubts that assailed it, but they were so many and so serious that I was obliged to analyze them in order to banish them. I struggled against my conscience and against inherited religious beliefs, because my parents were Catholics. At last I comprehended that the truth is in the gospel as found in the Bible, and not in Romanism."

The fact that all this could be chronicled in a Mexico daily paper, to be read by thousands of Catholics, indicates a prodigious change in public opinion in this city. I doubt if ten years ago it would have been expedient to print such an interview. Protestantism in Mexico is now a factor to be recognized and reckoned with. Thousands of the younger people of this city and the republic in general are being brought up in the Protestant faith, and religious tolerance is becoming something more than a name.

REVIVAL AT HEBRON.

A glorious revival meeting closed at Hebron, a church seven or eight miles north of Waynesboro, Miss., on Friday, Aug. 7, 1908. From the time the meeting began (Sunday, Aug. 2) the presence of the Holy Spirit was manifest, and he made his abode with many who were ready to receive him.

There were numerous conversions, reclamations, and consecrations; at least twenty persons, young and old, confessed to be saved.

Although there were numerous circumstances conjoined to make the attendance small, we can truthfully say this was one of the most victorious meetings ever held at Hebron. Brothers Maddox and Moody, both devout and earnest workers for the Lord, seemed unusually desirous of saving souls for Jesus; they were inspired by the Holy Spirit, and their words fell like fire among the people. None can fully comprehend what this revival has been to us, save they who live a Christian life, one entirely consecrated to Jesus.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS

Are cheap, convenient and harmless. Cheap, as one dose is usually sufficient to relieve the pain. Convenient, being little tablets, that you can always carry, and take as you would a lozenge. Certain, because they cure by soothing the irritated nerves. Harmless, as they contain no harmful drugs. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk.

FROM PACHUTA CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have rebuilt our Church at Orange, which was destroyed by a storm on the 13th of June, and have just closed one of the best meetings I was ever in. The pastor, Rev. L. F. Alford, was assisted by Brother W. W. Graves, who did the preaching. There were eleven accessions and a number of conversions and reclamations. The services were all good, but on Thursday at 11 o'clock the Lord was present in great power and scores of persons shouted his praise at once. Truly, the good old days are not all gone.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

WOMAN'S WORK

It is a woman's work to look after the house, but, for some strange reason, woman's work is much harder on a woman, than man's work on a man.

This explains why so many women are wrecks before 30 and in their graves before 50.

Too much woman's work;—too little Cardui.

It has been found, by those who have used it, to relieve women's pains and other distressful feelings, the result of female ills, brought on by overwork.

Having cured thousands of other sick, miserable women, why should it not cure you?

Just read what Mrs. Sarah J. Hoskins, of Cary, Ky., says, in a recent letter: "I believe that Cardui saved my life. I suffered from various troubles for 9 years. I was irregular and would nearly cramp to death, every month. My back and side would nearly kill me. I tried everything to get relief, but failed, till I took Cardui. Now I can wash all day and do my housework with all ease." Try Cardui.

WILSON'S FRECKLE CURE

FROM CRENSHAW, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We are making some headway on the Crenshaw work. We have held two meetings, one at Mastadon, where we received seven members and the membership strengthened by a good revival in the Church. Brother Echols, of Pleasant Grove, assisted and did some fine preaching. I held a meeting at Sledge and had a good meeting. Organized a Church. Had a lot presented us by Colonel Sledge, and raised about $200 for a new churchhouse. I have other meetings to hold in the near future. We are praying for gracious revivals throughout the charge.

We have held our first and second quarterly meetings; and allow me here to apologize to my presiding elder for not mentioning his name in connection with my First Quarterly Conference, for I assure you he was present and presided with dignity, and displayed executive ability by looking into all details of the church with great cerefulness, exhibiting the Master's spirit in love and tenderness. He was present also at the Second Quarterly Meeting, and preached at both with great power and demonstration of the Spirit to the good of the people and the glory of God.

Now, dear Doctor, let me say in conclusion that I believe in the final perseverance of the saints, and hope to be able to send you a list of subscribers before the end of the Conference year. I would be so glad if I could get all of my people to take your most excellent paper, which is growing in interest all the while.

This is new ground I am working this year, and I have difficulties with which to contend. Pray for me, and may the Lord bless and prosper you in your labor of love. Fraternally,

W. J. O'BRYANT.

REVIVAL AT IDA, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have just closed a great meeting here at Ida. We had a series of three weeks' meetings, and the Spirit was with us from the start. Twenty-four joined the Church on profession of faith, and four by letter. Our church was wonderfully revived.

The first week we had no one to help the pastor, but on Saturday of the first week Rev. C. C. Weir from Bunkie arrived, and his very presence, to say nothing of his preaching, lent zeal to the meeting. Brother Weir is a faithful steward for the Master, and to hear him preach we are made to think of the one that said "God is love." He also preached three sermons to the children, and told to them the love of God in such plain, simple way till we felt that some of the little fellows will never depart therefrom. Brother Weir was with us till the following Tuesday, and the pastor was alone then till Saturday, when our presiding elder, Rev. T. J. Warlick, came and helped us till Monday night. Brother Warlick never bears the sword in vain, and when he confronts the evil one there is always a victory for righteousness.

Rev. W. E. Davis followed Brother Warlick. Brother Davis is pastor of the First Methodist Church of Lufkin, Tex. His experience as a lawyer is profitable now for the Master, and he holds old Satan up as he did the criminal when he was District Attorney, and was representing his State. He tells the story of a crucified Master in a plain, simple way, and his words become "sharper than a two-edged sword."

May God's blessings rest upon the Advocate force, and its readers.

TOPIC FOR AUG. 30.

Woman and the Evangel (Woman's Foreign Missionary Society). Key Text: Romans xvi, 1-2.

Woman and the Evangel.

When Christ was on the earth his sympathetic and helpful life appealed especially to the women. Did He not grace their wedding feasts, raise their dead, bless their little children, heal their infirmities and forgive their sins?

What wonder, then, that the women on that early morning were first at the tomb, and that to them was given the first commission to "go tell" that "Jesus had risen," as he said!

Since then the power of his resurrection has touched the life of every woman, wherever its influence has been felt, whether she has accepted Christ as her personal Savior or not, and 'tis woman who should love most because she has received most.

Key Text, Romans xvi. 1-2.

Paul, from the house of Gaius, at Corinth, was bringing to a close his great Epistle to the Romans. He had set forth "with all boldness" the themes of sin and righteousness and glory of the duties of the Christian life, and of the special problems of the Roman mission. It is time now for those things which are of tenderest interest in any letter, the personal thoughts and expressions of affection.

First—That gracious thoughtfulness which is an abiding quality of the truly great, which prompts him to commend the pious woman who is (as may safely be assumed) to take charge of the priceless packet and deliver it at Rome.

We know nothing of Phoebe but from this brief mention. We cannot perhaps be certain that she is here described as a female church official, a deaconess in a sense of that word today, familiar to church orders. She may not have been set apart by the laying on of hands, and in all probability she did not wear a dear little black bonnet, tied with bewitching white strings, but she was, in some sense, a "ministrant of the church." Paul says she was "a succorer of many, himself in particular, and as her residence at Centhrea, the port towards Ephesus, enabled her to exercise the duties of hospitality and to give other forms of assistance to Christians on their first landing in the country, and to help what must have been a small and struggling church, her duties must have been much the same as our deaconesses and her home a veritable Wesley House of peace and welcome.

We are absolutely certain that she was worthy of reliance and of loving commendations. How blessed it is to do even a small work for the Master!

"Help those Women of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society."

Before we consent to help any society we must know the principles which that body stands for and the object for which it works.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized in 1878 for the express purpose of sending the gospel to the women and children of heathen lands. Since this time, six countries have been entered, 79 missionaries and 229 native and foreign helpers have been employed, [illegible] boarding schools have been established, 152 Bible women and 178 scholarships supported, and property owned to the value of $450,000. There are approximately 6,000 pupils and women under the instruction of the Woman's Board, and for the carrying on of the great work the women have pledged for the [illegible] $700,000.

Why Should the League Help Them?

1. Because they are worthy of help. Its faithfulness in service, success in [illegible] and the evident favor of God [illegible] help for any enterprise [illegible] done so for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

2. Because they need your help. The [illegible] undertaking which [illegible] about it the [illegible] and activities of the young has in it the prophecy of death, and that which does engage the attention and the love of the young has in it the promise of eternal life. However [illegible] the judgment of the mature, [illegible] counsel of the [illegible], [illegible] so winning as the enthusiasm of youth. The Women of the Foreign Missionary Society look upon your fresh eagerness and attainable opportunity with righteous covetousness for the work of Christ.

3. We need to help them.

i. You need to help them because they afford you an opportunity to take or send the gospel, as Christ commanded you.

ii. Because they can guide your study and direct your missionary efforts.

iii. They can lead you into the wise giving of yourself and your means to the supreme work of the Church.

How Can We Help?

1. By prayer. Upon every missionary Sunday the League should remember to ask God's help upon the work of this great organization.

2. By uniting with them in mission study and learning more of the missionary problems, enterprises and needs of the Church.

3. By sometimes contributing to some special work of the Society, as the support of some candidate in training at the Scarritt Bible and Training School, or the support of a Bible woman or scholarship in the foreign field; or, where there is no definite missionary work undertaken by the League Conference, the local League may resolve once a month into a missionary society, paying dues and taking up the regular work of an auxiliary.

4. By putting before your Leaguers this definite opportunity for service. Some of the best missionaries sent out by the Board in later days have gone from the League. Last year, as Miss Ruby Kendricks sailed away from Epworth-by-the-Sea, she said: "Tell the Leaguers that being a missionary is just the thing." To-day, as they think of her grave—the first of our missionaries in Korea—they dwell not so much upon their loss as upon the question, "Who will go in her place?" and already the young people are pledging to take up her work, which none of us would dare to call unfinished. Oh, Leaguers, "Give of your sons to bear the tidings glorious; give of thy wealth to speed them on their way; pour out thy soul for them in prayer victorious, and all thou spendest Jesus will repay."

SULPHUR, LA.

Mr. Editor: My letter to the Advocate of a few months since was read by members of Vinton Church with a feeling of slight disappointment. I was reminded that the Sulphur membership got the lion's share of that letter. The reminder was quite gentle.

Good things have come to us recently. Brother Turner, the Opelousas pastor, came over and began preaching on June 22, at 8 p. m., and continued for eight days. He may not be the best preacher who ever preached in Sulphur, but he held the best revival this town ever experienced. Seventeen united with our church; they were not all children, and naturally in the succession, either. Great good was done.

But lest I neglect the Vintonites again, I turn to them. The date for the Vinton meeting was to begin July 5, but Brother Lee was detained in court as a witness, however, and did not arrive until the 13th. We hear of good preaching, and read of it, and sometimes think quietly of our own splendid pulpit efforts, but J. W. Lee, of Melville, can out-preach everybody, except some. This was his first pastorate. His old friends say, after fourteen years, "he is the same Lee," except "he can preach now." Some of them recalled his hour and thirty minutes' effort trying to put Isaiah's man to bed, but the bed remained too short and the cover too narrow.

The meeting was good and thirteen united with the Church. Everybody was delighted with the preaching.

Vinton is a most delightful little village. Our Church has Southern hospitality and Yankee push, and I refrain from saying all the good things I think of those kind folk. They said come and bring the folk, and I did, and what a great, good time we had. We returned to our Sulphur home on July 24, and, alas! the happy little town was wrapped in gloom on account of the sudden and almost tragic death of Mrs. J. J. Dubourg. What a lovely, delightful little woman she was! And how pleasant was the home she kept. She had scarcely enjoyed five months of married bliss. Some day we shall know, some day we will understand.

J. D NESOM, P. C.

LAKE CIRCUIT.

We held a five-day protracted meeting at Conehatta. There were three joined the Church, and much good was done the membership. Rev. C. A. Powell did all the preaching. I was taken sick at this meeting, and suffered much for three days, but through the blessing of the Lord and the skill of the physicians I have been restored to my usual health. The town of Lake is steadily improving, and business is gradually reviving again.

THE AUGUST AMERICAN BOY.

Unalloyed enjoyment of the water's refreshing coolness is shown on the face of the boy looking out from the front cover of the August American Boy, and the contents of the magazine just fits in with the vacation season. The fine serials of Houston, Tomlison, and Optic, with Weir's story of his experiences Under the Great White Canvas continue with increasing interest. Of the many splendid short stories in this issue there are: In the Hands of the Enemy, telling of the manly corage of a boy during the trying times of the Civil War; The Traitor of Camp Bennett, a fine story of boys camping out and how a traitor was dealt with; A boy and a Bear tells humorously of a boy who was anxious to meet a bear and what he did when Mrs Bruin confronted him; In Quest of a Sea-Otter is a vivid account of the dangers encountered by two boys in a boat while trying to kill a sea-otter; History Written in Bark will appeal to the boys who love to carve their names on the bark of trees; My Friend's Stiff Shoulder is a stirring story of hunting tigers in India; The Runabout Trio at the Chicago Convention gives a most interesting account of what three boys saw and heard while attending the National Republican Convention at Chicago. Then there are How to Float, Trapping Hints for Boys, Opening of the Oyster Season, Talks with the Doctor, and the Destroyer of Boys, while the various departments are filled with the sort of matter which appeals to the boys with hobbies. 76 illustrations; $1.00 a year. The recent target practice of the United States Navy at Magdalena Bay makes of special interest a statement by General Field Marshal Count von Haseler of Germany as to the essentials of succesful marksmanship. The report having gone out that Count von Haseler had said that alcohol promoted marksmanship, Dr. Herman M. Popert, Burgomaster of Hamburg, wrote him asking if this was his opinion. The Count replied: "I never said and never had the remotest idea of saying that the moderate use of alcohol promoted marksmanship. The necessary conditions for that are steady blood, steady nerves, steady deliberation, a clear eye—but not alcohol."

LESSON FOR AUG. 30, 1908.

Subject: David Spares Saul's Life.—I Samuel xxvi. 17-26.

Golden Text: "Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you."—Luke vi, 27.

David was fleeing from one place to another, seeking safety from the wrath of the king. Saul considered everyone his enemy that knew of David's movements and did not carry the news to the king. All through the land of Israel there was no place for the son of Jesse. So to Gath he came, even to Israel's enemy, and the native city of the giant that was recently slain by him. It was told the king of Gath that David was there—David, Israel's future king. When David found that he was so well known, he was filled with fear. He had gone into danger, leaning upon his own wisdom, and how could he ask God to help him! He must have thought of this when he began to act as a madman. Achish watched him as he scribbled on the doors of the gate. The deception was perfect, and Achish would have nothing to do with him. The lie that David had told at Nob to Ahimelech must be supported by acting another lie to the king of Gath.

David's next flight was only about five miles southeast of Gath, to the Cave of Adullam. Here his friends heard of him and went to aid him. His brethren from his own father's house came to help him. There were others there that came to be his leaders—those that were in distress, and in debt, and the discontented. They could also help, for they knew the land, and had led a life of wandering, and would follow David, as he had become a wanderer, too. David must have thought of Jephtha, for in the time of the judges Jephtha recruited his forces from among the same character of people. David continued his flight southeastward to the land of Moab, thinking surely he would find safety there, for did not Elimelech and Naomi seek refuge there? and why should he not find a refuge among a people that were of the same race and character as sweet Ruth, his great-grandmother? Elimelech and David both could have been safe in their own country if they had trusted entirely to the protection of the Almighty, and had not tried to save themselves.

While in the land of Moab another sorrow was added, when Abiathar came and told how Saul had slain the Lord's priests because of harboring David for a short time in the city of Nob. David took the blame on himself and told Abiathar to remain with him. It was David still, though a refugee, hunted here and there—it was he of the tribe of Judah that was ready to hearken to the cry of his countrymen in their distress. The inhabitants of Keilah, a city of Israel not far from the forest of Hareth, sent word that the Philistines had robbed their threshing floors, and David, with his followers, hastened to their assistance. Saul heard of this and determined to surprise David at Keilah. Saul came, and David escaped to Ziph, on the borders of the wilderness of Judah. In this wilderness David abode, going from one stronghold to another, now in a cave, then among the rocks, or in the forest. Now was the time for someone to come to comfort the wanderer. He came (the comforter), and who was it but his dearest friend, Jonathan. Never in all the world's history was there a purer or more true friend from among men than was Jonathan to David. "Fear not" were Jonathan's calm words of assurance; "for the hand of Saul, my father, shall not find thee; and thou shalt be king over Israel." There in the wilderness [illegible] Saul [illegible] to his house.

Saul [illegible] take David's life and [illegible] in his search for him. When [illegible] Philistines had [illegible] Saul [illegible]. There was a cave [illegible] and his men were in the cave. Saul came in, not knowing of the presence of David. Saul was in David's power, but David spared him. This was the [illegible] the king's life was spared [illegible] man whose life he was [illegible]. Saul confessed [illegible]. [illegible] is sincere [illegible] turning away from [illegible] David [illegible] seeking him now [illegible].

Night came upon the hunted and [illegible] Saul and his men lay asleep. David called for volunteers to go to Saul's camp in the darkness. Saul [illegible] sleeping with his spear stuck in the ground near where he lay. [illegible] the commander [illegible] and the balance [illegible] David and Abishai [illegible] very close to the sleepers. Abishai whispered to David, "Now hath God delivered thine enemy into thy hand," urging him to smite Saul to the death; but it was not in David's heart to slay him who had been anointed king over Israel by the prophet of the Lord. [illegible] he took the king's spear and also the vessel that contained water. As soon as Saul learned that David had spared his life the second time, he again professed repentance, saying that he had [illegible] the fool. This was the last time that Saul and David ever talked with one another.

It is our lesson to learn that the Christian is not to avenge a wrong. [illegible] enemy [illegible] kindness shown him is one way in which God takes vengeance, for a kind word is as a coal of fire on the head of the wrong-doer. We are not only not to try to get revenge, but we are to forgive; and not that only, but Jesus says, "Unless ye forgive from your hearts, neither will your Father forgive you." David forgave Saul even when he had no confidence in his promises.

[illegible] of obedience [illegible] the moment we obey and our reward is sure, whatever the effect may be to others. It is more blessed to give pardon than to receive it, when given to our fellowmen. It is possible to [illegible] as David toward [illegible] when the love of Christ is in our hearts. It was possible for David, for he had the Spirit of God. The world cannot understand this. "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" is the rule among those who love not God. [illegible] we love our enemies as we are commanded by our Master. [illegible] His commandments. [illegible] have the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his.

These things are not [illegible] save by the help of the Holy Spirit in [illegible].

DEATH OF MRS. IRA B. ROBERTSON.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Mrs. Octavia Robertson, wife of Rev. Ira B. Robertson, superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, passed to her reward Friday, Aug. 21, 1908. Her remains were consigned to the earth near her home in McNair, Miss., Rev. D. Scarborough officiating. Her death was as her life, a Christian triumph.

Her pastor. C. E. Cain.

Hamburg, Aug. 24, 1908.

THE OPPORTUNITY YOU WANT.

Brother Pastor: You have been trying to get your people to take "Go Forward," and have grieved because they neglect to do so; if you are the right sort of pastor you have.

I have found that a committee of intelligent and sprightly young ladies, working during the protracted meeting, each with a sample of the splendid little paper and a supply of the subscription envelopes, can do more for the circulation of "Go Forward" in a day or two than can be done at other times in as many months. Committees of three, each member working separately, bring me lists running from 11 to 60 at each meeting. One committee reported 59 within a day after appointment.

Try it, Brother Pastor; it will not hurt your meeting—rather it will prove a help. And "Go Forward" will certainly be a blessing in each home to which it goes.

"Where there is a will there is a way." "Go Forward" can be circulated where the pastor is in earnest. Of course some never succeed who never try. For those who sincerely desire to do their people good, the above suggestion is made, after considerable experience. I know it works. Of course, care must be exercised in the selection of the committee. H. M. Ellis,

HELPING WITH A WORD.

A young girl was passing her aged great-aunt one day when she suddenly stopped, laid her hand gently on the white head and said: "How pretty and curly your hair is, Aunt Mary! I wish I had such pretty hair!"

The simple words brought a quick flush of pleasure to the wrinkled face, and there was a joyous quiver in the brief acknowledgment of the spontaneous little courtsey.

A young man once said to his mother: "You ought to have seen Aunt Esther to-day when I remarked casually, 'What a pretty gown you have on to-day and how nice you look in it.' She almost cried, she was so pleased. I hadn't thought before that such a little thing would be likely to please her."

"I never expect to eat any cookies as good as those you used to make, mother," said a bearded man one day, and he was shocked when he saw her evident delight in his words, for he remembered that he had not thought to speak before for years of any of the thousand comforts and pleasures with which her skill and love had filled his boyhood.—Ex.

PUT ON THE CHECK-REIN.

We are living in a fast age and a fast country. There is need of the brakes as well as of the engine; there are too many young men who understand the whip better than the check-rein. When the upset comes, it is found that the head it softer than the pavement and perhaps the idea is beaten into that soft head that prudence demanded slower driving.

On a Sabbath afternoon it is quite too common to meet a group of showily-dressed young men whose cigars and noisy talk show the rate at which they are traveling. While wiser young men are at their Bible class, these youths are out on a dress-parade, exhibiting their fast manners and habits to the public. One of the group has chosen the club-house for his Sunday resort, and another tries his good mother's heart sorely by coming home at midnight from the theatre, and a wine supper after it. Before long there will be vacant situations in the business houses where these fast fellows are employed. Prudent merchants do not care to keep in their counting-rooms the clerks who wear too much jewelry and are seen too often at the counter of the fashionable saloon. There is an upset ahead for these young Jehus if they don't put on a check-rein.

Poor Harry Rapid's young wife called in to inquire if I could recommend a "very cheap boarding house," and knew of any place where her husband could find employment. Her face was as faded as her dress. It would have been well if Harry and his broken-down young wife had looked for plain frugal quarters when they began their matrimonial career. But they set up in ambitious style in a fine "flat," with sealskin sacques and a box at the opera and a fast horse for the drive to the beach. Now they have sold out and are glad to hide away in such humble quarters as they can get. I trust that the sharp lesson will not be lost on them. This capsize of their showy turn-out may teach them that when Satan has a seat "on the box" it is a short road to ruin. Extravagance is one of the devil's baits in these days. It does not only break up homes; it breaks hearts. Both sound sense and moral courage are required by young people to conform to their circumstances and live within their means. The next thing is to know how to use money as a sacred trust and not to spend it in gratifying the lust of the eye, the lust of the flesh, and the pride of life.

In the same counting-room with Harry Rapid a while ago was young George Surepace. He was considered by his companions as decidedly "slow." Some of his fellow-clerks made sport of his plain tweed coat and his Puritanical ways; they never could induce George to join one of their clubs, or to go with them to Brighton Beach on Sunday, or to take a game of "poker" over a glass of wine. He married an industrious girl who, instead of studying Parisian fashion plates, studied how to make both ends meet and how to make their cozy house look tidy when husband came home. Mary Surepace will soon be bringing her two rosy children to the Infant Department of the Sunday School, and George is already the leading man in the Society of Christian Endeavor. The other day he gave a spare ten dollars to his old fellow-clerk, Harry Rapid, in order to aid him in getting his watch out of pawn. I have watched these two young couples; it was the old race between the fast hare and the jogging tortoise; the hare has run himself out of breath and out of character; the slow and careful tortoise has won the race.

It is not only young people who need to put on the check-rein in the way that we have just indicated. Older people, yes, and good Christian people, need the check-rein also. Our American business life is one of humming activity, and it brings a tremendous strain on the nerves and muscles and brains. The constant tendency is to feed the engine, crowd on the steam, and neglect the brakes. To these ever-toiling, care-burdened men of business, I would venture to say, Do not allow either your worldly ambitions or your honest daily avocations to mount you as a jockey mounts a race-horse, and whip and spur you through every waking hour of your existence. They will ride you to death! When your day's work is over, lock up your cares in your store or your shop; go home to your family "out of harness." Turn boy again for your own sake and for the sake of your children. If you work hard to have a home, enjoy it. The best way to keep your sons and daughters out of perilous evening resorts is to make your own fireside bright and attractive; or, if innocent entertainments offer elsewhere, go with wife and children to partake of them. Be the master of your business and not its slave. If either covetousness or care are overdriving you, put on the check-rein!

One of the besetting snares of these times is to try to grow rich rapidly. "Slow and sure" are out of fashion. In that direction lies peril to the soul. They who make haste to be rich fall into temptations and snares and many hurtful lusts that drown men in perdition! Greed for gold drains away the sweetest and holiest affections of the heart; it dries up Christian benevolence; it robs God of his due. My long observation has been that when money flows in rapidly, grace is apt to flow out; and as a Christian mounts up as to his income, he rarely rises in piety with it. There are some happy exceptions, but they are the men who keep a check-rein on the grasping, greedy spirit of covetousness. My good brother, it is no easy thing to keep up a high tone of spiritual life amid all the atmospheric pressures that surround you; to do it you have got to take time to eat and to think and to read your Bible and to pray and to do some good work for your Master and your fellow-men. If you are running your daily life at too fast a rate for all these vital things, then I entreat you in God's name to put on the check-rein!—Dr. Cuyler, in Christian Intelligencer.

Last week there was a gathering of leading commercial men in Chicago to consider the project of a deep waterway, or ship canal, from the lakes to the gulf, or from Chicago to the mouth of the Mississippi river. The matter has been talked of for several years. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Taft were both present by invitation, and both expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the project. The question will become national. Far-seeing commercial men say that such a canal is a necessity. The Inter-Ocean voices their sentiments when it says: "The United States has reached the point in its commercial and industrial development when its leaders of public thought, its governments and its people must take heed as never before to waterway improvement under penalty of seeing its growth halt and its energies stagnate. Events of recent years have clearly proved that our railways and our waterways in their present state cannot, under normal conditions, handle the swelling tide of production and commercial exchange." It is true that other railroads might be built, but nature has furnished the channel for by far the greater distance; and it could be put in shipping order in a shorter time than a railroad could be built and at less cost and furnish cheaper transportation. Such a waterway, with the opening of the Panama canal, would greatly facilitate the world's commerce.

Both the big parties are claiming the electoral votes in November. The Democrats are specially jubilant. But when was it otherwise in a presidential campaign? There is no certainty. There are several million voters—perhaps as many as four million—who cannot be definitely located. There is the "organized labor" vote. Mr. Gompers, the head of the Federation, is for Mr. Bryan, and is trying to throw the vote that way, but as yet there are no signs of a landslide among the working men in that direction. Multiplied thousands have reached voting age since the last election. Nobody knows how they are going to vote. Then other thousands who declined to vote in the last election are unknown quantities in the present canvass. The negro vote, too, which heretofore has been solidly Republican, is disaffected, but to what extent it is impossible to tell. And the smaller parties, all of which have grown in strength, are to be reckoned with. The New York Journal of Commerce says: "The latest full popular vote was brought out by the furious contest for and against free silver coinage twelve years ago. In 1900 there was no conspicuous slump in the vote of either party. But while the Democratic vote fell off 140,000, the Republican vote gained only 108,000. The increase in the aggregate Presidential vote was only 38,188, though the population of the country had probably increased 8 per cent in the four years. In 1904 the total popular vote was actually several hundred thousand less than it was in either of the two previous elections, although there is every reason to suppose that the population had gone on increasing at the rate of about 2 per cent a year." All these facts render guesses and prophecies utterly useless. Not until the morning of Nov. 4, 1908, can we know.

The football season has opened, and we hear nothing from our colleges and universities through the secular papers except about the teams and games. One is impressed with the idea that many boys go to certain institutions for nothing save to play football in the autumn and baseball in the spring. A couple of years back a great outcry was made on account of the brutality of the game, and a demand was made for its reform. Some of the rules were changed and it was thought that the dangers were lessened. But such is not the case. The game is as vigorous, as dangerous and as brutal as ever. Serious accidents have already occurred, and the season at this writing has not been open more than two weeks. In one practice game we read of one student being killed, and on Saturday, Oct. 10, in a match in New York between Union and Wesleyan Colleges seventeen players were rendered unconscious, "five of them being so seriously hurt that they had to be carried to the hospital." The game was characterized by the press dispatches as "sanguinary." Such a record is quite sufficient to condemn the whole "intercollegiate game" business. How Church schools, run in the interest of Christian education, can encourage such games we [illegible] not understand.

The papers sometimes make a great ado over the indifference or cowardice of officers who allow mobs to snatch prisoners and put them to death. Those officers are told that if they would stand against the mob and "shoot to kill," lynch-law would not be so popular and prevalent. Yet, when now and then a sheriff with his deputies stand firm and protect their prisoners some influential papers forthwith condemn the officers and charge them with saving useless lives at the expense of good citizens. Such was the case with officers in Florida a few weeks ago. Indignation was expressed, and it was actually proposed to drive the Sheriff out of the county. A few days since a sheriff in Spartanburg, S. C., in protecting a prisoner shot into a mob and killed and wounded several. Now we see in a great daily paper an attempt to justify the mob, and the officers accused of the "slaughter of citizens for the vindication of the law's delays." Such accusations against brave men are obliged to sting them to the quick. They are wholly undeserved. It is true, no doubt, that the law's delay is responsible for many miscarriages of justice, and perhaps for many lynchings; but for these things sheriffs are not responsible. Their business is to arrest and hold criminals, not to catch and turn them over to lawless mobs. It is poor encouragement to an officer to be told that in protecting a prisoner against violence that he is aiding lawyers to outwit justice. They should be commended rather than condemned.

A strange sound comes to us from Porto Rico, one of our colonial possessions. It is reported in the Porto Rico Eagle, a newspaper printed at Ponce. Attention is called to it in a circular letter signed by three prominent men—two of New York and one of Brockton, Mass. The paper and the circular recite the fact that the Governor of Porto Rico, Regis H. Post, an appointee of the President of the United States, did publicly, in a speech before the Superintendents of Schools of the island, and in the house of the Commissioner of Education, denounce the educational work in the island, as also the missionaries sent to the island from the States, and did blaspheme our holy religion. He made use of the following language: "Christ might have come down to earth and given laws which would have redeemed the people; he might have come as a Caesar or a Herod, but he did come as a fisherman's bastard son." Under ordinary circumstances we would not print such language. Other parts of the address were profane and vulgar—so scandalous, in fact, that many who heard the harangue thought the Governor was drunk. The Commissioner of Education, who is said to be a Christian, tried to excuse the Governor "on the ground that he was under the influence of liquor—'in his cups,'" to use his own own words. And this man is allowed by the President of the United States to represent him, and govern a foreign people in his name! All the facts here recited, it is said, were made known to the Senate when Mr. Post's name was before it for confirmation, but his political backing was strong, and the nomination was confirmed. Thus it happens that we have a man representing the United States who is wholly unfit to rule savages, much less a people who are civilized and Christianized. Such a protest ought to go to President Roosevelt as will compel him to remove this man from office. The editor of the Eagle was present and heard the speech, and certifies that the account which is published "is true in every respect." Did Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese Minister at Washington, misrepresent the religion and civilization of China to such an extent he would not be allowed time to make another speech. He would be recalled and dismissed in disgrace. Will President Roosevelt recall Governor Post?

THE DEVOTIONAL ELEMENT IN AN ANNUAL CONFERENCE SESSION.

BY REV. W. L. DOSS, JR.

In this ADVOCATE of the date Oct. 6, 1908, there appeared an article by Brother Kleinschmidt entitled, "What an Annual Conference Should Be." This writer believes that the words are timely. It is not the purpose of the present writer to say what the session of an Annual Conference should be. That depends upon many things. But, surely, Brother Kleinschmidt is right when he says "a Conference should be a gathering where the spiritual life of the Church is emphasized, where the preaching of the Word is given prominence, and a place where the preachers may become inspired to do greater work for the Master during the ensuing year."

The Conference must attend to the business set before it by the Discipline and look after the interest of the Church within its bounds, but it ought not to neglect the spiritual side of the gathering.

What is a routine day at Conference? The day begins, as it should, with devotional exercises. During the morning the business of the Conference is taken up, and different claims are presented by their advocates. In the afternoon the cabinet meets with the Bishop, and the boards and committees hold their meetings. Later in the afternoon we have a helpful lecture. In the evening the different anniversaries are held. This is about the way the day goes, with the exception of Sunday. All of this needs to be done. Our Church has come to be a great Church, and there are many interests that must be looked after. Much work must be done and it all requires haste, that no time be lost. But have we not forgotten, to some extent at least, to wait upon the Lord as we should? There is indeed to be found song, and prayer, and exhortation, but it is to some extent formal. It lacks the touch of close, vital fellowship that revives and inspires spiritual communion with God and among the brethren. This writer does not believe this criticism to be unjust nor does he make it in a fault-finding spirit. He believes it to be a fact that has resulted from the necessity of pressing on with haste in order to accomplish the great amount of business that must be done in a reasonable length of time. The preachers are all anxious to get away and this also makes haste necessary.

The plea of this writer is not that any less emphasis be given to those things that now take up the time of the Conference, but that greater emphasis be laid upon the spiritual side of the gathering, and he begs leave to submit an idea that he believes will be helpful. The heading of the minutes of the first Methodist Conference in America is: "Minutes of some conversations between the preachers in connection with the Rev. Mr. John Wesley." That Conference was held in St. George's Church, Philadelphia, beginning July 14, 1773, and was made up of ten men. The first Conference in England met in the Foundry on June 25, 1744, and was also composed of ten men. These Conferences were not large, and they had nothing like the amount of business to transact that an Annual Conference now has. The few numbers and the amount of business to be done gave ample opportunity for spiritual fellowship and the cultivation of the devotional nature. Ought there not be devised some means to secure this same close fellowship and communion among the members of an Annual Conference during its sessions? This writer believes that this should be done, and he believes that the occasion could be made more helpful to those in attendance if this should be done.

Including those on trial, there are 157 clerical members of the Louisiana Conference. Forty-nine of these are graduates from the course of study who are not on any board or committee. They have nothing to do at Conference except make their reports, enjoy the Conference and take part in the regular business. Thirty-nine are undergraduates, and have to meet their examining committees. They are supposed to stand their examinations on the day before Conference convenes, and be free from these for the remainder of the session. Twenty-one of the undergraduates are doing their work through the Correspondence School, and so will have no examinations at Conference. With the forty-nine already mentioned, this will make seventy members of the Louisiana Conference who will have no boards or committees on which to work. Outside the regular sessions of the Conference, their time is, therefore, at their free disposal. The other sixty-eight members are on boards and committees, and must attend to the business that comes before them outside the hours for the regular sessions; consequently their time is partially taken up, and is not altogether at their free disposal. Only three or four of these boards have work that requires long sessions. Most of them could do their work in a short while. Therefore, many of the members on the boards and committees have much free time outside the regular sessions of the Conference.

Now, what do the preachers do with this leisure time? All who have ever attended a session of an Annual Conference are familiar with the gatherings around the door and on the walk in front of the church where the Conference is meeting. All are familiar with the jokes that are bandied from one to another, and with the Conference gossip that goes the rounds. These things are not helpful, and yet most men fall before the temptation.

This condition of affairs results from the desire on the part of the preachers to have fellowship with each other. This desire is right and proper. But is this fellowship the proper kind, and is it not possible to meet this desire by utilizing this leisure time in another and a more helpful manner? This writer believes that this can be done.

Mr. Wesley originated the class meeting, and every Methodist preacher knows what it has meant in our history. The first Conferences were small, and were in reality "conversations." The Y. M. C. A. has learned the value of small groups for Bible study. In the colleges the student volunteers are organized into bands, and they meet for prayer and exhortation. To some extent, the services of the early Church were of this character. Now, why should not the preachers in attendance on an Annual Conference meet together in small bands and sectional meetings for the reading of the Bible, for prayer, praise, exhortation and the exchanging of testimony and experience?

The leisure time that is now employed in gossip and in cracking jokes could be thus used. Would not such a thing result in great help to the preachers? With a whole Conference divided into groups and bands, lifting their united prayers to God, would not that Conference mean more to all in attendance and to the town in which it met? The groups are already made, and nothing remains except a place to meet and the fixing of an hour. The different classes could meet each in a separate place, and at a time chosen by themselves. For instance, the Class of the First Year could have its own time and place of meeting, and could appoint its leaders beforehand. All those who were admitted into full connection in any one year could have their time and place of meeting. It would not matter whether these were admitted into full connection by the Louisiana Conference or by some other Conference, and then transferred here. Where the classes are fewer than four or five in membership, one or two classes could meet together; but it would hardly be well to make the meeting have more than twelve or fifteen. In case any class should contain more members than this, it could meet in sections.

The laymen are also now organized for meeting to themselves by the Conference organization of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

Why cannot something of this kind be done? Surely it would be a better use of the leisure time than is now made of it.

ANOTHER VIEW OF SACRAMENTAL WINE.

BY REV. J. W. HONNOLL.

By what process of reasoning does Brother Enochs come to the conclusion that the unfermented juice of the grape was not used when Christ instituted the sacrament? The word "wine" is not used in connection with the sacrament in the gospels, nor by St. Paul in First Corinthians, xi. 25. It is "the cup" or "the fruit of the vine," and this fermentation is no part of the vine or the grape. It is a foreign element introduced when the grape begins to decay. But if the word wine had been everywhere used, it does not follow that it was fermented wine.

I know that some learned men (namely, Dr. Crosby, Prof. Bumstead and others) have contended that the unfermented juice of the grape is not wine. But just as good authority (such men as Dr. Young, Dr. Whedon, Stewart, North, Potter, Bush, Barnes, Jacobus, Taylor, Lewis, Kerr, Abby and others) tell us that the juice of the grape in any form was considered wine.

Dr. Young, in his Concordance, says that nine Hebrew words and thirteen Greek words are translated wine, applied to all forms of the fruit of the vine. Dr. Young says again that "wine is mixed, new, red, strong, sweet, or a thick, sticky syrup." It exists now, existed in the days of Christ, and has existed for ages in that country in many forms, sweet and fermented. It was preserved from fermentation in more than a dozen different ways, and as freely used as daily food as we use buttermilk to-day.

I heard a reliable man, who had spent years in that country, say that he had seen "hogsheads of unfermented wine there at all seasons of the year." So the time of the year when the sacrament was instituted has no bearing on the kind of wine used.

As Brother Enochs says, this sacrament was instituted by our Lord "in unleavened bread and wine." Why "unleavened bread" and "leavened wine?" No leaven was allowed in the Passover. I believe that the fruit of the vine used by our Savior in the sacrament of our Lord's supper was the pure, unadulterated juice of the grape, representing the pure blood of our Lord Jesus Christ.

I cannot see why these fermenting microbes (not one of which belonged to the vine or the grape) were necessary to represent the blood of Christ. I do not believe that Christ created this intoxicating fire on this occasion or at the wedding supper, and I am in good company. Dr. Whedon says in his comment on John ii. 6: "No doubt Jesus, like the God of nature, created not the alcohol, which is the poison produced by the putrifying corpse of the dead grape, but the fresh, living, innocent fluid."

I cannot believe that Jesus Christ, with that omniscient eye which looked out on all the drunkenness of that day and down on the broken hearts, blighted homes and lost souls of the present and the future, produced by strong drink, would have created 126 gallons of intoxicating wine to make men drunker who had been drinking for hours. I had as soon believe that it is proper to sing the long-meter doxology at the opening of a modern saloon.

Strong drink, mixed wine, red wine and every form of intoxicating drink are condemned by the Bible and represents the wrath of God, and is only to be given to him who is ready to perish. Solomon says: "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright."

Brother Enochs says bring it into the sanctuary and honor it by giving it a place on the sacramental board. I leave Brother Enochs to Young, Whedon and Solomon.

Leland, Miss.

YET UNSETTLED.

BY REV. D. M. GEDDIE.

Brother Honnoll thinks that I make quite a mistake when I say that the stronger inclinations will always control; but, taking his own logic for it, I am correct. He thinks that we have stronger inclinations to evil than we have to good, and that because of this the great majority have commenced sinning in infancy, despite the human will to the contrary, and "in spite of the fact that God has been warning and calling by men and angels, and much has been done to save the world from sin." "The stronger inclination to evil was the sole cause. If they had not been corrupted by Adam's sin, or if their natural inclinations had been equally balanced between good and evil, they would not have done it. They were not sinners, but this stronger tendency in their moral nature to sin pulled them into sin. It swept down every barrier, human, angelic and divine, that tried to check and hold it in abeyance, and continued its downward course until every imagination of the thoughts of man's heart was only evil continually." Is that not putting it as strong as I did? Does his logic not prove what I said? I leave my readers to judge.

Brother Honnoll tells us that Adam and Eve "had no bad neighbors to corrupt them, and they had no inherited depravity, yet they sinned." They sinned—as there was no other cause—because they willed to sin. Does that not prove that man does not need the down-pulling of the stronger inherited bias to evil to lead him into sin? And is Adam the only one who ever did or could sin because he willed to sin? Did Adam, in sinning and depraving the race, destroy the volitional power of the human will to do wrong, and place all its forces to choose and to do on the side of right? (That is his logic.) The writer had always thought, and he yet thinks, where environment and training are favorable, that the will has as much to do in choosing evil as it has in choosing good. It is not compelled to be in favor of good. It is the one power of the soul that can, by its own choice, be on either side it chooses. As a result of this freedom, without any embarrassing circumstances than that of temptation, it is often on the side of sin. If, now, there is a stronger inclination in the moral nature to evil than there is to good to influence, bias and bend the will in the direction of evil in the developing stages of the moral nature of the infant, will it not sin as soon as it comes to know good and evil and make choice between them? If the history of the first family proves anything, it proves that every man of the race could have been a sinner without any inherited depravity to bias him in the direction of sin. Adam and Eve are the only ones who were not depraved, but they are not the only ones who have sinned because they voluntarily willed to sin. A will unembarrassed and unbiased by a stronger tendency to evil than to good in the formative and developing period of infantile nature is, to my mind, the only thing that brings a ray of hope to the early life of children, and this needs the strongest possible support from environment and training. With all these combined influences to save them for Christ, the effort upon their part to be Christians in their childhood and youth is strenuous.

Brother Honnoll says that all except Adam and Eve started to sinning in their infancy. If that be true infants are sinners as truly as are adults. They are sinners, not because their inherited depravity bends them toward sin, but because they actually and personally commit sin; sin before they have a mind to know, a will to choose and a conscience to feel the presence of the warning and reproving Spirit of God! Sin because of the gravitation of their nature to sin; sin without any temptation to sin! Does that not deprave and destroy the power of the will to make choice for Christ? Is that Arminian Methodism? Is it not rather Calvinism? And where does the Bible say it, or anything in a thousand miles of it?

But Brother Honnoll says that it was "not long"—about fifteen hundred years according to the Bible chronology—"after Adam sinned until every imagination of the thoughts of man's heart was only evil continually," and that settles the question. That is a complete and irrefutable history of the stronger inclination to evil in the infantile nature. But the sacred historian does not say that this state of affairs was the direct or the indirect result of Adam's sin. He does not say that God looked down from heaven and saw that the depravity which Adam's sin had brought on the race had so corrupted human nature that every imagination of man's heart was only evil continually, but that God looked down from heaven and saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. What was the moral condition of infants he does not say. It is not a history of the depravity of infants, but a history of the moral corruption of adults. And how was this moral corruption brought about? The record says it was by the "sons of God taking wives of the daughters of men" and practicing polygamy, with all the vices and deviltry that follow in the slimy trail of this iniquitous and abominable thing; until, like the people of Sodom, they had left nothing for God to do but sweep them from the face of the earth. And the carefully and clearly drawn distinction between the sons of God and the daughters of men makes the history read much more like a case of wilful apostasy than it does like infants sinning.

If the sons of God taking the daughters of men does not mean that the sons of God apostatized by taking the wicked daughters of wicked men, I would be glad for some one to tell us the significance of the historian's distinction. But at any rate, these folks had some bad neighbors to help to corrupt them. At any rate, they sinned because they willed to sin as much as they did because of their inherited bias to sin.

But the one verse (Gen. vi:5), isolated from the context and considered as a complete revelation in itself, is enough to show that the sacred writer was not talking about infants. The marginal reading of our Bible says that the Hebrew word translated "imagination" means not only imaginations, but also the purposes and desires of the heart. Infants can scarcely be said to have purposes and desires of the heart to sin, unless, as Brother Honnoll says, they actually sin in their infancy. Purposes are the free volitional choices of the will. Only the will can purpose to do either good or evil. The purposes of the heart are the ordained decrees of the will; the volitional activities of the will in all the freedom and exercise of its choice and power of activity in giving quality to human thought, feeling, deed and character—yea, they are themselves the essential qualities of character—the very heart and life of its existence and value—and, therefore, do not belong to infants. So Brother Honnoll, in applying this passage of Scripture to infants, attributes to them character, the very thing that he charges me with, though he cannot find a single phrase or logical sequence in all that I have written that gives any semblance of such an idea. To say that man by nature has as strong a tendency to good as he has to evil predicates no character of infancy.

Character means that either good or evil predominates. His idea of the predominance of evil in the nature of infants is very much nearer the doctrine of infantile character, and his idea that men commence sinning in infancy fixes it completely on him. To my way of thinking, the idea that neither good nor evil, as an inherited element or quality, predominates, but that the influences of environment, training and the grace of the Spirit operate to counteract temptation, leaving the will free to make its own choice, is very much more consistent. Almost without exception, where we have the right kind of environment and training, we have Christian children. The exceptions are due to the free choice of the children, and not to their inherited bias to sin.

On the other hand, almost without exception, where environment and Christian training are lacking, we have sinful children. The exceptions to the rule are due to the freedom of the will in accepting the grace of the Spirit and yielding themselves to Christ in spite of their surroundings. This theory will stand the strain of logic and the tests of the Word of God better than any other that has yet been advanced. But we hope that the future will throw more light on the subject, and give us something better, if there be anything better for us.

MINISTERIAL SUPPLY—ONE SOLUTION.

BY REV. BEN P. JACO.

In the Corinth District of the North Mississippi Conference this year no less than twelve men have been called to preach. In every case the announcement has been made in connection with one of our great revivals. That is part of the solution. Some of these men have been licensed to exhort and have gone to work because they are not educated well enough to get license to preach, and have held revival services successfully. Others will soon try for license to preach, and then go to school. Only two or three have means to go to school on. Some have families to support, but this does not deter them. They offer for sale their little property to get means.

Now, these men are ready to serve the Church at school in preparation for service in the pastorate. They have solved their part of the question as far as they can, and will try to finish the solution.

What will those who can make money or have the money do now toward solving the question? Who will put at my disposal $10 or $100 to be used in helping these men? If some well-to-do Methodist wants to take one of these noble young men and educate him, I will give the name.

ATTITUDES TOWARD THE LOST.

BY REV. H. M. ELLIS.

I can conceive of but four attitudes one may occupy toward the unsaved, whether these be his neighbors of the homeland or the heathen of the "uttermost parts of the earth:"

First—He may be indifferent to them and their needs and pass them by as though they did not exist. For such the sight of wretchedness and sin stirs no processes of thought, awakens no emotions of sympathy, touches no springs of conscience any more than it moves the flagstones under his feet. This is the attitude of stupidity.

Second—He may view lost and ruined human nature with a cold, scientific interest, just as he would the inanimate geological specimen, or any other purely physical phenomenon. There is no pity for distress, no sense of responsibility to relieve and ennoble. The sentient creature with immortal spirit holds for these no greater interest than an old bone of past centuries or a bit of antiquated pottery. This is the attitude (be it ever so "scientific") of heartless and conscienceless curiosity.

Third—One may assume the I-am-better-than-thou attitude, and, sanctimoniously guarding himself against contaminating contact with the "unclean," with loud pretense proclaim with voice and airs his personal "holiness," thanking God the while that he is "not as other men." Pity, sympathy and the sense of obligation he knows not, and only scorns, and loathes his unfortunate brother for whom Christ died on the cruel cross, and for whom the Father's heart is yearning. This is the attitude of the deceived, self-righteous formalist.

Fourth—He may have a compassion akin to that of Christ, and, with a brother's love, do a brother's part to help each regain his lost kingdom, and by his efforts crown and sceptre manhood everywhere. His is ever the aspiration to bring all humanity again into its primal and royal relations with the Father-King. This one only of them all grasps the situation and measures aright the magnitude of the tragedy upon which he looks. This one only adequately responds to the needs and opportunities brought before his eyes and brings into proper effort and service every power of his being. This is the attitude of brotherly love.

There can be no doubt about which of these attitudes is Christian. The question for each person is, which attitude do I occupy? With which class does my attitude rank me?

For the Christian there is but one attitude to the unsaved possible.

NOTES FROM THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

BY A RAMBLER.

All things considered, our Delta Methodism has had a good year. With one or two exceptions, the preachers have kept well, and each has apparently sought to do his full duty. The District was perhaps never better manned than now.

Rev. J. W. Honnoll, the grand old man of the Conference, has again given full proof of his ministry at Leland. As a preacher, pastor, and administrator, he has few equals. His work is in fine condition in every respect, and he has lately sold the parsonage of his parish and acquired a much more desirable property, at the same time wiping out a $1,500 debt by the transaction.

Rev. J. H. Ingram has received twenty-five members at Glen Allen, thereby nearly doubling his membership. This is his first year in the Delta, but he has been commendably industrious and is in high favor with his flock. It is needless to say that he is in love with beautiful Lake Washington and the warm-hearted people who live along its shores.

Large audiences wait upon the ministry of Rev. J. R. Countiss at Greenville. He also has a fine prayer-meeting and a wide-awake Sunday School. It is doubtful whether there is a more spiritual Church in the Conference than that over which he has supervision. It contains quite a number of young men and young ladies who will conduct a League service or lead in public prayer.

Rev. J. J. Brooks is winding up his fourth year at Benoit. He invariably wears well, and never fails to serve a full quadrennium in every field. His people hold him in high esteem and will regret to give him up. And this is equally true of Sister Brooks and the other members of his household.

New Church enterprises are under way at Tunica, Dundee, and Boyle. At the first-named place, our house of worship was destroyed by fire; at Dundee there has never been a Church, and at Boyle we have disposed of our old property, and will proceed to erect a new house to cost not less than $2,000 or $2,500.

Rev. E. D. Lewis, of Gunnison, who for the past two years has done most successful work in the Greenville District, will enter the theological department at Vanderbilt this fall. He is a graduate of Millsaps College and a young man of exceptional promise, and we shall regret to have him go from us, though we think he is right to seek the largest possible equipment for his life work.

Rev. W. L. Duren is closing out his second year at Clarksdale in a most satisfactory manner. He has commanded a large hearing from the pulpit, and has maintained the best Sunday School and prayer meeting that the Charge has ever had. He has greatly improved our Church property during the year, and put Methodism on a firmer footing in every way. As an expression of appreciation of his ability and efficient work, the congregation has advanced his salary from $1,200 to $1,350.

Practically every needy field in our territory is now being reached. Dickerson's Chapel (the old Birdie Mission, formerly in the Winona and Sardis Districts) has been given a regular monthly appointment since last March. At Arnold and in the Tennessee settlements (six miles west of Shaw) churches have been organized, and the latter place has agreed to pay $200 for ministerial support next year. And also a good Sunday School has been organized at Francis (between Hillhouse and Deeson), and the people of that community desire to be supplied with preaching next year, for which they think they will be able to pay as much as $300. Thus the work continues to grow in response to the faithful efforts of our aggressive pastors.

The work at Friar's Point moves on smoothly under the guiding hand of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb. A sound and scholarly expositor of the Word, and a conscientious and painstaking pastor, he commands the respect of all and leaves no interest of the Church neglected. We predict for him a career of growing usefulness.

Reinforced by an accomplished mistress of his manse, Rev. R. P. Neblett is rounding out finely at Shelby. It is needless to say that his collections will be in full, and that he will carry up a gratifying report to Water Valley.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the District will hold their annual meetings together at Leland, Oct. 23-25. The annual sermon will be preached by Rev. J. W. Honnoll, and addresses will be made by Mrs. Robert Somerville, Miss Susie Briggs, Mrs. E. D. Lewis, and other capable workers. Two missionary institutes will also be held in the District in the near future: one at Greenville, Oct. 26-30, and the other at Friar's Point, Nov. 2-5. At these institutes speeches will be made by Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Mr. T. B. King, of Memphis, and possibly Mr. J. R. Pepper.

No man in the District has done better work this year than Rev. D. E. Cogdell. Every church in the charge has increased the assessment for ministerial support, and some time since the people of Coahoma gave him a beautiful gold watch as a testimonial of their love and esteem. This noble veteran has led the procession in getting up his Conference collections, and will go to our annual conclave with a clean balance sheet and a happy heart.

Rev. J. T. Lewis is deservedly popular at Cleveland. At a cost of several hundred dollars he has virtually made the parsonage over, transforming it into a most attractive residence. And besides looking well after his own work, he has done effective service as an evangelist at a number of other places. We count him a valuable acquisition to our Delta Methodism.

We regret to state that we fear there are dark days just ahead of us in the now prosperous Delta. The government experts have announced that the dreaded boll weevil already exists in the counties of Washington and Bolivar—the two largest counties in the Greenville District. This means that next year's cotton crop will be seriously injured, if not ruined, and that the interests of the Church also must greatly suffer. The preachers who come to this section next year need not be surprised if they are called upon to endure hardships. Nor do we doubt that if necessary they will do so cheerfully. Methodist ministers have served the people of the Delta "in times that tried men's souls," and when the clergy of other churches were conspicuous by their absence; and they will prove fully equal to the task again if in the providence of God they shall be called upon to do so.

LAWYERS, ATTENTION!

The printing plant of this Advocate is idle about two-thirds of the time. The plant is modern in every particular, and was installed at great cost. Owing to this fact the publisher is compelled to seek other means of employing the machinery in order to justify its use by our paper. We are making an effort to secure a line of work known as "lawyers' briefs," and appeal to our lawyer-friends to patronize us whenever they have need for a printer.

Lawyers living in Mississippi and Louisiana, who find it inconvenient to have "briefs" printed in their home town, are invited to give us a trial. All such work will be "put through over-night," and the work will be delivered by U. S. mail in three to five days, according to the size of "brief." Address us at 512 Camp Street, New Orleans. HANDSBORO AND MISSISSIPPI CITY.

BY REV. W. B. JONES.

If I am not misinformed, the first sermon preached by a Protestant along the gulf coast was at Handsboro more than half a century ago. By whom it was preached, I do not know; but I have the records of my father, the Rev. Ransom J. Jones, who was presiding elder of the Biloxi District reaching back as far as 1857. The District embraced the Counties of Jasper, Smith, Simpson, Marion, Covington, Jones, Perry, Harrison, Hancock and possibly some territory in adjoining Counties; since that time at least three of these Counties have been divided into two. There was no means of travel, of course, except in buggy or on horseback. This territory now comprises the whole of the Seashore District and a considerable part of three others. One wonders at the marvelous advances that have been made by the people called Methodists since that time. Truly, they have labored and we have entered into their labors—they have sown and we have reaped; they sowed in tears; we reap in joy. For example, we take the year 1860, prosperous times, just before the Civil War, and from the records we learn that there was a missionary appropriation for the District of $350, and an assessment of $340 for the presiding elder; of that assessment there was paid the sum of $202.50, making a total paid of $552.50. During 1861, owing to the War no doubt, it was even worse; the same missionary appropriation appears to have been added to $81.50 paid as quarterage, making for that year a total of $431.50. A comparison with recent statistics shows that there is now paid for the presiding elders in the same territory more than $3,600. In those days Methodism was very weak along the coast; it is none too strong now, but there are eight stations and four circuits along the seashore, all included in the old Biloxi District, except Moss Point, Escatawpa and Pascagoula—territory then in the Alabama Conference. Last November Bishop Hendrix dedicated five churches along the coast, and in July of this year he dedicated the churches at Handsboro and Mississippi City. Strange to say, these churches have stood for ten to twenty years without dedication, that is, the present buildings.

At our last annual Conference these two churches were attached to the 20th Street Church, Gulfport, where the writer is now closing up his third year. Prof. E. G. Mohler, Jr., a local preacher, principal of the Gulfport Graded School and a very valuable man, was appointed as junior preacher, and during the year we have alternated in preaching; we have services every Sunday at 20th Street, and two Sundays each at the other churches. Brother Mohler has been duly recommended for admission on trial at our next Conference, and he will be a valuable recruit among our very best prepared and most consecrated young men.

I presume that conditions at these two churches were never better than now. Some more church people have moved in, and the people are taking more interest and pride in their churches, it seems, than ever before. At Mississippi City, during the year, the Church has been painted inside, new pews and pulpit put in, electric lights installed, the Methodist Hymnal supplied, the ladies organized into an Aid Society, a good Sunday School kept up and good congregations all the year. We have just closed one of the best meetings, if not the best, ever held there. Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Long Beach, did the preaching and it goes without saying that it was well done and lasting results accomplished.

At Handsboro a tower to the church has been built, the building painted inside and out, a splendid Sunday School organized and kept going, the church supplied with the Methodist Hymnal and the Young People's Hymnal, the ladies organized into a Home Mission Society, and there have been good congregations all the year. Brother E. W. Lipscomb, of Broad Street (Hattiesburg) has been with us in a ten-day meeting at this place. The results were beyond the fondest dreams of the most hopeful of the church. Numbers were converted and added to the Church. No sensational methods were employed by either of these brethren but the power of the gospel was magnified upon as the sole drawing power; they both came believing that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and they did not hesitate to stake their reputation on that; and they both still believe in the mourner's bench, the old Methodist altar, and in the use of the old Methodist hymns. No other song books were used except the Methodist Hymnal. It is not true that there can not be a revival without the use of some of the catchy little songs that perish with the using; the hymns of our fathers are still good enough, and I believe that our Common Hymnal is the best songbook extant.

THE PATRIARCH OF BOONEVILLE, MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. Philip R. Hoyle, at the time of his death in Booneville, Sept. 27, 1904, had been for seven years a resident of the town. Prior to that time his home was near Carolina Church, some three miles in the country. Here I suppose he had lived for quite a number of years, and was said to be very near and dear to the people of Booneville, both before and after his move to town. While living near Carolina Church, he is said to have married more people in town than all the preachers of the several denominations combined.

Memory retains a vivid picture of Brother Hoyle as he was wont on pleasant Sabbaths to appear in the congregation. He was of medium size, regular features and pleasant expression of countenance. Neatly dressed in a black clerical suit, he would sit within the chancel or near the pulpit, being defective in his hearing, a devout and attentive worshiper. His prayers at the close of the sermon were of remarkable excellence, full, clear and earnest. At this time he was apparently hale and vigorous for a man in his eighty-fourth year, and still preached as opportunity presented. No preacher, I suppose, had a warmer place in the hearts of the people, both in the town and the surrounding country. He was truly a patriarch of Booneville, and of the country round about.

From a pencil sketch, over his own signature, and bearing date of Aug. 4, 1904, less than two months before his death, we take the following interesting summary of his life and labors as a servant of God and of the Church:

He was born in Cleaveland County, North Carolina, Nov. 8, 1820; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in October, 1839; was converted and made a profession of faith in Christ on Sunday evening, the 11th day of October, 1840.

It will thus be seen that Brother Hoyle joined the Church as a seeker of religion and was not converted until about a year afterwards. It was a custom in the earlier days to encourage sincere penitents to unite with the Church.

Brother Hoyle was licensed to preach in October, 1843. In 1844 he was admitted into the South Carolina Conference and, with Ira L. Potter, was sent to the Union Circuit, having twenty-eight appointments, to be filled every four weeks. He received $100 for the year's labors. The next year, on account of ill health, he was left without appointment. In 1846 he was sent with William P. Mouzon to Santee Circuit. In this, and the circuit named above, I suppose his position was that of junior preacher, or assistant to the preacher-in-charge. On the Santee Circuit he received $50 for his services. In 1847 he was sent to the King's Mountain Circuit, the Circuit in which he was licensed to preach. There were thirteen appointments to be filled in three weeks. During the year he preached 202 sermons, received into the Church 132 members, and received as salary $100. At the close of this year he was ordained deacon by Bishop Andrew. In 1848 he was returned to the same Charge, the name being changed to Shelby Circuit; preached [illegible] sermons, received into the Church 75 members, baptized 68 persons, and was paid $125. In 1849 he was sent to the Yorkville Circuit with 13 appointments to be filled in three weeks; preached 198 sermons, received into the Church 120 members; baptized 68 persons and was paid $216. At the close of this year he was ordained elder by Bishop Andrew. In 1850 he was sent to Morganton Circuit, having 14 appointments to be filled every three weeks; preached 238 sermons, received into the Church, 311 members; baptized 132 persons and was paid for his services $216.

At the close of this year, 1850, Brother Hoyle located, and moved with his family to Tishomingo County, Miss., "where," adopting the language of the pencil sketch, he says: "I lived and labored as a local preacher, serving the Church as trustee, class-leader, superintendent of Sunday School and steward." "I have been in a great many revivals of religion. Witnessed the conversion of hundreds of souls, and have baptized and received into the Church a great many persons. Have buried a great many." "And now, in the evening of life, looking back over the past, I can only wish I had done more and better work for the Lord, who had been so good to me all the way, and am willing to trust him for what is to come. I feel that I stand on the rock, Christ Jesus, and he will be with me to the end."

Brother Hoyle tells us that 328 couples were united by him in marriage. His ministry covered a period of more than three-score years—seven in the traveling connection and nearly fifty-four in the local ranks. The world is made better, brighter, happier by the life and labors of such a man as Philip R. Hoyle, the beloved patriarch of Booneville.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

"THE BAPTIST DRIFT."

BY A CIRCUIT RIDER.

I was considerably amused over the article from Brother W. A. Jordan in the ADVOCATE of Oct. 1, 1908, under the caption "The Baptist Drift." I came to the conclusion, after reading it, that he must have been named after "the river Jordan." (I caught myself wondering if "W. A." stands for the "Waters of Ainon.") I also came to the same conclusion I arrived at a long time ago—that many Baptists need to get out of their selfishness and bigotry.

There are two or three statements in his article worthy of puncture. He thinks that those who believe in Christ are saved eternally, and cites John iii, 36, as proof: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." This is a precious verse, but it does not teach "once in grace, always in grace." As Wesley says, "He hath it (everlasting life) already, for he loves God. And love is the essence of heaven."

A multitude of passages teach that we must keep on believing and loving, and walking in the way of the commandments if we get to heaven. There are many which teach that a believer can lose his love, such as Matt. xxiv, 12; Rev. ii, 4.

We must "abide" in Christ, and we can "abide" by keeping his commandments (John xv, 9, 10). Those who do not "abide" in him will be lost.

There are also many passages which teach that a child of God can give up his entire faith and profession, and in consequence receive damnation, such as I Tim. iv, 1; v, 8; v, 12; vi, 10; II Tim. ii, 8.

There are many exhortations to continue in faith, and not make shipwreck, such as Acts xiv, 22; I Tim. i, 19; Heb. x, 23; Rev. xiv, 12; I Cor. xvi. 13; Col. i. 23; I Tim. ii. 15.

Many passages teach that God may depart from a man, even after his Spirit rested powerfully upon him, such as I Sam. xvi, 14; xxviii, 15.

Many passages show the necessity of believers being "faithful," such as Deut. vii, 9-11; Psa. xxxi, 23; Hosea xi, 12; Matt. xxiv, 45-47; xxv, 21; Luke xvi, 10, 11; I Cor. iv, 2; iv, 17; Eph. i, 1; vi, 21; Col. i, 2; i, 7; II Tim. ii, 2; Rev. ii, 10.

Many passages show the necessity of believers "holding out," such as Matt. xxiv, 11-13; Heb. iii, 12; iii. 14; iv. 14; x, 23; I Thess. v, 21; Job xxvii, 6; 2 Tim. i, 13; Titus i, ix; Rev. ii, 25.

Many passages show the necessity of believers "overcoming," such as John xvi, 33; Rom. xii, 19-21; II Peter ii. 20, 21; I John ii, 13; iv, 4; v, 4; Rev. ii, 7; ii, 11; ii, 17; ii, 26; iii, 3; iii, 21; xxi, 7.

There are a multitude of miscellaneous passages which teach the necessity of perseverance in order to get to heaven, such as II Thes. ii, 17; iii, 13; Gal. vi, 9; I Cor. iii, 10, 14, 15; xv, 18; II Cor. v, 9; Eph. ii, 10; Heb. vi, 10; II Chron. xv, 7; Isa iii, 10, 11; Rev. xxii, 12.

Yet, this writer recently heard a representative Baptist preacher proclaim from the pulpit that the Bible nowhere teaches that a believer has either to be faithful, to overcome, or to hold out in order to get to heaven. Many who embrace such stuff may be "in grace," but they are also in grass. They are as green as grass in their knowledge of the Scriptures. It's a wonder to me the geese don't pick them!

Brother Jordan intimates that all Christians who were not immersed are unbaptized Philistines. Says he: "I must confess that I do not see the signs (or marks, context) of the true Church in other communions, and that is why I cannot affiliate and commune with them." He also says: "For Bapists to commune with Methodists, we would have to sacrifice a principle we hold to be sacred. We would, by that act, recognize sprinkling and pouring as baptism, which we can never do."

It would be difficult to write two paragraphs more pregnant with conceit and bigotry. They are also the climax of ignorance. I have known a long time that immersion is the darling of Baptists, and they have held creeks, and ponds, and pools to be "very sacred" ever since they quit practicing sprinkling.

Dr. Whitsitt (a Baptist) has shown that the Baptist Church, both in England and America, started out by practicing sprinkling, and he affirms that "the verdict of antiquity among Baptists is in favor of sprinkling as the true mode of baptism." The quotation is in his exact language.

Doubtless if the founders of the Baptist Church (who were all sprinkled and kept the mode up for a number of years) were to return to earth, Brother Jordan and modern Baptists, who have departed from their first love (practice), would refuse to commune with them. They would probably say to them, "Our modern principle is too sacred."

Brother Jordan did not specify the "marks," or "signs," which constitute a true church; yet he intimates that the great essential attribute is immersion. Baptists possess no "marks" which Methodists do not possess, unless they are the mud-splashes they received when they went down into and came up out of muddy creeks and stagnant ponds.

The truth is, the Methodist Church possesses such genuine marks or signs, and is making such rapid strides, that Baptists have to preach continually their "sacred principle" and do a lot of proselyting from other churches to keep within hearing distance.

Let prayer be made that Brother Jordan and his coadjutors who hold so tenaciously to the modern "sacred principle" of immersion, and who take great delight in squirting the "liquid grave" theory right and left, goin' and comin', will get out of their selfishness, conceit and ignorance, and cultivate a more fraternal spirit.

There is much truth in the charge that "Baptists are the most selfish and bigoted people in the world;" but it is not true that they have more faith and piety and good works than others. Many of them manifest an intolerant spirit that Methodists are glad to be free from.

NOTE FROM REV. I. T. REAMES.

Dear Editor: I wish to say to my brethren of the Louisiana Conference that I expect to be with them at their annual meeting, and to be one of them in the future. As there is quite an interval between the meeting of the Montana and Louisiana Conferences at my disposal, I will be prepared to deliver a limited number of stereopticon lectures on "Wonderland." Doubtless many have read Dr. Chappell's description in the Nashville Advocate. I am prepared to faithfully portray these magnificent scenes, both by speech and plain and colored transparencies, in seventy or more views, taking the audience from one scene to another, thus making a complete tour of the Park. If any brother should desire a lecture within the bounds of his charge, he may correspond with me in reference to dates. Admission fees will be at the popular price for stereopticon lectures. I have made two trips through the Park, and can speak as "one having authority." My equipment will give satisfaction. Cordially,

I. T. REAMES.

MISSION STUDY BOOKS.

The new mission study books of the Young People's Missionary Movement are attracting a great deal of attention and receiving high praise. For the Foreign Mission study course we have "The Moslem World," by Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, sixteen years a missionary to Arabia, and one of the highest authorities on all Islam problems; while for the Home Mission study we have Dr. Ward Platt's splendid presentation of our Western situation and needs in "The Frontier." These books are in every way worthy to rank with the books of last season which were studied by 175,000 Christians in North America. They are to be had at the customary low prices of 35 cents in paper, and 50 cents in cloth binding, postage being 8 cents on each. Now is the time to organize the mission study class, and each pastor should have at least one enthusiastic class on his charge.

"The Call of God to Men," the book giving the full report of the magnificent speeches and work of the Laymen's Missionary Conference at Chattanooga, should be in the hands of every Methodist layman. It is sold for only $1, and it will be worth many times as much in information and inspiration to larger and nobler thought and life.

All the above books, or any others on the great subject of missions, can be had of Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss., or from our Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., or from myself in Jackson, Miss. H. M. ELLIS, Missionary Secretary.

The theory of work is to put a great deal of one's self into the thing which one undertakes, whatever it may be.—W. J. Tucker, D.D.

Take a course in forgetting. You can forget ever so many things to your infinite comfort and advantage, and there is an easy way of doing it. Crowd them out. Forget that it rains by crowding the rainy day brimful of work or enjoyment. Forget that your best friend slighted you by "remembering" somebody else with all your might. Forget your failures—crowd them out with splendid victories.—Wellspring.

"Wait and see, my brother! Sorrow-stricken sister, wait and see! Look, too, at this glowing verse that flashes out in the darkness: 'What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.' The end of the voyage is not far off to some of us. What saith the legend of the compass? Here it is: 'Let not your heart be troubled: believe also in me; in my Father's house are many mansions; I go to prepare a place for you.' 'It doth not yet appear what we shall be.' No matter, so long as we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Let the winds roar, then, if they will. Our Pilot is at the helm!"—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

MAKING GOOD.

BY W. A. BELK.

By "making good" I mean succeeding at whatever one undertakes. The world admires a winner and despises a failure. When David slew Goliath he simply immortalized himself. He has been a hero ever since. Cæsar never lost a battle and historians have lionized him. "Nothing succeeds like success" is an expression which will never lose its force. A young man, in starting out in life should acquire the simple habit of succeeding. One victory, even though it be in small matters, will strengthen him for the next one. "Each victory will help him some other to win" is a true saying. The boy who overcomes one bad habit or resists one temptation has gone a long way on the road toward success.

I wish in this little article to notice three things which, it seems to me, are essential in "making good."

First—To make good, one must be backed up by a strong, healthy moral character. No matter what ability God may have given a man, he cannot achieve true greatness unless his moral foundation is good. There comes a moment of supreme test in the life of everyone. We have all seen persons move along in society without a whisper against them. They were respected by all. But there came a day when they were put to the supreme test morally, and they went down. Almost daily we read where some apparently good man has fallen helpless before some temptation brought about by his position. We have but to read the daily press to learn of the downfall of men of high standing all over our land. What was their trouble? Their moral foundation was at fault. Where are the weak places in the works of Byron, George Elliott and even of our own Irwin Russell? They lie in the fact that the reader knows the authors failed to "make good" morally. Haskell, Dupont and Foraker have fallen in the last few weeks. Let every young person see to it that they are supported by a strong moral character. "Then thou shalt have good success."

Second—No one can make good who has not a trained mind. No one has ever achieved success by accident. He may have come upon success suddenly, but behind that moment were hours of thought and experience. The fame of Columbus was fixed from that eventful October day, when he first saw the Bahama Islands. But long before this "Genoese sailor stepped upon the trackless wave and turned his prows toward the untrodden seas of the West" he had studied and thought out all the intricacies of his task. Dewey won immortal fame in one short hour at Manila Bay—but read his life, and see what experience and training he had undergone before that memorable day. Admiral Togo crushed the Russian fleet in one encounter and thereby became famous. But he had been trained and disciplined in his work long before the Russo-Japanese War had been dreamed of. Let every young man not forget that his training must precede his success. His training must come in some way or other—either by hard knocks or by some other route. The sooner he trains his mind, the better it will be for him.

Third—In order to make good one should know himself. He should study his weak points and his strong ones. Pope has well said, "Know thyself." In my opinion, many men fail because they undertake to do the wrong thing. God has something at which each man may make a success. He wants us to succeed, and it grieves him for us to fail. All men cannot make Bishops, judges, governors, doctors, nor farmers. It is well they cannot. Some should be gifted in one thing and some in another.

Let a young man get his general education—get his mind trained and then, when he has learned what his special work is, let him get at it just as courageously [illegible]

THE LOVING-CUP.

"Oh, it is so hard, so hard [illegible]

"Yes, dear child, I know it," [illegible] a tender pressure of the [illegible]

"If I had done anything [illegible] ness with its long [illegible] perhaps I might understand it better—at least the way of it, but I cannot find any cause."

"We get into sad tangles when we meddle too much with second causes, Louise," was the response. "Not a sparrow falls without our Father. It is better to rest on that."

"If I could only see and feel the love in it," sighed the young girl.

"It is there, just the same," responded her comforter. "I will lend you one of my treasures, Louise, which has spoken comfortingly to me and perhaps you may find help in it. I will send it when I go home."

"Thank you, and thank you for not trying as some do, to make me think that it is not hard to be taken out of all my active life and laid aside in this way. Saying so does not make it so. It helps me so much more to have you say that it really is not easy, but that you are sorry and will try to help me."

"I have passed this way myself, and that makes a difference, perhaps," was the kind rejoinder, and then there was a bright and tender good-bye.

Before long the package came, and when eagerly opened, the young girl's astonished eyes beheld an old-time loving-cup, quaintly chased, and somewhat battered, an heirloom coming down from some remote ancestor of Mrs. Barton.

"I wonder what is the interpretation thereof," exclaimed Louise, looking in the package for some message, her thoughts pleasantly diverted meanwhile from her pain and weariness. Presently she found a tiny scrap of a note, overlooked at first, but it only said: "A loving-cup, dear, is for close friends, and it has two handles. Think it out, and it will help you more."

Here was something to employ the girl's keen brain, and in the hours of enforced quiet, she pondered it over, recurring to all she knew of the ancient custom when this silver cup was first used. Friends drank from it in token of love and loyalty, and it had two handles. Yes, to be sure—and—and, each friend took hold of a handle in lifting it to the lips of the one who drank. Was not that it?

But how could this help her? Was her friend's prayer that the loving Lord would suggest the comfort, a connecting-link now? Was another link the girl's habit of turning the leaves of a wall-roll, morning by morning, and repeating the chosen words while dressing? Surely the Spirit who brings holy things to remembrance suggested this line, ever so learned long before from the roll:

[illegible] in the bowl
[illegible] drank [illegible]

"[illegible] the other handle," she murmured [illegible] came like an inspiration. [illegible] is a healing-cup, though it is bitter. [illegible] first, and he knows. A healing-leaf [illegible] the waters of Marah. Cannot anything be [illegible] if there is love in it?"

[illegible] again, Louise lifted [illegible] thoughtful face [illegible] pointing to the [illegible] "It is just as hard as ever, I mean the thing itself, the cup is just the same, but now I see why it has two handles, and I can see the hand on one of them. It helps me so."

Mrs. Barton's face was glad. "I know how your eyes have been opened," she said. "Babies must have the cup held for them, but we who are older must do something for ourselves. You have taken the other handle yourself, Louise, and willingly, for now you know that it is a loving-cup."—American Messenger.

If God's spirit abide with thee, all things will be easy from the spirit and love; for there is nothing that makes the soul so courageous and venturesome for anything as a good hope.—St. Chrysostom.

OBEDIENCE.

Men may not make laws by which to regulate their conduct towards God. His government is not Democratic. God himself is the law-giver. He also fixes the penalty for any infraction of his statutes. Men have absolutely nothing to do except to render perfect obedience. Considering human depravity, together with the inclination and temptation to evil, that is putting it pretty strong. But it is no stronger than our Lord expressed it when he said, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

We do not pretend to say that anyone is perfect, or that anyone renders perfect obedience, but we do say that if anyone falls short of perfect obedience it is his own fault, for everything necessary to help him to a life of obedience is at hand. We know the weakness of men. We know likewise that "when we would do good evil is present with us," but to say that perfect obedience is impossible is to say that the gospel of the grace of God is a failure.

Many people entertain the idea that the principal purpose of the gospel is to save men in heaven; and that the work necessary to fit men for heaven is effected in the article of death, at the only period of a man's life when he is free of both the temptations from within and the influences from without. In other words, at a period when man is least likely to offer opposition to the power of grace. On this point we learn a lesson from St. Paul. He said to the Romans: "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." In this expression the apostle does not teach that the end of life is perfection, but the end of a perfect life is heaven, or "everlasting life."

The position of those who deny the possibility of perfect obedience is wholly inconsistent, in that they admit the power of grace to save a man from any single sin, and yet hold that he is bound to sin more or less every day. Were we to ask: Can grace save a man from murder? the answer would unhesitatingly be: it can. Were we to ask: can grace save a man from lying? with one accord, all would say, yes. And we would get the same answer were we to name, one at a time, all the crimes in the catalogue. But were we to ask? Can grace save a man from all sin? there would be hesitancy, if not an outright denial. If grace can save a man from one crime, or from half a dozen or more (and we know it does from experience and observation) can anyone tell us why it is impossible for grace to save from all sin, and help men to render perfect obedience to God?

Should every man, whether a real or nominal Christian, apply to himself the question: Is it my duty to render perfect obedience to God? not one would say, no. He would be ashamed to acknowledge that his sense of obligation to God is less than that of a faithful servant to a good master. Then why does not every man professing to be a Christian render that obedience? There can be, in the light of the gospel, but one answer: It is because they will not. That is what Jesus said to the Jews who heard him preach and witnessed his wonderful works: "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life."

Should we press this matter home to every individual and force an answer, we have no idea we would find one, save here and there a self-righteous Pharisee, who would fail to acknowledge his many shortcomings and plead for forgiveness. Such an acknowledgement, and such pleading would be utterly useless if it be true that men are so bound by the law of sin as to be unable to render such an obedience as to lead the Master to say: "Well done, good and faithful servant." It would be impossible for the Master to say that if it be true that up to the moment of death no man can render perfect obedience.

If men feel their shortcomings and throw themselves on God's mercy for forgiveness, they are untrue to themselves, and discount divine willingness and divine ability when they fail to use the grace of God necessary to help them to a life of obedience.

Are we not inconsistent when we pray for help and guidance, and saving and sustaining grace, and sing of goodness and love and mercy, and promise to go anywhere, and say anything, and do anything God may command, and yet deny the power of the blood to cleanse, and the power of grace to make us perfect?

We can think of no greater menace to Christian faith and courage than the preacher who stands in his pulpit and tells his people that he "sins everyday of his life." What sort of an ideal has such a man of the "perfect law of liberty?"

A SUGGESTION.

The International Christian Missionary Convention, held in New Orleans, beginning Oct. 9, and which was largely attended, had among other attractions, what the Daily Picayune called an "athletic feature." This feature consisted of a baseball game played at the Pelican Park between "the Barraca team of the Fullahoma Tennessee Christian Church and a picked team from the local Young Men's Christian Association, and a football game between Tulane and the Young Men's Gymnastic Club."

St. Paul may have witnessed the Grecian games, but we seriously doubt that he took any active part in them, nor do we believe that he organized a team at Corinth, and went with it to another city for a match game, as the Picayune says the Rev. Everett Smith, of Tullahoma did with his boys. This is the first time we ever read of a minister of the gospel "directing" a baseball team, and going with it five hundred miles to a missionary convention. But this is a fast age—a day of new things under the sun, and we live and learn.

Are our religious conventions to be popularized by "athletic features?" Are young missionaries to be trained on the diamond, or the gridiron before sending them out to save the heathen? How much interest did the Fullahoma Team take in the exercises of the Convention? How much missionary spirit did they inspire in the boys of New Orleans?

But we started to make a suggestion. It is this: That Southern Methodists, a progressive people, ready to adopt any legitimate method at all adapted to advance the interests of the gospel, proceed at once to organize a football team, and put it in training, so that by the meeting of the General Conference at Asheville, it may be ready to make a challenge for the world's championship; and we hereby nominate the following distinguished men for "the eleven:" James Campbell, Jno. R. Pepper, John A. Rice, J. L. Burton, W. B. Palmore, H. M. Blair, P. H. Fields, T. W. Lewis, A. L. Andrews, R. G. Waterhouse, and J. H. Weaver.

If anybody can amend by suggesting heavier weights than the above, naming either laymen or preachers, the amendments will be accepted.

It may not be a very dignified thing for a great Church to engage in a football game at the General Conference, but it would be "a feature," and lots of fun with such a team, and it would help Asheville pay expenses of the entertainment.

NEW IN METHODISM.

More than once have we called attention to steps taken by members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which tend towards congregationalism. The newest and plainest thing in that line we find in Zion's Herald of Sept. 30. The paragraph reads as follows:

"The committee of nine on pulpit supply of Centre Church, Malden, at a meeting held on Monday evening, voted unanimously to invite Rev. L. J. Birney, of Newton Centre, to become their next pastor."

How does that sound for Episcopal Methodists? What is a Bishop to do? The action taken, officially presented, is more than a request—it is a requisition. Should he fail to honor it, a breach would be made between the Church and the appointing power. The man sent to the Church other than the one invited, would go so handicapped that he could not do the work. Besides, if the preacher accepts the invitation, both he and the Church ignore the obligation of every Methodist itinerant, voluntarily assumed, to do the work at such times and places deemed best by the authorities, which being interpreted, means on the part of the preacher, that he must go where he is sent. In this case the Episcopacy is denied the opportunity of administering the law.

Are we ready for anything like this down South?

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW.

The Review for October is a superb issue. It is of much more than ordinary interest. The contents are so varied that almost every manner of taste can be accommodated. The students of Methodist history will be pleased with the article, "The Methodist Church and Slavery," by the late Bishop Soule, and the paper of Bishop Hendrix, "The General Conference of 1808; A Century of Constitutional Government." "Gospel or Gospels," by Prof. Thos. Carter is good reading—entertaining and profitable. From a theological standpoint it is sound, and worthy of study, albeit there are two or three expressions which have a strange sound. When Prof. Carter says: "The Gospels were formulated by the Church," and "The Church made the Gospels," we confess we do not know what he means. Were Gilbert Haven, Wendell Phillips and Charles Sumner alive and could read Bishop Galloway's "Judicial Estimate" of Jefferson Davis, they would "be almost persuaded" that Mr. Davis was a great and good man. It will make the memory of the great chieftain dearer than ever to the hearts of those who shared with him the fortunes of the "Lost Cause." Dr. Charles Forster Smith writes entertainingly of "Ideal Teaching and Teacher." The school men will read it with delight. Students would be profited by its perusal. Could the truths presented by Dr. Dyer in his paper on "The Duties of the Christian Citizen" be read by a certain class of politicians with an honest purpose, we would soon see better things in our towns and cities. Bosses would cease to rule.

Dr. Hamill gives us an "Interior View of Japan Methodism." This article is informing. After having been in Japan six months witnessed much of both its religious and irreligious life—he repudiates the idea that 'Japan is already a Christian nation, and its rulers largely Christian men," on the one hand; and on the other, that "Japanese men are immoral and dishonest, and alleged missionary successes in Japan a delusion." "Much harm," he says, "has come to Japan from friends as well as foes." And the Doctor saw things in Japan which he thinks it would be well for Methodists in America to adopt. For example, the election of Bishops for a term of years, and the election of presiding elders by the Annual Conference, or, that which is equivalent to an election, viz., the "nomination of twice as many persons as are needed as presiding elders, the Bishop to select from the number nominated his appointees." To this is added a saving clause: "Provided he (the Bishop) may ask further nominations at his pleasure." This proviso looks like "a sop to Cerberus." Ever since our acquaintance with Dr. Hamill we have been an ardent admirer—have looked upon him as a leader—which indeed he is in his chosen field, and upon which he seems to have a "life tenure," but in advising changes in the polity of Episcopal Methodism we beg leave not only to discount, but to decline his leadership. It was over questions of similar import that brought about the only real schism in Methodism in America. When settled by the withdrawal of O'Kelly and his followers, the Church had rest and success for more than fifty years. It was these identical questions that disturbed Tennessee Methodism under the leadership of B. F. Haynes less than two decades ago. We feel sure the Church in those regions does not wish to undergo another like experience.

If we understand Dr. Hamill, he would go further than reform the Church, he would revolutionize it. At least he "makes bold to affirm" that the "order" or "office" of Bishop, whichever it may be, "by a simple vote of a General Conference" may be terminated, "at any time," and "that without further reason given than that it pleases so to do." In other words: The General Conference, instead of being co-ordinate with the Episcopacy, is superior to it, and may abolish it at any time and by a simple vote. How Dr. Hamill can assume such a position with the Third Restrictive Rule staring him in the face is beyond comprehension. It may be that he recognizes a "higher law" than that of the Constitution. The Doctor does not say that he favors such a method of procedure—only expresses his belief that by some sort of a shift or turn of the Constitution it can be done in that way. We half-way believe the Doctor would join in thus violating the Restrictive Rule, if thereby he could rid the Church of the idea that one who is elected to the Episcopacy "has been lifted to an 'order,' instead of an 'office.'" It has been a long time since we met a suggestion so utterly at variance with law. We hope Dr. Hamill will not soon make another visit to Japan.

We commend the Review to all our preachers—the old as well as the young—and urge them to read it. Not everything in it will please everybody, but occasionally every reader will strike an article that will be worth more to him than ten times the price of the Review. Try it and see.

The people of Louisiana and adjoining sections have had occasion to exercise patience and trust. Floods of rain for weeks past have injured the rice and sugar cane and cotton, the main crops of the State. In many places the fall gardens, so much needed and prized, are complete failures. Early plantings are ruined, and it will be too late to plant again by the time the ground gets in condition to work. But God rules, and we must "trust and obey."

PERSONALS.

Rev. W. W. Perry writes: "We closed out a splendid camp meeting at Salem. We had many conversions and eleven accessions to the Church." Brother Perry writes from the Americus Circuit.

Rev. Paul M. Brown, on Sunday night, closed a good meeting at Glenmora, La., and the pastor, Rev. W. R. Whatley, says that Brother Brown gave his people a number of strong and effective sermons.

Rev. A. S. Lutz is this week assisting Rev. A. I. Townsley in a meeting at Second Church, this city. Brother Lutz is one of our most successful pastor-evangelists. We trust Second Church may be greatly blessed.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, of Alexandria, La., began Sunday last a meeting with Rev. W. W. Holmes at Louisiana Avenue Church. The opening services were very encouraging. There were signs of promise.

At the Preachers' Meeting in this city on Monday last Rev. J. E. Wray, D.D., was unanimously elected to preach the Thanksgiving sermon, and Rayne Memorial Church was selected as the place for the Thanksgiving service.

On account of misprinting the name of "The Patriarch of Booneville," by Dr. T. C. Wier, we reproduce it in this week's issue. This we think better than trying to make correction, which not one reader in a hundred would undertake to verify.

Rev. F. M. Ham, who led a revival service in this city last winter, was in the city this week in consultation with the pastors, having in view the inauguration of revival services some time the coming winter. Mr. Ham has been in a successful meeting at Chester, Miss.

A message by telephone comes to us this morning (Tuesday, the 20th) that our venerable brother, Rev. George Jackson, is critically ill at his home, Lecompte, La. It is feared that he will not recover. May it be light with him at eventide!

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, writing from Scooba, Miss., says: "I am closing my second year on this charge well. Have had great revivals, resulting in many conversions and valuable accessions to the Church. Notwithstanding the panic, I think now that the Conference collections will be in full."

The Rayne Memorial brethren are looking forward with great interest to the coming of Rev. W. J. Dawson, of England, who will conduct a meeting beginning the first week in November. Under the leadership of the pastor, Dr. J. A. Rice, they are making great preparation, and expecting great things.

Rayne Memorial Church, in New Orleans, has purchased property for a parsonage, about a square from the church. At the time of this writing we do not know just what the building is like, but we do know that Rayne Memorial always has a large vision for the present and future needs of the work.

Mr. David See Bachman, son of our Brother G. W. Bachman of North Mississippi, will be married on Tuesday, the 27th of October, to Miss Mamie Martin, daughter of Mrs. Bettie Diggs, of Acona, Miss. They will be at home, Winona, Miss., after the 1st of November. We are thankful for an invitation to the wedding. May the blessings of a kind Providence be theirs through life.

We are under obligation to Dr. Theo. Copeland for a fine photograph—a fairly good likeness of himself—and also for the last letter received by him from our ascended Brother Porter, written less than a week before his death. The letter is in characteristic vein—Porter-like, full of the spirit of a man who loves God, and [illegible]. How greatly will our brother be missed at the coming Conference!

Dr. Sawyer spent a delightful and successful day last Sunday with Rev. A. S. J. Neill, our pastor at Winnfield. He addressed large congregations morning and night, and got a good collection. Rev. N. W. Turner had been helping Brother Neill in his meeting and did some good preaching. The Winnfield charge is reported as being in splendid shape, and the pastor is quite sure to report all his collections in full at Leesville in December.

Rev. T. J. Durrett, writing from Nettleton, Miss., [illegible] of the state of his work. Though not in robust health, he has held his protracted meetings with great success—nine meetings in all—resulting in one hundred conversions and seventy-nine additions to the Church. He has six Sunday Schools and one flourishing Epworth League, and thinks he will report full collections at Conference. The people of Nettleton Charge are very kind to him, which he greatly appreciates.

Rev. Alonzo Monk, D.D., pastor of one of the leading churches in Louisville, Ky., called at the Advocate office on Thursday, Oct. 15. He had been at the bedside of a sick son in California, who is now convalescing from a serious illness. Dr. Monk, like the late Dr. John Matthews, is sui generis, unique and forceful in his personality and power. We understand that his son, Alonzo, Jr., has transferred to one of the Texas Conferences, and will shortly make his way to that State.

A good word comes from our afflicted brother, Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan. On the 15th the surgeon freed him "from some of the trappings used to prevent shortening of the limb." And he is "to use a roller chair four weeks before attempting to walk." The Doctor has hope of meeting the brethren at Conference. He is cheerful, bearing patiently what he calls "the little part that falls to him of the afflictions of the Lord's people." He thanks "all the good brethren for their blessed words of sympathy and regard."

Rev. Richard Wilkinson has a series of lectures which he delivers "under the exclusive Chautauqua management of the National Chautauqua Bureau, of Washington, D.C." Dr. Wilkinson has delivered these lectures, not, however, as a series, at many places North and South, and everywhere has gained golden opinions for himself. In a comparatively short time he has won fame as an eloquent, entertaining and edifying speaker. We rejoice with our old friend in his great success. He still retains his hold on St. James' congregation, Augusta, Ga.

Rev. W. G. Harbin and Rev. C. N. Guice are in a meeting at Port Gibson, Miss., and are "having a great time." Several preachers of the Mississippi Conference are with them in the meeting, besides the pastor, Rev. W. H. Lewis. Brother Harbin desires us to say that in his notes of last week, when we printed "mouth-found voice lisping in fancy's sweet prayer," he wrote "mouth-found voice lisping infancy's sweet prayer." Three of us put our heads together in consultation and did the best we could. Persons intending to correspond with Brother Harbin will take notice that his address is changed from Biloxi, Miss., to Haynesville, La.

We are under obligation to Rev. J. E. McCulloch, Superintendent of the Methodist Training School, Nashville, for a copy of Bishop Hendrix's able article, "The Migrating Nations: America's Opportunity." This is a reprint from the July issue of the Methodist Quarterly Review, 1908, and is sent out by the Training School for the purpose of stirring the consciences of American Christians to the duty of evangelizing the thousands of immigrants that are coming to our shores every month. This pamphlet should be widely circulated. Copies can be obtained by addressing Rev. J. E. McCulloch, Nashville, Tenn.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the Obituary. That will save trouble all around.

CALVIN S. GREEN, father of Rev. Robt. Green, of the Louisiana Conference, died at his home on Sicily Island, May 14, 1908. He was a native of West Feliciana Parish, La., having first seen the light of day Aug. 20, 1832. In his youth he united with the Methodist Church and died in its communion and fellowship. In the last years of his life he was blind, yet he ever seemed cheerful on the occasion of a friendly visit, and his faith was strong in the invisible. He was married to Miss Jennie R. Lutrick, Nov. 22, 1871. She was faithful in her care and service to the end of his life. We buried him in the Pine Hill Cemetery, where, with friends and comrades, he awaits the final resurrection. S. J. D.

JOHN L. CALDWELL, son of Rev. H. R. Caldwell, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South, was born in McCracken County, Ky., Nov. 29, 1858, and died at Mount Olive, Miss., Oct. 3, 1908. Brother Caldwell made a profession of religion in Ballard County, Ky., in 1871 and united with the M. E. Church, South, of which Church he was ever after a consistent member. In November, 1890, Brother Caldwell was married to Miss Laura Dillehay, daughter of Rev. D. W. Dillehay, a member of the Mississippi Conference, now deceased. A wife and two daughters mourn the loss of a devoted husband and tender father. The anxious, tender ministry of loved ones was a beautiful expression of their devotion to husband and father. The hands of faithful friends were untiring and their sympathies unabating throughout the illness that terminated in death. While Brother Caldwell craved to be spared to the bosom of his family, he gave assurance that he had no fear of death. He suffered much, and the kind hand of death brought sweet relief. In their great sorrow the loved ones are submissive to the will of a wise and beneficient God. They saw their dead laid away in lively hope of a glorious resurrection and immortality. May the tender mercies of the Lord be theirs in their sorrow. Their pastor,

J. A. MOORE.

MRS. AMELIA EDWARDS (nee Hailes) was born in Smith County, Miss., March 4, 1851, and died in Pelahatchie, Miss., Sept. 20, 1908. She was married to Mr. Jonathan Edwards March 1, 1871. To this union were born four sons and two daughters. One daughter preceded her mother to the glory land, the other daughter and the four sons and their father, with a host of other relatives and friends, survive to mourn their loss. Early in life Sister Edwards gave her heart to God and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which Church she lived a consistent member till God called her into the Church triumphant. Sister Edwards was a loving wife, kind mother, and good neighbor. Her last illness was such as to wreck her nerves and render her irritable, but she bore her suffering with the fortitude that characterizes the true Christian. Some hours before she died she realized the end was near, and talked to her loved ones about death and heaven, telling them when she left them they would know where to find her. Her mortal remains were laid to rest in the Pelahatchie Cemetery, the writer officiating. The funeral was attended by a large number of friends, notwithstanding the weather was very inclement, and the grave was almost literally covered with garlands of flowers, in such high esteem was she held by the people among whom she lived. A good woman is gone from [illegible]s and we feel the loss very keenly. [illegible] bow in humble submission to [illegible] will, and pray His blessings upon [illegible] bereaved. Her pastor,

T. J. O'NEILL.

ELIZA BEATRICE HOPKINS was the [illegible] child of Anna Lea and Thomas Hopkins. She passed out of this life on the 10th of June, 1908, at 11 a.m. God's angel crossed the threshold of these devoted parents that beautiful June morning, took their little darling from their loving arms and carried her on beyond the limits of time into the home of Christ and his angels. Eliza Beatrice Hopkins was born on the 5th of August, 1907. Her little life, though brief as a summer's span, was brilliantly happy, for she was blessed with a laughing, joyous disposition. Her sweet temper and sunny nature filled her home with radiance and happiness and made her not only the idol of her loving mother and father, but also the pet and darling of a large number of her relatives and friends. All who knew our baby-darling loved her. Her tiny arms were ever outstretched to anyone who came near; her baby heart seemed to leap and bound with love for all the world. As strangers and loved ones leaned over her in a gentle caress, her blue eyes filled with beaming tenderness and radiant joy as they looked back so earnestly and trustingly. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." This is the message left to humanity by our loving, tender Christ. He made no mistakes; told no falsehoods—the pure in heart do see God. Our precious babe was pure, sweet-tempered, sunny-natured, so God in His wisdom sent this angel for her, and has housed her safe in His eternal home.

FRIEND.

MARGARET MEEK was born in Madisonville, Tenn., June 8, 1839, and died in Mount Olive, Miss., Sept. 25, 1908. She was married to John E. Holloway at Dalton, Ga., March 15, 1864. Having connected herself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of 11 years, she was for fifty-eight years a consistent member of that Church. Sister Holloway was a Christian of rare piety. She never suffered her light to be put under a bushel, but made the subject of religion prominent on all occasions. God's Word was to her a constant source of spiritual food of which she never tired. She loved the house of God and the songs of Zion. In a rural neighborhood in which she was a long time resident, many Christians acknowledge her as the instrumentality under God in their conversion. She has been removed from her earthly suffering to the abode of the blest, there to "shine as the stars forever and ever." To her husband, four sons and three daughters is left a rich legacy in the blessed memory of her devout Christian life. May the God of all grace comfort the family in their bereavement.

J. A. MOORE, Pastor.

MRS. MARY GREER ALDRIDGE was born Jan. 30, 1850, in De Soto County, Miss., and there lived till Aug. 29, 1908, when death ended her earthly labors. She was the oldest child of H. A. and M. L. Greer and is survived by her mother, who is now seventy-six years old, and ten brothers and sisters. On the 2nd day of February, 1871, she was married to Mr. J. L. Aldridge. This happy union was blessed with nine children, seven of whom still live. She was a true wife and exemplary mother. Her devotion to her husband and love for her children was tender and beautiful. She professed religion in 1865 and united with the Methodist Church, in which faith she died triumphant. As long as her health would permit she was an active worker in the Church, a power in prayer. Her consideration of others, self-sacrificing disposition, patience under trials and many other Christian graces won for her a host of true and devoted friends who mourn their loss. Her death was a sad and severe blow to the entire community. During her long and tedious illness she never complained, but was submissive to the Father's will. Her last words with regard to the future were, "I am going home to rest." For the husband, children and friends it was a sad parting, but there will be a happy meeting over yonder.

RESOLUTIONS

on the death of MISS MATTIE DECKER, adopted by the Woman's Home Mission Society of Caro, Tex.:

Whereas, in the death of our second vice president, Miss Mattie Decker, the Woman's Home Mission Society of Caro, Texas, has sustained a distinct and severe loss; but we rejoice in knowing that our loss is her gain, for by joy in service here we know that she again gladly recognized God's voice when he called her home, and that she perfectly serves over there. But we grieve that no longer on earth will her loving presence and gentle ministrations gladden the hearts of those who waited upon her ministry; therefore, be it Resolved:

First—That our society show its appreciation of her work by moving forward to the full accomplishment of all she would have helped to do, had God spared her longer. That we hold in sacred trust the memory of her services and emulate the spirit of love, enthusiasm and diligence which marked her every effort.

Second—That we bow in humble submission to his divine will, and while we mourn for her we do not mourn as those who have no hope, for we know that even now she is with the Savior, whom she loved and worshiped.

Third—That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them in their great sorrow to the only source of comfort—the all-merciful Father—who loves even while he afflicts, and pray that he will speak peace to their troubled hearts, and enable them to say in the midst of their distress, "The Lord gave, the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased; that a copy be sent to the New Orleans and Texas Christian Advocates for publication and that a copy be spread upon the records of this auxiliary.

Very respectfully submitted,
MRS. V. L. PERRY,
MRS. W. S. EASTERLING.

LESSON FOR OCT. 25, 1908.

Subject: "The Joy of Forgiveness." Psalm xxxii.

Thus far in the study of the life of the shepherd king of Israel we have found his every act such as befitteth one in whom dwelleth the Spirit of God. If the record had come from the mind of man, this blameless life would have continued to a triumphant end; but this writing was done by "holy men of God as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." In the Scriptures, where a man's life is recorded, both evil and good deeds alike have their place in the relating of facts. So we must be prepared to read of the sins of David. "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." One of his sins was of a private character, the other was of a public character, in that David acted as if he had forgotten that "there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few," when he numbered the people to ascertain their strength. There was danger of the first sin becoming a hindrance to the individual seeker after a godly life. There was danger in the other sin of weakening the faith of the nation in the Almighty hand that led them through the midst of enemies and brought them at last to the land promised Abraham and the Patriarchs.

There is a degree of hypocrisy in all that live an apparently pious life, yet in secret constantly violate the law that is deemed good by common consent. The believer thus guilty lives in a fool's paradise; he is entirely out of his sphere, and is most miserable when reminded of the sinking sand on which he stands. This condition is dangerous to the believer if allowed to continue. David was a good man, and his manner of life was above reproach, but Satan caught him off his guard, giving him a wound the scar of which ever remained to remind him and us that without the abiding strength of the Lord we are undone.

It was a tenderly spoken message that Nathan brought to the king. David's great, big, kind heart could be touched by a story of injustice inflicted on the weak; the rough act of power, selfish even to cruelty. The fierce anger of the king of Israel arose to the highest pitch as he pronounced sentence on a man who lacked nothing in worldly goods, and yet deprived his less fortunate brother of all that made life and home happy. Then came the time for the word of condemnation from the Prophet. "Thou art the man," came the two-edged sword, wielded so quick and powerfully by Nathan as to divide asunder the soul and spirit of the king of Israel. Oh, the fierceness of the wrath of God!—saying first that, if all the blessings that had been bestowed upon David from the time he was anointed king had been too little, more would have been given for the asking. The great sin that clouded the remembrance of these blessings was done in secret, but retributive justice should be measured to the offender "before all Israel and before the sun." Punishment should come from among those of his own house, and never again would peace abide among his children. The sleeping conscience of the king was aroused from indulgence in his own sin, but awoke as to the sin of others.

Bowed down in shame and sorrow, David confessed his sin, and the sincerity of his penitence is proven as he poured out his afflicted soul in prayer and song, which same has been a light in the pathway of many a darkened soul, as through the comfort of the Scriptures they had hope of an eternal salvation.

David was [illegible] The [illegible] may be washed [illegible] but the shadow will remain [illegible] until it finally hovers over our resting-place in the church-yard.

Even though David suffered endless sorrow in after life, he [illegible] that [illegible] upon him [illegible] we may know the joy of forgiveness. All that we learn of the Apostle Paul points to a life of consecration in God's service; yet he called himself the chief of sinners. The upright man sits in continual judgment on himself and the Holy Spirit abiding. What is there to condemn? Rejoice [illegible] the battle of life alone, for Jesus is [illegible] will never leave thee. Rejoice that our sins are forgiven,—washed away by the blood of a crucified Christ. Washed? Yes, but as we walk through a sinful world we have need every morning new mercies of God, which is what Jesus [illegible] when he told Peter he must needs have Him wash his feet. Oh, how sweet to know that our merciful Father is ever ready to hear our cry. For if we confess our sins, he will forgive our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

Thy promise is my only plea,
With this I venture nigh;
Thou callest burdened souls to thee,
And such, O Lord, am I.

AN OLD BIBLE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I have to-day been looking through a very old Bible, nearly three hundred years old, printed by Robert Barker in 1612 in the city of London. It contains: First, the Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments. Next a genealogical table from Adam to the Virgin Mary. A description and map of Canaan. An address from the translators to King James; and a very lengthy preface to the readers by the translators. Then the Old Testament and Apocrypha. The New Testament and after the end, the Psalms in Metre, with music to the first verses of most of them.

The name of Ann McBeth, born in 1750, is written on a blank leaf. This old Bible is one of four articles saved from the flames of a burning building in London in 1832, and a few years later it was the only article left in a box packed with household goods; robbed on the bank of the Brazos River in Texas while waiting to be shipped to Mississippi. The Old Book is still in a good state of preservation. It is now in possession of W. H. Newsom, near Eera, in Pontotoc County, Miss.

PRAYER-MEETING TOPIC FOR OCT. 22.

The Spirit-filled Life. Eph. v. 1-21; Acts ii. 1-4; x. 44-48; xix. 1-7.

We are to have four successive lessons on the work of the Holy Spirit in our lives. The first of these is on the Spirit-filled Life. When the Master left the disciples, he commanded that they should tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. They were to receive the gift, promised of the Father, and they were not to go forth to do the work set for them to do, until the gift was received. When the day of Pentecost was fully come, the Holy Spirit entered into the world on his especial age mission, to abide with the Church until the Christ should return again. Of those who were there with one accord in one place, it is written, that they were all filled with the Holy Ghost.

2. The experience of Pentecost may be repeated in any life to-day.

The essential element of the account of the infilling of the Holy Spirit, lies not in the miraculous fruits shown in the first lives, but in the indwelling, and unseen presence, taking complete possession of their lives. We are apt to associate the Holy Spirit in the Apostolic Church with a necessary presence of miraculous power. If you will read closely all that is written in the New Testament, you will discover that the gifts were limited to particular persons, and that even these persons could not at will, decide what miracles should be wrought. The miracles were the seal which God set to the new administration, to show that it was from him. The great fact was that God, through the Holy Spirit, was dwelling in these men, bringing to them a realization of the things of Christ, and fitting them for the work which they were to do.

3. The filling of the Spirit implied an exclusion of evil.

There was no room for evil and the Holy Spirit in the same heart. If you will fill a bucket of water, and drop in a pebble, some water must run out. So if any unholy thought or purpose finds its lodging in your heart, you cannot truly be filled with the Spirit. The love of the world will not leave room for the filling of the Spirit. If the heart is possessed with the cares and anxieties of life there is not room for the fullness of the Spirit. Have you excluded everything that would grieve the Spirit, or that would tend to divide your heart?

4. The filling of the Spirit must include your all.

It is not simply exclusion of evil, but inclusion of all the territory of your soul. It is not a question of the capacity of some other man, but does the Holy Spirit fill your heart. If your life is to reach the measure of your capacity, there must be no closed rooms against the Spirit. He must be able to reveal the Master to you everywhere and to command your life. It is your privilege to be filled with the Spirit. Are you?

KOSCIUSKO (MISS.) CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I closed out my last meeting in September, eight in all. I did my own preaching all but eight sermons that were preached by Brother [illegible] and Brother Oaks. I held one union meeting at [illegible] with 75 conversions, so many pray now that did not pray before we held the meeting. I have had good revivals all over my work. The old fashioned revivals with altar service. We had shouting in the meetings. A glorious time it was. I have eight prayer meetings and eight Sunday Schools. I have had this year 125 conversions and 71 accessions. My work is in a good condition spiritually. Our new parsonage adds much to the Circuit. When I came here last year we had no place to live, and I went to work and we have built a new parsonage that will cost about twelve hundred dollars when completed. This is as good a people as I have ever served. I have put in two new organs this year, one at Marvin's Chapel and one at Springdale. We are planning to repair Springdale Church in the near future. I have organized one Woman's Home Mission Society at Hesterville, Miss., which is a very promising society. So many good ladies live in that community, I think that it will do good and efficient work. May the greatest blessings of the Lord be upon the Woman's Home Mission Society.

Cotton-seed oil has become the [illegible] and largest article of export from this country to Turkey. Two facts help to introduce this oil: Turkey is an olive producing land, and the use of lard is forbidden to the Moslems in cooking.

The foods we eat furnish energy for the body just as burning coal makes steam for an engine.

The experiments of Prof. Frankland, Ph. D., of London, show that cod liver oil yields two and one-half times more energy than starches or sweets.

Scott's Emulsion

is pure cod liver oil combined with hypophosphites of lime and soda. It forms fat, gives strength, enriches the blood, invigorates the nerves, and repairs tissues.

A LOCAL PREACHER'S EXPERIENCE.

Dear Brother Boswell: This year has been a great one with me; it has been enjoyed so much that I want to tell it, and probably someone else will be helped by my experience. I am a local preacher of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference; was licensed to preach in May, 1907. I did not do much work in my first year, but this year I have assisted at four churches, having the good experience of horseback riding on a Circuit. It seems that I have made many friends. I love the people because I went into their homes and got in touch with them. I have organized two Epworth Leagues, two Sunday Schools, and one prayer meeting that are doing splendid work. I think that the League at Pleasant Hill, on Kossuth Circuit, is the best I ever saw in the country.

My meetings have been good. In all the meetings that I have held and helped to hold there have been nearly half a hundred added to the Church, old troubles stopped, etc.

I am in Millsaps College now and ask prayers of all that I may gain much knowledge of Christ while here and have greater success next year than this. Respectfully,

JAS. D. WROTEN.

MATHISTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: By your permission I will send in a report of Mathiston Mission. Mathiston is a growing town, situated at the crossing of the M. J. & K. C. Railroad and the Southern Railroad, in Webster County. In the last three years it has trebled its population, now having some seven or eight hundred inhabitants. The churches are keeping pace with the growth of the town. Both the Presbyterians and Baptists are using our church for worship. However, they both have nice houses in course of construction.

Brother Lagrone came to us in August, and conducted a very fine meeting, the results of which brought some twenty-five into the church; but as Brother B. P. Patterson contemplates writing up this meeting, I will desist from saying more, for fear we burden you with the same article.

We have six appointments, and have had a revival in each church, receiving in all up to date seventy members. I was assisted in some of my other meetings by Brothers W. R. Williams and R. J. Worley. This is the field formerly of old Brothers Wyley Lewis and Rainey, who are remembered and loved by many here yet. Many of their blood and bone are here yet. These are noted families in our Methodism.

We are now preparing to observe Orphans' Day, Sunday, Oct. 18. Our Junior Leaguers and Sunday School children have set next Saturday to go out and pick cotton and give the proceeds to our home. God bless our Orphans' Home. It is no trouble to raise all the funds we need to maintain it, if we will only let our people know the need of it.

Well, it is nearing Conference time again. I am in my saddle most of the time, hustling up the benevolences of the Church. I am also raising a club of subscribers to our Church organ. One brother said yesterday that he had rather read the New Orleans Advocate than any paper he knew. Yours in love,

W. R. GOUDELOCK.

There has been considerable alarm over some indications that the lawlessness of the night-riders of Kentucky might be carried into the cotton country. A number of warnings have been posted at different places warning men not to sell their cotton. It has developed that one set of notices was simply the pranks of a set of mischievous boys.

TRIBUTE TO OUR DEPARTED BROTHER PORTER.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Will you allow me space to say that many in South Carolina share Mississippi's grief at the death of Rev. R. G. Porter ("Gilderoy")? For twenty years or more readers of the South Carolina Advocate had the privilege of reading articles by "Gilderoy," and all learned to esteem the gifted and cheerful writer. I had the opportunity to meet him personally in Memphis in 1894, and esteem deepened into love.

"Gilderoy" was not only gifted as a writer, but he was charming as a man. Pious and yet full of chaste humor, gentle and yet firm in principle as a rock, quiet and yet better informed than many he listened to, unaspiring and yet always ready to meet large demands, his brain and heart won and held friends.

It is a high tribute to you and to him that "a controversy" made you life-long friends! It is rare that men learn to love in differences and debates. I have lost friends—or they ceased to be friends to me—simply because they and I could not see alike. Pity that such results follow anywhere; deplorable when it is among men trying to be Christians. May this fact you state, teach us all to differ, and still, in difference, to love each other.

South Carolina shares your sorrow, and hopes that the mantle of the ascended may fall on many successors. We sorely need such men.

JOHN O. WILSON.

WHAT A ROMAN CATHOLIC SAYS.

"Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and I know not what other churches spring up among us. Some of their ministers are quite active and do a great deal of harm in places where there is no Catholic Church, not so much through their preaching as through the attractions of their Sabbath Schools, whither they draw Catholic children. We need more churches here to keep what Catholics we have, and to bring back those whom we lost in outlying districts. Sectarians have little churches in every town along the railway lines, and by means of these churches do their proselyting. We have hardly any churches. They were enabled to build these churches through their extension societies. Without such help they could never have built them, nor can we. The pity is that we are so late in the field. Do I need a church? I need several, and I should like to start one at O——, a pushing little town on the —— Railway, eighteen miles from the nearest Catholic Church. There, and in its neighborhood, are a little over a dozen good Catholic families, and some three dozen fallen and falling-away Catholic families. I have already the promise of ten acres of land right in town and over $1200 in money. The Bishop approves my plan. There is the making of a good Catholic parish which, if neglected, will be lost to the Church.

"How to start? Have those who are interested in the Church (Catholics and non-Catholics) pay down all they can afford—the more they pay the greater interest they will take in the Church afterwards and the better they will value it. Build for them a good, substantial church, whereof they will be proud. If, with this, the promise of help, such as extension offers, can be held out to them, the work is sure to be a lasting success. The fallen-away Catholics will be brought back and non-Catholics will be brought in in numbers. Protestant ministers have no hold here really on those whom they claim as their flock, because their gospel being indifferentism, and their code of morals "the Golden Rule," they really teach nothing at all. People seek information on religious matters for themselves and their children. They look for a church that is dogmatic. A Catholic priest is trusted, respected and financially aided by all with whom he comes in contact. A Protestant minister—well, God help him. If it were not for his mission society the poor fellow would starve."—A Pioneer Priest in Catholic Extension for September, 1908.

Mr. Editor: There are several points for Protestants to consider in this excerpt, and you might point an editorial paragraph quite happily therewith, I opine. Fraternally. W. A. B.

PROVOKE ONE ANOTHER.

The Shreveport Baptists have just dedicated their elegant new $75,000 church, and recently they lifted a collection of about $15,000, several thousand more than enough to pay all their indebtedness. We heartily congratulate them upon their splendid success.

It is now in order for the Shreveport Methodists to get busy and erect in Texarcana Annex the contemplated Noel Memorial Church, and let it cost at least $50,000; and, while planning and building, the need of more buildings for Centenary must not be forgotten. * * *

Glances at the World.

A note from Washington gives out the information that, outside of Alaska, the United States owns 386,873,787 acres of land which is subject to entry under the land laws and is sufficient to supply homesteads of 160 acres each to 2,417,961 citizens. 'Unfortunately, most of the land is marked either 'arid,' 'mountainous' or 'swamp,' and comparatively little of it is considered desirable for farming, unless under irrigation. In Alaska there are 368,021,509 acres. These facts are set forth in a pamphlet published by the General Land Office, which shows in tabulated form the area of unappropriated land in the various States and Territories." Of these lands there are in Louisiana 116,249 acres, and in Mississippi 42,791 acres. "Much of this land in both these states is "swamp," but there is none arid or mountainous. A great amount of it, at comparatively small cost, can be reclaimed by drainage, and made as productive as any land now in cultivation." It will all be brought into use within a few years.

The most distasteful thing in modern journalism is the practice of prying into and publishing the details of social life, not alone the scandals and actual occurrences, but things yet in prospect. A respectable woman and gentleman, especially if they are rich, are tormented for months, and the whole connection embarrassed, if any intimation is given out that they are likely to be married. For more than six months past the daughter of a United States Senator, who is reported on the eve of marrying an Italian prince, has been in the limelight, and every possible opportunity embraced to interview and question any member of the family that is at all accessible. Even the young lady's mother is not spared. We dare say the young lady herself would be questioned by some brazen-faced reporter, if he had half an opportunity. It does seem that the papers might content themselves with the announcement that these persons in high life are to be married, and wait the consummation to give the details. Instead they must disgust the public by quizzing the parents, and giving every particular of private conversations. We reckon though, that such matter feeds the minds of many persons who think of nothing but "counts" and "dukes" and "princes," fashions and high-life in general.

The Springfield Republican says: "The matter of supremest gravity now confronting the people of the United States, and of far more public seriousness than current political discussions, is the drought. This touches the life of the people at all points to threaten it. When it is stated that Lake Champlain is eight feet below high water point; that it is possible to walk across the Ohio River in places where usually the water is thirty feet deep; that many cities are menaced by a water supply too small to afford fire protection, and fast approaching the place when it must be sharply husbanded for drinking purposes; when mills are shut down over a wide area because water power has failed; when forest fires are burning in the great Adirondack region, in Maine and other New England States, and throughout almost the entire Northwest, and are barely held from the widest devastation, and the fire has crept under ground—we have a situation full of the deadliest possibilities." At this writing the drought has been broken—almost, if not entirely—by copious rains, and the threat of disaster no longer menaces the people. God still rules and all is well with the world.

The time is coming, and apparently is near at hand, when every man can have his house lighted with gas, if he wants it. Gas is now being manufactured and liquified and put up in small quantities—as small as one pound, or in quantities sufficient to light a whole village piped and connected with the tank holding it. The gas is distilled from oil and other materials. "The manufacture is carried out upon new and novel lines. The oil is fed into the retort and distilled at a lower temperature than that employed in coal gas manufacture. The by-products are secured, and the gas cleaned and scrubbed in the usual manner. It is then compressed at great pressure in cylinders similar to those employed for the transportation of oxygen, the effect of this pressure being liquefaction of the gases. In Germany several villages are being lighted upon this system. The distributing mains are laid in the usual manner, though small pipes need only be used, and are connected up to a small hut in which the gas cylinders are placed. The only attention required is the changing of the cylinders as they become exhausted. The system is cheap, highly efficient, and free from danger, and even the smallest villages can become possessed of a complete gas distribution plant at a nominal outlay."

A new source of money supply will probably be opened to the corn raisers of the country. If experiments now being made prove successful, paper mills will soon be making paper out of corn stalks. The Philadelphia Ledger says: "Chemists of the Bureau of Forestry and of the Bureau of Plant Industry, of the Department of Agriculture, believe that they have solved the problem of a cheaper paper that will dispense with the use of wood fibre. The new material is the ordinary cornstalk, and officials of the department to-day predicted that when the manufacture of the new kind of papers is started on a large scale it will be at least fifty per cent cheaper than the print paper now made from wood pulp. Dr. H. S. Bristol has carried experiments to the making of paper in five grades. Millions of tons of cornstalks will be available for this new manufacture. At present the stalks are destroyed in enormous quantities to get them out of the way. The chemists have used in their experiments the 'soda cooked' process, which has been found the best for making the finer grades of wood pulp paper. The cornstalks need only two and a half hours of cooking, against the fourteen hours needed to soften the wood pulp. The department will at once take steps to have the manufacture of the new paper undertaken on a larger scale." It will be a great day for farmers when they can feed their hogs on corn and read the news on paper, made from the stalk on which the hog feed was grown. "The world moves."

It seems almost impossible to enact a law, no matter how careful the lawmakers are, that cannot be circumvented by shrewd and conscienceless men bent on easy ways of getting money out of fools. New York passed a drastic law against race-track gambling, a law that met the approbation of Governor Hughes, but it does not seem to effect the purpose for which it was intended. Certain men during the racing went out into the crowd and personally solicited bets on the horses; they were arrested, and when arraigned before the magistrate they were discharged, the judge declaring that what they did "was not book-making," and therefore not gambling within the meaning of the law. Such decisions remind us of the man who, when charged with stealing, denied it, but confessed to "unlawful taking," and of another man who, being accused of lying, said it was not true, but admitted that he "embezzled the truth." Such distinctions are without difference. Judges who take advantage of a technicality to evade the plain intent of the law are unworthy of the positions they occupy. They are enemies of public morality, and give encouragement to evil-doers. Louisiana passed a law against race-track gambling quite as strenuous as the New York law, but a race-horse promoter, supposed to be backed by "legal advice," proposes a plan for betting at the coming winter races in New Orleans, which he pretends to think is not in conflict with the law. Eminent lawyers and others have publicly expressed the opinion that the proposed plan is in violation of both the letter and spirit of the law. But if some shyster is at the bottom of this scheme it will have to be fought out before the courts. How the judges will decide is as uncertain as the verdict of a petit jury. We shall see what we shall see.

A SORE NEED FOR DOCTRINAL PREACHING.

BY REV. P. O. LOWREY.

The following extract from an article of Dr. J. B. Gambrell, in the Baptist Chronicle of Sept. 10 on "Denominational Evangelism" is full of significance for the point at issue:

"And here is another instance, quite natural, logical and altogether to my liking. A little while back there were five Baptists in the town of Prestonburg, Ky., a place of some 1,500 people. Brother Sledge, one of the evangelists of the Home Board, preached the New Testament doctrine, beginning with sin, and going on to repentance, faith and baptism, following the beaten track of the gospels and Acts. At last account there were 200 converts in the meeting held by Brother Sledge in Prestonburg. One hundred and seventy-four of them had joined the Baptist Church for baptism. Among these were seven lawyers, five judges, one doctor and a number of merchants. In the town was an excellent school building, capable of accommodating six hundred students. This has been secured by the Baptists, and will open this fall with four or five hundred students. The writer, in giving an account of the meeting, said: 'You may ask a Methodist or a Presbyterian if he has been baptized, and he will say, "No, I have been sprinkled."' This was because the evangelist had preached the truth, and these converts were entitled to hear the truth and to be grounded in the truth. Then with the whole question of baptism settled, they are ready for baptism. Indeed, they have begun business, for they are arranging to have a pastor. Six men in the town have agreed to give $100 each for a pastor. They have a Sunday school. They are now ready to go on with the great business they were called into the kingdom to perform. This is exactly like it ought to be. I take it is the business of the New Testament churches and New Testament preachers to reproduce themselves by the truth, and multiply themselves through the preaching of the truth. If it is, let us stick to our business."

Before our Methodist readers pass judgment too hastily upon this method of building up the denominational church they had better re-read their own history, and see that when Methodism was sweeping the world like a cyclone one of the main features of the move was the doctrinal preaching.

Examine Wesley's Sermons, Watson's Institutes, Fletcher's Appeal, etc., and see how there was allowed no ground for the opponent. The writer verily believes the same doctrines preached in the same spirit will produce the same results to-day. These founders of the church were not afraid of crossing people's beliefs, but showed up their sins and inconsistencies in a way that pierced to the heart and conquered them by the multitudes for Methodism and the Lord.

It was no unusual thing for such youths as Joshua Soule to be won by the direct appeal to the doctrinal reason. There were giants in those days, and they were not afraid to speak. What a contrast with our modern Methodist preacher who is afraid of overpersuading people and disturbing their beliefs! Such a policy is suicidal and needs to be changed. Such Calvinistic doctrines and the one apostolic successional church idea as are being preached and believed by multitudes of people in our midst could be exploded by the weakest of our preachers if only they would acquaint themselves with the questions at issue. Or the Publishing House could furnish able tracts that would easily accomplish the work. Or a group of pastors might co-operate in getting a specialist to give a course of lectures in the several pastoral charges. A properly equipped missionary evangelist could be of service to Methodism here, just as was the above evangelist to the Baptists. At any rate, we have kept silent and lost members long enough, and if our doctrines are best for the spiritual life of the world then we should not let these people be led from us to where it is all but impossible to reach them after they have espoused another faith and assumed the attitude of the defensive.

A HOSPITAL NEEDED.

BY REV. Q. A. OATS.

A prominent Methodist physician in talking to this writer recently said: "It was the wish of his heart that the Methodists of Mississippi would erect and equip a first class hospital in the State. That Jackson would be the most suitable place for its location. He would gladly contribute his means and throw all his influence towards its building and support. His best reason was the supreme need of it, and he felt it in his own practice. The Methodist people are able financially; they have sufficient numbers; they have the necessary intelligence; they are human and philanthropic if aroused to the pressing need for such an institution in our own bounds." He spoke of the Baptists' enterprise so near a realization, to be located in Memphis, and thought it worthy of emulation. He felt it rather to the shame of Protestants to rely on the Roman Catholics for such help as we need in this line, here in Mississippi.

It is not my design to oppose the plan now being agitated by some of our philanthropic brethren, viz.: A great central hospital in some far off city, but I doubt its ability to meet the needs of the case, and fear its success.

This great central hospital cannot be so located as to reach more than a limited section of our Church. A patient needing the services of a hospital should be able to reach it in a short time, and with the best facilities for travel. There is no place in the bounds of our Southern Methodism so central and conveniently located that can be reached without days and nights possibly of travel, inconvenient delays, and transfers. This would be true for probably three-fourths of the territory occupied by our Church members. A hospital in New York or San Francisco would be as convenient and as easily reached by the majority of our people as any one city in the South. At best, such an institution would be comparatively local in its benefits, and as a consequence the patronage and support would in like proportion be limited.

It is a lamentable fact that the South, and especially our own State, is wanting in institutions of a humanitarian kind. All honor to those people and places that have done what they could to establish hospitals. They have helped, but the best they have done is to show us our need and to shame us in Mississippi for our lack of interest and our apathy. The need truly is great and should be met.

Such work is legitimately within the sphere of the Church—as much so as schools, orphanages, or other humanitarian institutions. Perhaps there are reasons why the hospital should stand paramount with all such institutions, but should, if choice must be made, take precedence. Immediate relief to the suffering or injured would often save life. This alone must appeal at once to the sensibilities and judgment of everyone as a pressing Christian duty. It is surely Christlike, indeed. This can only be done by an institution properly located in our own State.

Our people are able to build such an institution. There are in round numbers, one hundred thousand Methodists in Mississippi. Fifty cents from each one would thoroughly equip and put in operation such a hospital as would meet our immediate needs. There are doubtless hundreds outside our Church who would gladly contribute to such an enterprise, since it appeals so strongly to self-interest and to all humane feelings. It is probable that people of wealth would gladly contribute large sums to endow such an institution if properly appealed to, and they would stand by it and make it an assured success. They have never been wanting when appealed to for other benevolent enterprises.

It is the opinion of this writer that a hospital properly conducted would soon become self-sustaining by reasonable charges upon those able to pay for its advantages. This opinion is amply supported by the history of other institutions of like kind. In one State where this writer spent some years, many counties have their own hospitals that care for indigent patients, but are open to those who are able to pay, as well. Those county institutions have proven well-nigh self-sustaining on the principle named above. Why then, can we not have an institution meeting the needs of a great State and thousands of people that would be practically self-supporting? It does seem that we only need have our people aroused to an interest in this work, and that they be convinced that it is practicable.

To wisely start such an enterprise, and call attention to it would insure its success.

The two Conferences in the State could formulate a plan and unite in building it. They could put an active, wise man into the field, if need be. Past history proves that he would have an open field and an easy road to success.

"THE BAPTIST DRIFT."

BY REV. ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

"Circuit Rider" called attention to "The Baptist Drift" in a recent issue of the ADVOCATE, and while I wish it understood that he is correct as respects "Drift" in the sense of leaving what is right or floating from the truth, especially in the case of water baptism, but when it comes to falling from grace they are drifting towards the truth. The word "drift" carries with it the idea of moving away from, and also that of moving, or being forced towards, and hence we may with propriety say that the Baptists are drifting away from their own original doctrine on water baptism, but are drifting towards the truth of falling from grace. While many of their laity will not hesitate to say that one can fall from grace, and some think their church believes it, too, let it be remembered that Baptist preachers are declaring it from the pulpit in language like that I heard from one of their preachers, when he said: "I believe a man can fall, and fall so far as not to have one spark of religion left; but I believe he will come back again."

So we see that such a belief and such preaching is a drift from what they formerly believed and preached towards the true Scriptural doctrine, which is the possibility of ones falling completely and never returning—of ones falling forever and forever. If our ministers will make it a rule to preach the doctrine of the possibility of ones falling from grace forever, I really believe that every conscientious minister of any church who has believed and preached the opposite will not only awake to see that the doctrine of falling from grace is the Scriptural doctrine, and also that it is not only unwise to preach that one cannot fall from grace forever, but that it is exceedingly dangerous to preach such folly.

The doctrine that one cannot fall forever is not operative in any department of activity in which free moral agents are engaged, much less in those that involve eternal interests. One cannot fall from grace at all, much less forever, if he believes honestly that he can fall, and that he must not fall; and to keep from falling he must not only believe right, but live right. Falling from grace in the sense the Methodists believe and teach it is a safe doctrine. The doctrine that you cannot fall forever is not only unscriptural, but it is dangerous. Something of its fearful dangerousness is seen when it is remembered that the devil was the first to preach it—and, oh, just see the results! After God told Eve that she and Adam would surely die if they ate the forbidden fruit, the devil said: "Ye shall not surely die." (Gen. iii, 4.) And she and Adam believed the devil, and see what a condition in which it has placed us. The very point likely he made was that they were the children of God, for in Luke it is said: "Adam the son of God." (Luke iii, 38.)

Let us preach the right doctrine, and not be afraid, and God will honor us more and more.

Bolton, Miss.

A PLEA FOR MORE PRESIDING ELDERS AND BETTER SALARIES FOR PASTORS.

BY REV. J. M. ALFORD, OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I have read a number of articles from able writers on the subject of the office of the presiding elder. I have heard the subject discussed by ministers of other churches as well as our own. Of course, those in other churches are opposed to the system, while those in the Methodist Church seem to be divided in their opinion as to the advisability of perpetuating this office. It is generally, if not universally, admitted that in the early history of Methodism this office was a necessity; but that as [illegible] the [illegible] a superfluity [illegible] few. As for myself, I believe [illegible] strong part of the machinery of the Methodist itinerant system. That [illegible] kind of progress [illegible] should be changed [illegible] would deny. But as I see it, it is not [illegible] maintain a "time-honored" [illegible] on to something [illegible] has been tried and found not only to be helpful but indispensable [illegible] strong success with the present [illegible] upon us. I do not believe [illegible] that it is time to superannuate this part of the Church work. I have heard people, even preachers, refer to the presiding elder as a "necessary evil" and the office itself as a "fifth-wheel."

Now, so far from doing away with the office I am in favor of having about twice as many. I believe we should magnify this office. But I believe there is a better way to do this besides enlarging the districts, which seems to be the present policy.

As the Church makes progress, with a consequent increase in the number of pastoral charges, why not have a comparative increase in the number of districts?

Now, if this does not stand to reason, does it not prove that the place of the presiding elder in our Church is becoming less important? In the business world, with the advantages of modern improvements and inventions, they are getting things more and more "reduced to a science." To save labor is the problem in our great manufacturing industries. Machinery is now doing the work that muscle used to do. Is it true that in the Church to-day, with so many equipments for organized effort, such as the Epworth League, the improved methods of Sunday School work, the different missionary enterprises among the women as well as the Laymen's Movement, that we can exist and make progress without the help of presiding elders? Will the time ever come when we will lay on the shelf this part of the Methodist machinery? We answer, Yes, if the present policy is pursued. Per capita we have just half the number of presiding elders now that we had a quarter century ago. Indeed, the presiding elder now has more than twice as many members over which he officially presides. What will it be in the next twenty years? Is it true that we shall have the same number of presiding elders then as we had twenty years ago? The number has not been increased in the last twenty-five years. In the Northern Methodist Church they have pursued this same policy until the presiding elder is only a name—has some fifty or sixty pastoral charges, and, of course, cannot get in touch with the rank and file of the Church membership. One of two things is certain: our people are getting just half the benefit that comes to the Church as a result of the work of the presiding elder, or the presiding elder to-day is required to do twice as much work as was required of him two decades ago. In both the Louisiana and the Mississippi Conferences the districts, for the most part, are twice as large as they should be for the presiding elder to meet the demands.

There are about twice as many charges in the districts as there are Sundays in the quarter. That means, of course, that half the number of [illegible] Quarterly Meetings of the year are held [illegible] stations are fortunate [illegible] the presiding elder a Sunday [illegible]. The country circuit with four [illegible] sees their presiding elder once every [illegible] than that half the services [illegible] this representative organ of the Church are [illegible] at a time when laboring [illegible] and when those who [illegible]. Hence [illegible] a Quarterly Conference at [illegible] so far as the good [illegible] rank and file of the Church. Of course, the pastor attends and perhaps two or three faithful stewards and the routine work gone through with, but the Church is not benefitted.

Now the failure on the part of the presiding elder to meet the demands, in getting before all the people, is not his fault, but the fault lies in the present arrangement of the districts. It is presumed that there are four churches on the average charge. Now give us a Sunday for every Quarterly Meeting and the presiding elder will be able to visit every Church at least once during the year at a time when a good congregation can be counted on. If presiding elders are not appreciated now as in former days, it is, no doubt, due to the fact that he is overloaded and expected to do two men's work.

Instead of having just seven districts in the Louisiana Conference, we ought to have eleven. The New Orleans and the Baton Rouge Districts could easily be made into three, each having thirteen appointments. This would give a Sunday to every work, counting one fifth Sunday every three months. A new district could be formed and called the Hammond or Amite City District. Take the three charges now in the Arcadia District that used to be with Shreveport and a new district could be formed down on the Kansas City Southern Road, called the Leesville or Mansfield District, thus dividing the Shreveport District. Then take three or four charges from the northern part of the Alexandria District and make three of the Monroe and Arcadia Districts. Then the Alexandria and Crowley Districts could be made into three, all having thirteen appointments, except two, which would have only twelve. No doubt at the coming Annual Conference there will be at least two new works formed. Thus this Conference could be re-districted so as to enable the presiding elder to have a Sunday for every Conference in the year, and all the people called Methodists see and hear their presiding elder once a year.

But what good would accrue to the Church by the above proposed changes? I believe we would in a measure at least, "return to the old paths." The presiding elder would then be in touch with all the people, and would be able to help his preacher in revival work as in other days. He would be with each pastor more and would be a great help especially to the young preacher. The new man in the work needs help, advice, and sympathy from his elder. Logically, he looks to him and expects counsel. As it is, the presiding elder, however much he would like to render this much needed assistance, is prevented from doing so. He is on the run—in on one train and out on the next—his time is largely spent traveling. I believe it would mean more spiritual power and revival fire if the above suggested changes were made. Furthermore, I believe the presiding elder ought to be a revivalist! If he were and had the time to be the evangelist of his own district it would avoid the necessity of sending off for self-constituted evangelists. The pastor cannot be away from his work long enough to hold a meeting of days without injury to his own interests. With the present arrangement the presiding elder's time is almost exclusively taken up with matters of business; hence, he does not get in vital touch and spiritual sympathy with the people. Let me have my presiding elder come on Saturday and hold the business of the Conference. Then on Sunday preach and administer the communion (the undergraduate as a rule cannot do this, hence the people are denied this privilege) and it will be a feast of soul.

But I anticipate two objections to this change. First, it would cut down the salary of the presiding elder, and we cannot hope to command the services of our strongest men without a salary equally as good as the same man would get at the station he could fill. And second, we have not the men to spare from the pastorate. To which we reply: first, that it stands to reason that if the presiding elder were among the people more, and, consequently, gave more service and met the demand, his salary would be raised from time to time. With what is now paid to the presiding elders in the Louisiana Conference we could support eleven and give them a salary of about $1300. It could be safely put at $1500 to begin on. Then, with the size of the districts cut down, there would be a consequent decrease in traveling expenses. Replying to the second anticipated objection, I will say that if the presiding elder could be among his people twice as much as he now is I believe he could, with the pastor, have better revivals and plan better for a greater spiritual awakening all over his district and as a result more young men would consecrate themselves to the ministry. I verily believe God is calling men to the ministry now, all that is needed for his work, but they are not prevailed on to consecrate to this work as in former times. We say there is a dearth of preachers. And why? Why is the demand so much greater than the supply? Do you believe God would prosper Zion and open up the way, make ready the fields for harvest and then not call men into the vineyard? I think he has called and does call men, and it only remains for us to "pray that they may be sent into the field." And not only pray but work to enlist new recruits in this great army for God and the right! Who is in a better position to do this than the presiding elder? But with the present demands made upon him the young life of our Church hardly gets acquainted with him before it is time for him to be moved to another district.

Twenty and twenty-five years ago we had seven districts—hence, seven presiding elders in the Louisiana Conference. Now after all these years of growth and marvelous prosperity we have yet only seven districts! And what is more, one of these (the Baton Rouge district) was until a few years back in the Mississippi Conference. Twenty years ago the Louisiana Conference had 91 pastoral charges and seven districts; now we have 141 pastoral charges and yet just seven districts. Twenty years ago there were 15,775 Southern Methodists in Louisiana and seven districts; now we have 32,581, an increase of 16,806—which is more than double, yet just seven districts! Then there were 80 in the Conference roll, now there are 157, yet the same number of presiding elders. Twenty years ago the money paid to presiding elders in Louisiana was $4,547.87; an average salary of $649.70. Now the same number of presiding elders are paid $14,060, an average salary of $2008.60 each. Twenty years ago the pastors in the Louisiana Conference were paid $38,136.94, an average salary of $428.40. Last year the pastors of the Louisiana Conference were paid $95,165, being an average salary of $674.93. It will be observed that this is just $25.23 more than the average salary of the presiding elder twenty years ago. It is also seen that the salary of the presiding elder has more than thribbled in twenty years while that of the pastor lacks $181.87 of even doubling in the same length of time. Twenty years ago the average salary of the presiding elder was just $221.80 more than that of the pastor. The minutes of last year show that the average salary of the presiding elder was $1,350.80 more than that of the pastor, his co-laborer! Now, why this discrepancy? Understand, I am not censuring the presiding elders for being able to command good salaries. They ought to have it! They have great responsibilities and are required to do the work of two men! And have heavy expenses traveling over such large districts. But the pastors ought to be paid accordingly.

In the Mississippi Conference the amount paid to pastors is $18,454.83 more than is paid in this Conference, yet the presiding elders (the same number) get less than they do in this Conference. There are fifty more pastoral charges in the Louisiana Conference now than there were twenty years ago, yet the same number of presiding elders.

Now the average work pays the presiding elder $100 a year for his services. With the present arrangements of districts he does not get to give but about six days to each charge in the year. The pastor work fifty days for the the same amount. The salary of the presiding elder in our Church has kept pace with the increase in living expenses. But that of the pastor has not. The increase in the salary of the Methodist preacher in the past decade has not by any means been commensurate with the increase in the cost of living. O, why don't the stewards think about this at the first Quarterly Conference? And remind the people of it at the fourth Quarterly Conference? Nor has the increase of the pastor's salary kept pace with that of the salaries of those in the business life. Neither has it kept up with the salaries of ministers of other denominations! I live in a community where the Presbyterian pastor gets a third more than I do (provided all my assessment is paid) and while he serves two churches, I serve five and have from three to four times as many members to look after as he does. Yet, withal, I serve one of the best circuits in the Louisiana Conference. My salary is above the average.

Now, should we count out the high salaried churches in the cities and strike an average salary of the country work, of from four to eight appointments, we would find it to be much lower than $674.93. Now out of this the country pastor must buy a horse and buggy at a big price, pay about $75 a year for horse feed, all the way from ten to fifteen dollars for horse-shoeing and buggy repairs, and sometimes pay for a dead horse as I had to do in Mississippi. My! My! Where does the poor fellow get money to survive on? No wonder some preachers get in debt and have to locate in self-defense!

I would like to hear from others on this subject, especially as to increasing the number of the districts. I wonder what the Editor of the ADVOCATE thinks about it?

METHODIST CHURCH AND PARSONAGE AT PURVIS, MISS.

Through the generosity of numerous contributors in Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, and elsewhere, the Purvis Methodist Church building, which was totally destroyed by the cyclone of April 24, 1908, has been rebuilt, the first service in the new house of worship having been held Sunday, July 19. The new edifice is almost an exact duplicate of the old one, and is quite handsome in design and execution. It is a frame building 32x50 feet, with a Sunday School room annex 16x26 feet. Elegant oak pews have just been put in, and with the furnishings the church is valued at $3,000.

THE NEW PARSONAGE.

The new parsonage, finished a few weeks ago, is a very neat and comfortable six-room cottage, which, with the lot, is valued at $1,500. Thanks to the liberality of the many friends who responded so promptly to the call for aid in rebuilding, there is not a dollar of indebtedness on either church or parsonage. The pastor and congregation are deeply grateful to all who assisted in any way in replacing these indispensable buildings. Many thanks are due the General Board of the Woman's Home Mission Society and the Board of Missions for the generous aid rendered in this great emergency. Without their timely assistance the church and parsonage could not have been replaced without incurring a heavy debt. All of the lumber for the new church was kindly donated by Brother W. S. F. Tatum, of Hattiesburg. The sash and doors were a much-appreciated gift from Enochs Brothers, Jackson, Miss.

Following are the names of the building committee: James Hand, chairman; J. T. Carley, George I. Pylant, Thomas M. Ferguson of Hattiesburg, W. S. F. Tatum of Hattiesburg. The pastor, Rev. M. M. Black, is serving his third year.

A STORM IN OLLA, LA.

Dear Bro. Boswell: In fair, dry weather, Oct. 20, a storm arose in this town and the entire force struck this writer's residence. About 7:30 p. m., a noise was heard at my front gate, and a tramping, roaring sound passed through the hall, and the force was spent on my kitchen table. All quiet, we found about fifty of Olla's nicest people had taken possession, and loaded the kitchen floor and table with meal, flour, rice, sugar, crackers, soda, salt, preserves, greenbacks, silver, etc. A majority of the donors were Baptists, as there are very few Methodists here. This is the second time this year. My appointment is weak in numbers, and has no financial strength, yet these poundings and social gatherings are "oases in the desert." It seems that because I love my Lord so dearly my people love me. "Bless the Lord, O my soul!" God bless you!

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

THE COLLECTIONS FOR MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

I desire the attention of the pastors in the two Mississippi Conferences long enough to say that I am now sending out statements to those who owe subscriptions to the college. I do not ask the pastors to collect these subscriptions, but I invoke their assistance in securing someone to collect them. Also will the pastors please announce to their people on Sunday morning that the unpaid subscription list is on hand, and that it is our request that the friends pay up at once. Brethren, please help me. As your servant I am trying to do your work. I know your hands are busy with other things now, but I do request that you give me your help to the extent of getting someone to collect the subscriptions, and announcing the facts to your people.

LAYMEN ON CONFERENCE BOARDS.

This is Laymen's Day in the Church, and it is a most hopeful mark. In the constitution of all our Conference Boards there is an equal number of preachers and laymen, and the active help of the laymen is needed in all these administrative agencies. It so happens that, with possibly rare exceptions, only those laymen who happen to be Conference Delegates attend the annual meetings of the Boards, and, as far as I know, very little or no effort is ever made to secure their attendance. Perhaps some of them do not even know that they are members. (I speak with particular reference to the Louisiana Conference, because I do not know about the conditions elsewhere.)

If the membership of these brethren means anything, if the preachers want their presence and help, if it is of vital importance that the laymen have a larger share in the work than simply to pay the bills, let us endeavor to secure their attendance. I suggest that the secretary's communicate with each lay member of the respective Boards, urge him to attend the Conference at Leesville, and, if he is not a delegate, notify the Conference host of his intention to be present.

ARCADIA DISTRICT MEMORIAL.

The following memorial to the Louisiana Annual Conference, signed by fifteen preachers and laymen, was passed (unanimously, I think) by the Arcadia District Conference during its recent session, and will be presented to the Conference in Leesville for action:

Whereas the present plan of making statistical reports to the Annual Conference fails to present the showing of the individual church on the circuit; and whereas the circuits are changed so frequently that the successive reports of any given circuit do not represent the continuous work of the same group of churches; and whereas the separate report plan would encourage the church that desires to make a good showing, and might stimulate the church that is indifferent; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we petition the Louisiana Annual Conference to instruct the preachers in charge of circuits to make hereafter separate reports for each organized society, and instruct the statistical secretary to prepare the same for publication in the Annual Minutes.

The writer would like to know if there is any objection, economical or otherwise, that is sufficiently weighty to offset the manifest benefit that would result from the adoption of this petition.

This method is followed by at least one of the larger Conferences, and is justified by its results.

For the reasons stated in the above memorial, there is not a single country church, and perhaps not even a single circuit of churches in the Arcadia District, the record of which may be comparatively studied from the Minutes.

It is not just nor encouraging to a faithful congregation that always accomplishes something to have its report lost in a consolidated report of separate congregations that are less efficient, nor, on the other hand, is it right that the do-nothing or do-little church should have its shortcomings unrevealed. R. H. Wynn.

CALVINISM UPROOTED.

BY REV. H. G. ROBERTS.

In Ruston, last winter, the presiding elder of the Monroe District asked the Mission Board for an appropriation for Bastrop and Mission. The Board thought this rather a retrogression, as Bastrop had been on the map so long; but the appeal was made in behalf of a large community of people who were living without a church; but they were holding on to some of the doctrines of the Primitive Baptist and the Campbellite Churches.

The second Sunday in August, re-enforced by old munitions of war, Brother T. S. Randle to do the preaching and Sister Randle to conduct the song and prayer services, I went into the community to hold a meeting. Brother Randle was at his best. As a result of our ten days' work, we received into the Church sixty members, forty of whom were by baptism. Knowing about how much stress had been laid on "immersion" by my fore-runner, I had my mind fully made up to immerse the whole crowd, but only nine requested to go down into the water.

Brother and Sister Randle said it was the greatest meeting they had ever witnessed. There were fully five hundred people on the ground at the closing service. Gray-headed men and women had actually become aroused. Great will be the day when the eyes of the Mission Board become thoroughly opened to such places. Future prospects are bright.

AN APPEAL.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Allow me to make an appeal through the Advocate for a most worthy cause. Brother J. D. Newsom occupies a small house in Shuqualak which was purchased and paid for by the Columbus District. The building needs considerable repairs to make it comfortable. There are but two habitable rooms, and a small shed-room they use for a kitchen. The house needs a new roof, and a new floor. If these things are not done, the two old people cannot stay in the house this winter without great suffering. There ought by all means to be another room added. I make this appeal especially to the Columbus District, but others may be willing to help in this good work. The house is deeded to the Church for a superannuate's home.

It will require at least $200 to put the house in a comfortable condition. The people of Shuqualak will help all they can. They have already done more than any other place toward securing the house.

Brother Newsom and his wife are truly worthy. He is now over 80 years old, and is unable to do any work at all, and has not a cent to live on, except his allowance by the Joint Board of Finance of the North Mississippi Conference. He has served the Church faithfully, and it is the least the people ought to expect to do to give him a modest and comfortable house while he lives.

There are no doubt many living who have sat with benefit under his ministry, and many who were converted and brought into the Church by his preaching. Will all these contribute something to help give him a home?

The home will be his while he lives, and then be ready for another veteran of the cross, who would otherwise be homeless. Those contributing can send money to the writer, or to Judge Critz, at Westpoint, Miss. O. A. [illegible].

MINISTERS' EDUCATION AID.

For one or two years the dues of the Ministers' Education Aid Association of the Louisiana Conference have been suspended, or, very irregularly collected, on account of the suspension of Centenary College.

The need of money during the present session will be most urgent, and I hope that every member will come prepared to pay annual dues.

Let us have a full meeting of the Association during the Leesville Conference, and see if our methods need any revision. Would it not be a good plan to reduce the annual dues by one-half, and increase the number of contributors?

"PIPPIN" AND "DUMPLING."

"Mildred," exclaimed Beth, running in from a visit to the barnyard, "I know more about ducks than anyone!" "More than grandmother?" questioned Mildred, a little doubtful, for Grandmother Maitland's success in raising ducklings was a well established accomplishment.

"Yes," nodded Beth., "I think I really do, Mildred, because grandmother says she never discovered that ducks were peacemakers, and that's what I have found out."

"You see," she went on, noticing that Mildred was so much interested in ducks that she put down her new doll. "I was peeping through the fence watching two roosters fight. That is, they made believe fight at first, walking round and round each other, and bristling out their feathers in the funniest way; and then they looked at each other as savage as could be; and just then up waddled those two fat ducks that grandmother calls 'Pippin' and 'Dumpling.' They came right in between the roosters and pushed them right apart. Pippin pecked at one and Dumpling at the other. Then they walked on as grand as could be, and the young roosters bristled up at each other again, and made funny little noises. Well, Dumpling and Pippin began quacking just as if they didn't like it at all, and came right back, and pecked at the roosters so hard that they stopped quarrelling and ran off."

Mildred had listened admirably, and now insisted on hurrying out to the barnyard to see Pippin and Dumpling.

"Do you believe many people know as much as we do about ducks?" asked Beth, as they peered through the fence.

"Not as much as grandmother and we know.

A TRUE STORY.

BY IVA ERNSBERGER, A.B.

Many years ago in Boston two boys gradutesd from the High School. They had what was considered in that day a fine education. They both became salesmen in the lace department of one of the largest stores in Boston at five dollars per week.

One evening as they were about to leave the store, they fell to discussing their prospects.

"I say it's a shame two boys with as much education as we have can't get more than five dollars a week," said Brown. "But," says Smith, "I think this is pretty good for boys, and then we're learning all the while."

"Learning what? Precious little one learns standing behind a lace counter all day long!" growled Brown. Brown soon learned from the department manager what he could learn.

Just then a late customer asked Brown for a certain kind of lace. He looked in two boxes, and turning to the young lady said "I am sorry madame, but we haven't it." Immediately Smith interrupted "Look in that second box on your left." He found exactly what the lady wanted, and made the sale.

The department manager called out in severe tones. "Brown, why don't you know your goods?" The boys had not noticed he was standing around the corner hearing their conversation.

From that time on Smith determined that he would know every piece of lace that came into the store, and where to find it. Further more he discovered many interesting things by examining each piece under a magnifying glass.

The two boys both had a raise in salary at the end of the year, Brown to seven dollars, and Smith to ten dollars. Brown said that showed the favoritism that was constantly going on.

Smith then heard of a chemistry class in a night school conducted by a prominent professor. He decided to attend, working hard at it all his spare time. His attentiveness soon attracted the professor's attention, and he took pains to show Smith a number of chemical tests for lace fibres.

Smith urged his friend Brown to share his interesting studies, but Brown always had a social engagement for that night.

One afternoon a drummer came in the store with a large line of samples. The regular lace buyer was in Europe and the department manager was sent to examine the samples. Smith was so interested, he asked if he might look at them too. The department manager made out a large order. Smith was suspicious the laces were not as represented. He took some samples home, applied his chemical tests and found as he had guessed they were only imitations. He spoke to the manager, and failing to convince him, went to the head of the store. The result was the laces were not ordered. Smith was made department manager at twenty-five dollars a week and soon became expert foreign lace buyer at forty-five hundred dollars per year.

Brown told this to his friends as an example of the injustice that goes on in the world.

"WHEN HIS WHEELS AIN'T GREASED."

BY CHAS. F. GOSS, D.D.

By dint of long, laborious effort, Little Bill has acquired a reputation for wagon building. The wheels of perambulators and go-carts are at a premium in this vicinity. Four of these, with a board stretched from axle to axle, seems a simple device, and superficial reflection would conclude that all would run about alike. But automobiles do not vary in speed more widely than the little wagons that go coasting down our cement sidewalks.

"I've got it!" Little Bill said one morning at the breakfast table.

"Got what?" I asked, alarmed.

"Oh! What might it be?"

"Well, you see, I mean to use a round axle, instead of a square one."

"What for?"

"Why, if a wagon goes so fast when the wheels turn on the axle, won't it go twice as fast if the axle turns on the wagon-box?"

"You might try it," I replied.

It is against genius of this phenomenal character that the other manufacturers and racers have to contend, one of whom I met on the streets and asked him if he had ever beaten Little Bill.

"Once in a while," he said.

"How did it happen?" I inquired, surprised.

"Well," he replied, "Bill takes all-fired good care of his rolling stock, but now and then I ketch him when his wheels ain't greased."

I told Little Bill about this, and "improved the occasion."

"Little Bill," said I, "there is a lesson to be learned from this—not only about racing wagons, but about the bigger, longer, harder race you have to run with your rivals in the arena of life. Every one of them will be watching and waiting for that fateful occasion when your 'wheels ain't greased.' That is the way it will be in college. It will be so when you get into business.

"I am not afraid but that you will reach the goal all right, and win as big a prize as any one ought to have, if you only keep your wheels greased! The danger lies at the point where you let the machinery rust or get dry! Let a man get a bilious attack, or a craze for going to the theatres, or playing the slot machines, or let him lose his faith in man, in woman, in God, in life, and the first thing he knows his rival goes past him so fast that he can't see him for dust!

"I've lived quite a while, Little Bill, and I've seen about as clearly as I've ever seen the sun in heaven that the only hope of a successful and useful life is keeping the entire machinery of body, mind and spirit in perfect running order. A little piece of gravel in the ball-bearings or a dry spot on the axle side-tracks you, and you have to watch the procession sweep by while you pause to grease your wheels.

"The dangers of life are mainly at the ebb tide, when the vital forces are low, when the machinery has run down. If we can live so temperately and wisely as always to be at our best, there is little to be feared. So keep your digestion good, keep your soul clean, keep your heart full of hope, keep your purpose strong—keep your wheels greased!"

"I've been a long time meaning to ask you for a dime to get a new oil can; my old one doesn't hold enough for all day Saturday," said Little Bill, when I had finished.—Sunday School Times.

LAWYERS, ATTENTION!

¶The printing plant of this ADVOCATE is idle about two-thirds of the time. The plant is modern in every particular, and was installed at great cost. Owing to this fact, the publisher is compelled to seek other means of employing the machinery in order to justify its use by our paper. We are making an effort to secure a line of work known as "lawyers' briefs," and appeal to our lawyer-friends to patronize us whenever they have need for a printer.

¶Lawyers living in Mississippi and Louisiana, who find it inconvenient to have "briefs" printed in their home town, are invited to give us a trial. All such work will be "put through over-night," and the work will be delivered by U. S. mail in three to five days, according to the size of "brief." Address us at 512 Camp Street, New Orleans. THE CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

The Conferences in our patronizing territory will soon be in session. The time of one of them is less than a month off. The preachers are busily engaged in winding up. Very few having "cleared the decks" are at ease. The majority are making collections—some of them anxious lest they fall behind. But much can be done inside of four weeks, even by one who has but little more than made a start. The wise preacher long since began, and, if he has not collected in full, he has the amount subscribed, and has only to visit the members and ask for it.

But there are other collectors besides the preachers. The preachers' salaries are to be looked after. About this, the preachers themselves are little concerned, or, if they are, the public will never hear of it. As a rule, they are bold to collect for the benevolences of the Church, but are shy about what is due them. Not many Methodist preachers have we ever known that ventured to say anything in public concerning their own living. We have known a few too timid to say anything on the subject even to the stewards, lest they be accused of "worldly mindedness," or of "preaching for money."

The presumption is that the stewards, having estimated the amount necessary for the pastor's support, and assessed the membership what each one is able and willing to pay, hold themselves in readiness to collect the amount. Indeed, they are a committee appointed and set apart for this purpose. If the preacher suffers, it is because the stewards fail in duty, or because the people will not pay.

Brother Stewards: Many of our preachers, at this time, near the close of the year, find themselves embarrassed because their salaries are unpaid. Who is to blame? Not knowing the facts, we are unable to say in any given case. Of this, though, we are sure: every steward who has failed in his duty must bear his part of the responsibility. And we earnestly exhort every one of you, if you love God and his Church, and desire to see an active and successful ministry, go to work, and redeem your charge from the reproach of being behind. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." Give it to him for the sake of the Master. By giving a few hours every week between now and Conference to your work as stewards, every dollar due the preacher can be collected if the people are willing—and they are always willing when the preacher and the stewards do their duty and work in harmony.

Nothing helps a Church so much as to present a clean balance-sheet at the Fourth Quarterly Meeting, and to authorize the preacher to report "in full" at the Annual Conference. We never saw it fail to inspire both the preachers and the stewards. And sometimes it mightily helps the presiding elder.

How bravely and hopefully would all our preachers enter upon next year's work if the stewards would send them up to Conference paid in full. We should like to see the sight.

NOT YET OUT OF DATE.

The New York Independent, liberal in all things except to things Southern, tells its readers that the people of the United States "do not any longer take special pride in the designation 'Protestant.' It was good enough once, but now we call ourselves Christians." It says also that the Roman Catholics "have their equal rights. We do not all of us agree with them, but we do not think of protesting against them, for we no longer need to. There is not a denomination in this country that has the word Protestant in its name which is not trying to get rid of it."

The Independent is supposed to represent its own sentiments. In this particular thing we guess it does, but we feel sure it does not represent the evangelical churches of the country. They are as much "Protestant" to-day as they ever were, and rejoice quite as much in their freedom from the yoke of Rome as at any time in the past. If there is a Protestant body in the United States that does not to-day protest as strongly against the errors and superstition and arrogance and intolerance of the Church of Rome as it did centuries ago, we do not know what body it is. We know there are some in the Protestant Episcopal Church who have made efforts to change their name. A small handful of these are Romanists at heart. The majority of them are not, and desire to change their names not so much because they are ashamed of it, but because they claim that the term "Protestant" implies that they came after the Roman Catholics. As to the Methodist Protestant Church, now considering overtures for union with other bodies, it is a slander to say it is "trying to get rid" of the word "Protestant" in its name. If that Church is not prouder of the word "Protestant" in its name to-day than ever in its history, we are much mistaken. It has helped them in all their struggles against Episcopal Methodism, and now that Episcopal Methodists (the Northern branch) are seeking union with them, they proudly boast that after more than seventy-five years of separation, the Episcopal Methodists have come around to their position, and some of them, perhaps a majority, are willing, for the sake of union, to accept Episcopacy as they find it in the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is modified and handicapped about enough to do them no harm. But not one of these Methodist Protestants is ashamed of his name, or trying to get rid of it.

How absurd to say that "we no longer need to 'protest' against Romanism"! On what ground can such a declaration be made? Only one thing, as far as we can see, could induce Protestants to cease protesting against Romanism, viz.: A change of attitude of Rome towards Protestantism. But it is the boast of Romanists that Rome never changes. Rome is tolerant of Protestants because she cannot help herself; but she is no more tolerant of Protestantism to-day than when she had the power to imprison and otherwise persecute those who dared to dispute her authority. Rome is at this moment the greatest enemy of Protestantism in the world, and the greatest enemy of our public school system in the United States.

If the Independent is right in saying that we have need no longer to protest against Rome, then we had as well abandon our churches and go at once into the "bosom of the mother," and let her control, not only our teaching, but our consciences as well. We need no longer build any houses of worship for the free expression of our devotion and convictions, but let Rome dictate where and how we shall worship God. "We no longer need to protest" against Romanism. Indeed! yet, less than two months since, there gathered in London representatives from all parts of the world to take part in a Eucharistic Congress, the principal object of which was to adore the bread and wine used in the holy communion, supposing that by the act of consecration the bread and wine are changed into the body and blood of our Lord. The bread was elevated in the presence of the people, and carried in procession, and the people fell down before it and worshipped. The Independent would have us no longer protest against such idolatry. Nor would it allow us further to protest against the worship of the Virgin Mary.

We believe and let believe. We have no disposition to persecute anybody for opinion's sake. We would have all enjoy the fullest liberty of conscience, but so long as Romanism anathematizes Protestantism, and holds Protestants to be heretics, worthy of eternal fire, we must be allowed to protest. And this will we do, God being our helper.

A BASELESS INSINUATION.

In a recent issue of Zion's Herald is a short notice of the Southern Methodist Review, which notice is devoted principally to Bishop Galloway's "Judicial Estimate of Jefferson Davis." The Bishop's article, says the Herald, "is pitched in so high a key of unstinted eulogy as to take away the breath of the Northern reader, and cause him to doubt the 'judicial' character of the estimate. 'His extraordinary gifts, radiant virtues, brilliant genius rank him among the greatest men of the centuries,' says the Bishop. His nobility, his patriotism, his piety, his absolute sincerity, integrity, honesty, are duly, or unduly, lauded; his 'passionate devotion to the great Republic,' his attachment to the Union, his unshaken faith in the perfect justice of his cause, his courtesy, his deep religious devotion, his tenderness, his bravery, together with everything else that can be imagined of goodness and greatness are spread upon these pages. He was 'a prince of Christian chivalry,' 'willing martyr to our sacred cause,' etc. The 'so-called horrors of Andersonville' are sneered at and denied as 'an insult to intelligence and blasphemy against truth.' The rebels were right at all points, the Union defenders were all wrong. There was not 'the slightest preparation for war' on the part of the South. It is the most amazing article we have read for many a day, and will open the eyes of many as to the spirit which still animates the South."

What does the Herald mean by "the spirit which still animates the South?" The editor can mean nothing less than that the leading men in the South are still animated by the spirit of hatred for the Union. The only basis for this judgment, so far as Bishop Galloway is concerned, is found in his "unstinted eulogy" of Jefferson Davis. Of all leading men in Southern Methodism, Bishop Galloway would be among the last to be charged and tried for disloyalty to the Union, or of cherishing unfriendly feelings towards the North. No man among us has more frequently mingled with Northern society, or done any more to establish fraternal relations between the two sections. Indeed, so fraternal has he been, that on a public platform, it was proposed to "marry" through him the Northern and Southern Churches. No man in the South has been so severely and basely criticised as Bishop Galloway for sympathizing with efforts to educate the negroes—one of the pet projects of Northern Methodism for more than forty years. Yet, as a representative Southern man he is held up before New England Methodists, as still cherishing feelings of dislike for the Union, simply because he gives what he believes to be a true estimate of a Southern leader. We are tempted almost to say that the insinuation is base as well as baseless.

It is singular that the editor of Zion's Herald occupying the position he does, is not able to allow a Southern man to eulogize one of his own section without charging him with sectional animosity. Suppose Dr. Parkhurst should write A Judicial Estimate of Abraham Lincoln, what ground would the editor of this paper have to say "it will open the eyes of many as to the spirit which still animates the North." What would our readers think? There was a time when the man down South who looked upon Abraham Lincoln as anything but a cut-throat and barbarian, was an exception. To-day the man who does not regard him as a great man—moved in all his actions by the purest of motives, is an exception, and looked upon as incapable of estimating men at their true worth.

Dr. Parkhurst is at perfect liberty to place any estimate on Jefferson Davis that he pleases, but he has no right to discount the loyalty of Southern people.

An article appeared in the Baptist Record of Jackson, Miss., Sept. 17, 1908, on "Election and Predestination," by "Elder Odd." It is by all odds the oddest thing we ever read on the subject. Those who deal in literary curios would do well to send 5 cents in stamps to Brother Bailey and get a copy of the paper.

PERSONALS.

Rev. H. G. Davis, of Monroe, La., we have been informed, will transfer at the close of the year to the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. W. G. Harbin is engaged this week in a meeting with Rev. H. B. Thomason, at Boyce, La. The meeting had just been started when he wrote.

Rev. H. C. Murphy, of Port Vincent, La., brings us under obligation to him for a good list (12) of renewals and new subscribers. Thus the paper continues to grow.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, of Alligator Circuit, North Mississippi, renews his subscription to the ADVOCATE and sends with it half a score of new subscribers. We thank him for this kindly remembering the paper. He is doing well on his charge, and will make a full report at Conference.

Mr. David See Bachman was married Oct. 27 to Miss Mamie Martin Diggs, of Acona, Miss. They begin the new life by subscribing for their church paper—the right way to begin. We congratulate our young brother on his good fortune. May happiness and prosperity attend the newly-married couple!

The work at Haynesville, La., under charge of Rev. W. F. Woodward, is alive and aggressive and prosperous. A brother competent to judge, says: "If the charge continues to develop as it has during the past few months, Haynesville will be one of the best stations in north Louisiana within a few years."

Rev. J. W. Raper informs us of the death of a veteran, the father of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Columbus District. He passed away at his home, Noxapater, Miss., Oct. 26, in his eighty-seventh year, in the triumph of a living faith. We know how to sympathise with our bereaved brother. May he find the consolations of the gospel!

Dr. Sawyer reports a successful Sunday spent with Rev. F. N. Sweeney. He preached at Denham Springs, Live Oak and Alford's Chapel, and at each point spoke to large congregations, and good collections for missions were had. He says that Brother Sweeney is in high favor with his people, and has bright prospects for a good financial and spiritual report at Leesville in December.

Dr. W. C. Black, presiding elder of the Meridian District, sends us a duplicate of the note he forwarded last week, which was so blurred by the post-mark. He says: "On Sunday, Oct. 25, I organized a church and also a Sunday school at Bodga, a station on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, four miles south of Scooba. This church will take its place as one of the regular appointments on a contiguous charge."

We have never made a practice of printing the good words we receive concerning the ADVOCATE—only a few we have made public. It is a matter of great satisfaction to us to be able to say that during the present year we have received more good words than in any year of our management, and more during the last week than in any other week. For all these we are profoundly grateful.

Rev. Amos Kendall has been appointed to Prairie Circuit, made vacant by the death of our dear brother, Rev. R. G. Porter. We have known Brother Kendall as station preacher and presiding elder for more than fifty years. If he ever traveled a circuit, we do not remember it. He writes that he is "enjoying the outing." We presume Sister Kendall, as of old, goes with him on his rounds. Healthy and happy old folks they are—among the best friends this editor and his family ever had.

Rev. R. W. Tucker is closing his fourth year on the Baton Rouge District. Saturday and Sunday last he held Quarterly meeting at Hammond. He preached two fine sermons—the one on Sunday evening being a special plea in behalf of the support of the ministry. It was a strong plea and secured the attention of a large congregation. He baptized six infants. The pastor, Rev. R. T. Walton, is doing a good work, and Hammond is looking up.

Rev. J. E. Wray, of First Church, was sharply criticised in one of the morning papers for venturing to say in his pulpit that he understood a certain club in this city was a boys' club, and had heard from many sources that in this club was an open bar, and that games of chance for money was a constant practice, and added: "From my point of view, a boys' or young men's club that sells intoxicating liquors and allows gambling is a nuisance and a curse to our great city." From our point of view, we are unable to see that Brother Wray went out of his way, or was unduly severe in what he said. It seems to us he went after the club in a straight line, and said nothing too much.

On Oct. 16, 1908, the death angel visited the home of Brother and Sister R. H. Day and claimed their infant daughter, VERNA SEE, for his own. There is a little high chair vacant in their home, the sweet little voice is hushed and stilled. There is an aching void in these fond parent's hearts that never can be filled. One little sister, "Bernice," is left to play alone, to cheer these parents' hearts, and to be a sunbeam in the home. Verna See was only one year, six months and twelve days old when God saw that it was best to nip the little bud here and to transplant it to bloom in Paradise. She is not dead, but has gone to live with God, and with her little brother, who preceded her only a few months, to enjoy the ecstasies of heaven. May the consoling grace of God constrain the bereaved ones, and help them to meet their little darling in heaven. Their pastor.

J. O. WARE.

On Oct. 8, 1908, God came for the soul of our Sister, Mrs. JEANNETTE KIRKWOOD. She had been suffering for sometime, and her release was welcomed by her. She was over seventy-four years old and had been a member of the Church for quite a while. She passed away at the home of her son. Her last words, or some of them, were for her children not to grieve, but rejoice, for the Lord would bring her peace. She had been suffering very much for a long while, yet she bore her pain as becometh a soldier of the Lord Jesus. She died the death of those who are safe in the arms of Jesus. Verily, she is asleep in Jesus. It is a blessing to know that those we know here, who are ready to answer the summons of the Most High, do not dread the crossing of the river. The gospel of Christ, is our only comfort in time of sorrow. We laid her to rest on Oct. 10, where she awaits the sounding of the trump.

J. C. CHAMBERS, Pastor.

MRS. ETHEL OTT (nee Nesom), was born near Live Oak, Livingston Parish, Louisiana, March 23, 1886, and died Sept. 15, 1908. Sister Ott joined the Church in early childhood. She was married to Mr. Ott the 8th day of Dec. 1907, to whom was born a precious little babe that followed her to the land of rest just four weeks later. Sister Ott seemed impressed several weeks before she was taken sick that she would not live long, and mentioned it to her husband, and pointed out the place where she wanted to be buried. She was only sick a few days, and just before she passed away, she took her husband by the hand and said, "I am going to Jesus," and asked him to meet her in heaven. She then called her mother, brothers and sisters and bid them good-bye and took her departure into the sweet beyond. She leaves a husband, mother, three brothers, one of whom is Rev. Jno. Nesom of the Louisiana Conference, and four sisters to mourn her departure. May He who does all things well, comfort them in their time of sorrow.

F. N. SWEENEY.

Death, who invades the sacred precincts of prince and peasant alike, has shrouded in the mantle of sorrow the home of Col. and Mrs. W. B. Irby by plucking its fairest flower, EDWIN WRIGHT IRBY, a youth of twelve, born July 29, 1896. While years of usefulness were beautifully stretching out with promise, young Edwin's spirit heavenward winged its flight Oct. 10, 1908, driven to quit its bodily haunts by diphtheria. Tho' suffering most excruciating pains, he bore it patiently without murmuring. He remembered his Creator in the days of his youth and his merry heart made a cheerful countenance. Bright, cheery and fond, he made all happy. So sweet and loving, to know him was to love him. O bereft father, mother, brother and sister, be ye comforted! Mourn not as those without hope, the Holy Comforter is come "to comfort all that mourn" in Zion. "The Lord shall be thine everlasting light and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." Earth's loss is heaven's gain. Another jewel is added to the treasure above. Edwin is gone, but not forgotten. All whose lives he touched were sweetened. He lives in sacred memory. J. R. BRIGHT.

M. M. KING, so long known throughout Union County, and so long identified with the best interests of the town of New Albany and vicinity, died at his home Sept. 28, 1908, at about the age of 64 years. In the death of Brother King we have lost one of our best citizens. He was remarkably industrious, and by close attention to business and good management, had built up the present extensive business of the "King Hardware and Lumber Company." He was public-spirited, obliging and kind as a neighbor and especially helpful to those in need. Though heavily taxed with business cares, his interest in home and love for his family never in the least abated. No sacrifice of his personal comfort or business interest was too great to be made for the promotion of their happiness. It was beautiful to see how tender and affectionate he was to his crippled wife. I never knew a more loving father. If one of his children was sick in a distant land, regardless of expense or time, he would hasten to their bedside and stay by them until restored to health. In early life Brother King embraced religion and connected himself with the Methodist Church. He loved his Church, and faithfully filled most of the official positions, being in the office of steward about twenty-five years. He was a leading spirit in building the present beautiful temple of worship at Union Hill. How we will miss him as we go there to worship now! But his death was triumphant and we expect to meet him again, "in the sweet by and by."

A. W. LANGLEY.

SISTER ELLIS, the wife of our faithful and beloved Brother, Rev. D. G. W. Ellis, one of our superannuates, has passed into the visible presence of Almighty God. She can see him now just as he is. How inexpressibly delighted she must be to see God as he is. To see him in his majesty and great glory and to know fully what the Psalmist meant when he said of him, "He is clothed with majesty." Psa. xc. 1. Sister Ellis was born near Ellaville, Ga., Mar. 11, 1829. She joined the Methodist Church in her early girlhood and became quite devoted to it. On Nov. 28, 1850, in her 22d year, she was married as Miss R. S. Rainey to Brother W. P. Frasier. After his death she was married to Brother John R. Baggett, on Sept. 13, 1881, and subsequent to his death, she was joined in holy wedlock, Nov. 13, 1901, to Brother Ellis who survives her. She was among the first acquaintances formed by the undersigned when he came an orphan boy from Georgia to this State in 1869. The familiar name by which she was then known, especially to children and young people, was "Aunt Becky Frasier," and we all loved her much. Her husband and the guardian of the writer of this, having united in farming and merchantile interests, it was my pleasure to be associated with her frequently, and also to enjoy the free hospitality of her and her husband. In my imagination, I can see her movements in the domestic circle and hear those bland words that gave so much satisfaction to my young orphan heart that hungered for kindness. She called me her boy and how that fact relieved that fearful feeling of desertion that one has when he concludes that "no one cares for me." After Aunt Becky married Brother Baggett, I became her pastor while in charge of the First Methodist Church at Hattiesburg; and how it delighted her for her boy to become her pastor. My heart swells with grief while I write these things; remembering she is gone, not to return until the judgment. On meeting her after her marriage to our beloved Brother Ellis, she declared her great happiness in having realized her ardent desire to be the wife of a Methodist preacher. Her home was always a home for the ministry. She esteemed no other class of men as highly as she did God's ambassadors for whom she was always ready to sacrifice her own pleasure and comfort. Those of them who have shared her hospitality will not likely forget her. During her last illness, I visited her, and although her mind had become flighty in its eightieth year of activity, yet she immediately recognized me when I spoke to her and it was my pleasure and profit to talk with her about her departure from this world and to pray with her. She expressed herself as being quite happy in Christ and ready to meet him. It was not long after that visit till I heard of her death (Oct. 2, 1908), which ended a long and varied life—a life acquainted with many of the incidents and irregularities of an earthly existence. Her uncertain existence has settled and molded into that which is certain and eternal.

"Nothing is there to come, and nothing past,
But an eternal Now does always last."

May God's richest blessings rest upon Brother Ellis and his children that they may be ready always to meet God in perfect peace.

MENTORUM CIRCUIT.

Dear Advocate: As I have not seen anything in the Advocate from Mentorum this year, will write to let the Church know what the Lord is doing for us. This is a large Circuit—five churches and several side appointments—what was once called the Black Creek Mission. If Brother Lewis, the pastor of fifty years ago, had been with us this year in our meetings he would change his mind in regard to thinking that the pastor has always to send off for help to hold a revival meeting; for we have had several revivals with the help of our local brethren who did the preaching in power and demonstration of the Spirit. I have five such preachers on this work, which is a great help to a beginner like the writer; and when it comes to preaching or exhorting, they have no regard for how they excel him. These, with many others, are true to the Church and to the Master.

We have had gracious revivals all around, with the help of these brethren, Brothers Chapman, Griffin and Howse; the Spirit being manifested in saving and sanctifying power; penitents coming to the altar and crying out to God until they were saved and made to shout the praise of God; such pleading, praying and shouting, till all was a great outburst and commotion, service after service. Many have been converted or reclaimed and forty-five have united with the Church.

To God be all the praise. May he keep us all low at his feet and use us for the salvation of this world from sin. Let us look on the fields and pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest.

Yours in his service,

R. T. PICKETT.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-four years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of them. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased membranes and makes a radical cure, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

November 8. The Spirit-Enriched Life. John vii. 37-44; Col. ii. 1-5.

This is a day when you may hear men make very extravagant claims as to the riches received from the Spirit. Recently a man in New Orleans claimed to have the gift of tongues. This writer has heard men claim that they could not sin. But, on the other hand, there is a spiritual poverty that is more alarming than [illegible] extravagant claims.

1. A man cannot be spiritually rich without spiritual knowledge.

The treasures of the King are freely offered to all his children, but only those will take them who realize what is being offered. In the [illegible] country three men [illegible] prospecting [illegible]. Discouraged, they abandoned the mine. After their rights [illegible] to [illegible] one else, [illegible] the abandoned mine, and [illegible] a [illegible] of dynamite. The first blast opened up one of the richest silver mines ever found in that country. The first men owned this wealth, but lost it because they did not know their possession. In your spiritual life you can only lay hold on the known treasure. Many Christians are weak and put their Lord to shame [illegible] because they do not listen to the voice of the Spirit.

2. It is in the province of the Spirit to lead us into the knowledge of our inheritance.

Flesh and blood has never yet found out God, but the Holy Spirit will guide you into all truth. He will make plain to you the foundations of grace, and reveal to you your relation to the eternal. The Spirit will lighten every page of your Bible as you study it, and will furnish the key to every experience of your soul. A man who is worth millions may never hold in his own hands but a very few dollars, all told, of his wealth. But he is rich in that he has the right and the knowledge of his possession. So, by the help of the Spirit, a man realizes his eternal treasure, unfailing and abiding.

3. The Holy Spirit actually enriches the soul to-day.

Not what you have, but what you are constitutes your real worth. This is profoundly true in all lives without exception. Men strive for riches that they may have peace and joy, but the Spirit plants peace and joy in the heart without regard to poverty or riches. He changes the disposition until the very face shines with a new light and beauty. Many a poor boy would rejoice to be adopted into a home of wealth, but you and I are adopted by the Spirit into the family of the King, and made heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ. Our Father in heaven has placed in our hands checks upon the bank of promise, and if we have faith to sign our prayers with the name of Jesus there is scarce limit to the things which will be done for us. But we read that the Spirit maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. He is ever present to reveal the Christ to us. The Spirit will [illegible] still in each of us the mind of the Master, if we will permit. He is ready to establish in righteousness now, and at last to bring you into the unquestioned possession of riches incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

Over fifty lives have been lost in the oil fields as a result of the poisonous gases flowing from the big hole in the ground at Tampico, in Mexico. The Mexican Government has called upon the most prominent scientists in Mexico to investigate the situation.

LESSON FOR NOV. 8, 1908.

Subject: "David Grieves for Absalom." II Samuel xviii. 24-33.

The king of Israel and the commander-in-chief of his army understood each other well, indeed; and whatever error there was in bringing Absolom back to Jerusalem from his banishment, each had his share. They could not know how the king's son had spent the time while he was with the king of the Geshurites; there were none there to encourage Absalom in his loyalty to his king or his duty as a son to his father. It was Joab's mistake when he interceded for Absalom's return from exile, and he must have seen his error when he joined the majority in leaving the king's son to himself. In the two years that followed Absalom was not idle, for he gave indication that he had been spending the time in planning the carrying out of most selfish and ambitious schemes. The time had come now when he must emerge from seclusion so that he might have more liberty of action. He did not wish to appear as openly violating the king's command, so he must get the king's consent to present himself at court again. In a strange and entirely original manner he almost compelled the aid of Joab in effecting a reconciliation with king David.

Absalom must have studied well the condition of affairs as then existing in the kingdom, and found that his father's hold on the hearts of the people was not as strong as in former years. So he went about trying to gain for himself the place in the estimation of the people which had been nearly lost by his father. He would look up any that had a cause of complaint, and tell them what he would do for them if he had the official power.

Absalom also gathered about him a retinue of chariots and horses and men, in imitation of the princes of the nations around and about his father's dominion. His great personal beauty was a strong factor in his favor. He thus actually stole the hearts of the people. Not only in Jerusalem was the conspiracy taking form, for Absalom had sent his emissaries through all the tribes, keeping his adherents informed as to the progress of the revolt.

David and Joab must have known of the danger that threatened the affairs of state; yet they remained inactive. David's love for his son made him hope that something would prevent open hostilities. It is a most pitiable sight to see a kind and loving father submitting to indignity and cruelty from an undutiful son. Had he received orders, Joab, with his army, could have crushed the rebellion in its incipiency. No such commands were given; on the contrary, David was overwhelmed with fear, and could only say: "Arise and let us flee!" Where now was the bravery with which the shepherd had delivered his father's sheep from the lion and the bear? Where the bold courage that cast aside the king's armor, meeting Goliath of Gath with only shepherd's bag and sling? That was the bravery of conscious innocence. There was no stain of sin on that young heart. It was long after that, that conscience had made a coward of the king of Israel.

It was a sad sight to see the great warrior-king leave his capital city in abject fear. David did not want to fight his son. He would not fight him; he knew his extremity was God's opportunity; so, turning away from even the thought of force of arms, he resorted to prayer. David knew, from his own feeling toward Absalom, that God would yet give him "the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

The ark of the covenant was carried along with the king and the people, and they passed over the brook Kidron toward the way of the wilderness. The hastily formed procession halted, and Zadok, with the Levites, set down the ark. Then David showed his trust in God, as he told them: "Carry back the ark into the city; if I find favor in the eyes of the Lord, he will bring me again and show me both it and his habitation," meaning the place of worship.

See the humility as the king bowed to God's will, saying: "Behold, here am I; let Him do to me as seemeth good unto Him!"

They took the ark back, and David went up the Mount Olivet, weeping as he went, and crying unto God in prayer.

Absalom entered Jerusalem and established himself as king. He at once organized an army and placed Amasa as commander-in-chief. The king also began to prepare for open hostilities; he found himself surrounded by a force strong enough to separate and make three divisions, Joab, Abishai and Ittai leading one each of the three.

The two opposing forces, advancing, met in the wood of Ephraim, a wild part of the country northeast of Jerusalem, and east of the Jordan. Absalom was himself in command, and opposing him was the fierce old warrior Joab. There could have been but one result, and it was predetermined at the hand of God: defeat for Absalom. His forces were soon in full retreat, and as they fled through the thickly-wooded grove, many became entangled and were slain. Through this wood Absalom endeavored to make his escape; his haste made him forget his danger, and in an unguarded moment he was caught by an overspreading limb of a tree, his hair getting entangled in such a manner that he could not extricate himself in a hurry, and the mule on which he rode went from under him, leaving him suspended by the hair of his head. Joab came upon him, and, with three darts, thrust them through the body of King David's rebellious son.

The battle was over, David's forces were victorious, and the couriers ran with the news to inform the king. The war of rebellion was at an end; shouts of triumph echoed over the hills of Judea; but at what a cost was this victory! David heard of no victory; he only heard of the death of his son, and he turned away, his very life going out in the wail of his broken heart: "O Absalom, my son! My son, Absalom! Would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!"

Let us sadly turn this page in the history of David, remembering that then and always, "whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth," and if we can attain to the sweet submission to God's will, as was shown by King David, it would be a lesson well worth all our study and meditation. It seems that deepest sorrow leads us closest to God. Be consoled, then, O grief-stricken soul, knowing that Jesus was comforted by angels; and the same ministering spirits are sent to all the heirs of salvation.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

THE GOSPEL IN JAPAN.

Japan needs a large body of thoroughly trained, spirit-filled, consecrated native preachers. They have a few such men, but the fields are white, and the laborers are few. In Japan, as elsewhere, the day has passed when the untrained men can meet the needs of the work.

The Japanese Mission held a delightful session, with Bishop Ward in the chair. Our mission and the Japanese Methodist Church are working in perfect accord. Bishop Honda attended the session of the Mission.

While in Japan, Bishop Ward visited all our stations but one, and preached in every place. In nearly every instance there were seekers at the close of the service.

The organization of the Japanese Methodist Church has not ended our work in Japan; it has simply enlarged the possibilities of our service. With discretion, grace, and consecration, we may be used by the Spirit to do a great work in helping the Japanese to help themselves.

One of our missionaries writes:

"Japan is the strategic field in the whole mission world. Within the last forty years see what has been done in this nation. Feudalism has been abolished and an absolute monarchy set up, then later constitutional government established. A great army and navy has been created and two ancient nations defeated in war, China and Russia. The map of the Far East has been changed greatly to Japan's advantage; a national system of modern schools and colleges organized; religious liberty for all made a part of the Constitution—these and much else. Southern Manchuria, Korea and Formosa are completely subject to the Japanese, and their example and constant contact with China will exert a tremendous influence upon the education, commerce and government of that ancient people. For many years Japan is to exert a powerful influence upon all the peoples of the Far East, including China.

"And Japan is at this very hour in a serious condition and needs help. Besides an ever-burdening war debt of over two hundred million, yea, with taxes levied to the breaking point, commercial and industrial failures frequent and many of the people put to it to live, there is stealing and fraud, pressing in, and suicides to an alarming extent.

"With all their patriotism, martial heroism, secular education and aggressive enterprise, there is no nation more in need than Japan to-day. Needing what? The healing power of Christ."

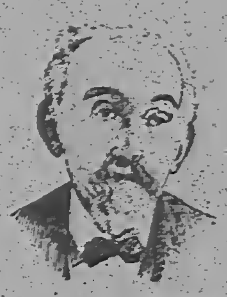
A Minister's Indigestion.

Rev. Fletcher of Tennessee Suggests a Remedy Based on Personal Experience—You Can Get It Free.



Rev. A. J. Fletcher

There is nothing that is so much sought after as a remedy for stomach trouble, and hence you will be interested to know how the Rev. A. J. Fletcher of Rutherford, Tenn., whose picture we present herewith, cured his indigestion. To use his own words, he says in part:

"I received the sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin that I asked you to send me, and I made no mistake in ordering it. I have been troubled with dyspepsia and indigestion more or less for about sixty years, and have taken many remedies, but Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has done me more good than anything else. I am 79."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been sold in drug stores for 20 years. The price is only 50 cents or $1 a bottle. It is especially adapted to the uses of babies, children, women and old folks. Its purity is vouched to the Government, and results from its use are guaranteed. If you have never tried it send name and address for a free trial bottle, which will be cheerfully sent to your home prepaid. If there is any medical advice that you want, or anything about your condition that you don't understand, write the doctor. Address your letter, Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 668 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

It is reported that a policy is being pursued on the Panama Canal of reducing the forces. Those in charge are sure that they can finish the Canal easily by 1915, and word is being passed along that there is no hurry. We do not know how true this may be, but most Americans would like to see the Canal finished ahead of time.

A vast amount of explaining has been done by different men who have been involved in the Standard Oil letters recently made public. It is vastly better not to have so much to explain. It takes a great amount of explaining to convince the public that a man who receives for his public service $5000 and for his private services $30,000 will not do the most for the biggest fee.

THE DALEVILLE CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I write to let you hear from me. I am closing out my second year on the Daleville Circuit with fairly good results. There are five appointments on this Charge. The time will soon come when I will have to go up to Conference and give an account of my stewardship and again receive my marching orders for another year. A kinder and a more appreciative people I never served than the people of the Daleville Charge. My board of stewards have looked well after the pastor and his family.

I have held six meetings on the Charge this year. I was assisted in these meetings by Brothers H. L. Norton of Shubuta; E. L. Alford of South Side, Meridian; B. W. Lewis of Buckatunna, and I. L. Peebles of Bolton.

The pastor held the meeting at Linwood without any ministerial aid. The meetings were all good; the preaching done by the brethren helping me was good. As a result of this meeting the Church was greatly revived and the membership increased by additions, by certificate and on profession of faith, twenty. I think that I will be able to make an average report at Conference. I want to have the work in as good condition as possible, at least as good as I found it. I don't think that the preacher that may be read out for Daleville need to feel like he is afflicted, for I feel that if he will do his duty, the Daleville people will not let him suffer.

I am doing what I can to put the Advocate in every home that I can. I think that it is a great help to the pastor for his people to take and read the Church papers. I hope to be able to write more soon.

C. C. GRIFFIN, P. C.

BERNICE, LA.

Our Conference year is coming to a close, and will soon be in the past, with our successes and failures recorded; and with all our mistakes which can never be corrected. Our work on Bernice Charge hasn't been all sunshine, but in many respects has been very pleasant and profitable. The Lord has blessed us beyond what we deserve, for which we are thankful. We shall never regret our coming to the Louisiana Conference, though our stay may be short. Our acquaintance with the brethren we have met has been very pleasant, and our associations and work together with our presiding elder, Brother Carter, has been a blessing and profitable to me.

We have been blessed in reading the Advocate, and wish all a very successful winding up of our year's work.

J. P. McDONALD.

SALTILLO, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: This Conference year is rapidly coming to a close. We have had the best year of our life. Rev. W. D. Bass held two of our meetings with great results. At Moorville there were 125 conversions and fifty-four added to our Church. We paid Brother Bass $185, and he made a donation to our parsonage. Our people say they want him again next year.

We have had on my charge 315 conversions. We want to begin building on the parsonage at Moorville in a few days and also a new church house at Moorville. We hope to have them ready for the new preacher next year.

We hope to bring everything up in full at Conference. Respectfully,

J. W. CUMMINGS.

A MEMORIAL AT THE ORPHANAGE.

BY C. C. WIER.

I have been reflecting upon some of the things I have seen that have impressed me most as I have been over Louisiana. I recall very distinctly being in Mansfield, and upon inquiring why the bell was tolling at the Episcopal Church, I was informed that it was a memorial church, and that every evening, at the close of each day, the bell was tolled as a token of respect to the dead. One of our prominent bankers has built a brick church near the grave of his only son and has the church yard beautifully kept and a janitor looks after the grave and the church property. Truly, this is a beautiful tribute to his dead boy.

In the Sunday School auditorium of Rayne Memorial Church over the door of one of the class rooms, I observed "Dorothy Wilmot room." Her father secured the privilege of naming the room for her while she is still living. Thinking of these things and how tenderly we should hold our living and our dead, I have asked the Orphans' Home Board for the privilege of giving our Home a more distinctive memorial feature—just here I will again describe our Home. It is on the cottage plan under one roof, each cottage has a bath room and a reading room. Now, I have been wondering if I could not find a group of nine families to agree to name the eight little dormitories and the chapel. How beautiful it would be to have a fine picture of some loved one in the little reading room looking down on the children and over the door the name you should select for that particular little dormitory. It will be a tribute of respect and love. I also will have some memorial windows that the Board will allow taken by friends. This will be an opportunity for you to do good to God's little ones and at the same time pay a tender tribute to the name of a dear one. Should you wish to look further into this memorial feature write me and I will gladly call on you.

WAR-TIME PRICES.

A party of young people was camping in New England so far up that they felt almost over the "Canady line." The right kind of camping dishes had been brought; but one day somebody hooked a very big bass, and then it was remembered that if it was baked and served in all its comely fairness, there was no platter to put it on.

Two of the company walked six miles to the store, to see what could be done in the way of china.

They found the store, very small and very much obscured by dusty windows. An old man, who was apparently the owner, was sitting on the platform without, reading a yellowed newspaper, crumpled and torn. He looked as if the surrounding dearth of salable goods might exactly suit him. They passed him, and he followed them into the store.

"Have you a platter?" they asked.

"Platter?"

"Yes, just a common white platter. Nothing stylish."

He took off one pair of spectacles and put them in his pocket. Then he extracted another pair from a corresponding pocket on the other side and fitted them to his nose.

"Yes," he conceded, with a certain mild tolerance of trade, "I guess I can fit ye out."

He vanished down the stairs at the back of the store, and presently reappeared, bearing with some pride a good-sized white platter.

"Wrap it up, and we'll take it along. How much is it?"

He frowned over his laborious manipulation of paper and string.

"A dollar and a half," said he.

"A dollar and a half! That white platter! Oh, come! we wanted something cheap."

The old man paused in his fitting of paper about the oval.

"I ain't got a thing that's cheaper," he said, mildly. "This is the only platter there is in stock."

"Well, can't you take off something?"

He turned the platter over and in an earnest pondering scrutinized the back.

"It don't seem as if I could," he mused. "That's jest what that platter cost me the second year o' the war."—The Youth's Companion.

SOME SIGNS OF GENTLE FOLKS.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson said: "Shut me up in a dark room with a mixed multitude, and I can pick out the gentle folks by their voices."

In the compass of every voice there are three registers—the middle, or throat; the lower, or chest; and the upper, or head, register. The use of the middle pitch for talking is very desirable, but the voice should be trained to slide up and down, varying with emotions, low when the mood inclines toward seriousness, and higher when it becomes tinged with excitement. An interesting speaker constantly changes his pitch, but with ease and skill, and the greater range one has the more certain he is to get and retain the pleased attention of listeners. Our high-pitched, strident voices are sharply criticised, and it is quite within our power to change them.

When we see a girl who laughs and talks loudly in public places we put a severe strain upon our charity and judgment not to think her vulgar.

What can be more cruel to a sensible soul than to be conscious that you are wondering "how it happened?" A noted cripple once said that he always gauged his friends by the degree in which they reminded him of his deformity. A well-bred lady or gentleman will never apparently notice any defect or deformity in another, or remind him even indirectly of his misfortune; but they will try to make him forget it.

Never to notice or speak of that which can possibly give pain or embarrassment to another is the test of good breeding. We often see people in the cars and on the streets stare at the deformities, physical defects, and deficiencies of unfortunates in a manner which almost brings tears to our eyes.—Selected.

If anything can prove the deep depravity of the human race, as well as the inefficiency of police officers, it is the fact that young girls are systematically sought after and provided for evil purposes. In some instances they are kidnaped, in others they are betrayed and entrapped by deceivers, and bought and sold like cattle, though not in the open. The "white-slave traffic" is recognized as an actual fact. That it is carried on without the knowledge of the guardians of the people, is hardly believable. We would not say that all policemen are cognizant of the facts and could locate the trafficers, but certainly some of them know, and pay no attention to the evil, else protect the evil-doers in their nefarious work. It is doubtless true that hundreds of girls of legal age abandon themselves to lives of shame of their own accord, but hundreds more are lured into the life while under age, and might be saved from the procurors, if all policemen were thoroughly honest and kept their eyes open. These things are sad to contemplate. How to remedy the evil is one of the problems of our social life. Who can solve it?

Col. E. W. Carmack, ex-United States Senator, and editor of the Tennessean, a daily paper of Nashville, was instantly killed on one of the principal streets of Nashville, Tenn., late in the afternoon of Nov. 9. His slayer is a young man of the same city, who, at the time, was accompanied by his father. The difficulty between the men grew out of articles written at various times by Mr. Carmack concerning the part played in Tennessee politics by the elder Cooper. Mr. Carmack, for a year or more, has been the leader of the prohibition movement in Tennessee, the anti forces being drilled and led by what Mr. Carmack called the "Democratic ring." Mr. Carmack has been untiring and unsparing in his fight against the ring, having attributed his defeat for re-election to the Senate and his nomination for Governor to the influence of the whisky party in the State. His race for the Senate was before the question of state-wide prohibition was fairly before the people. But he was on the side of temperance. All the facts as to the fatal encounter will not be known until the trial before the courts. But it is safe to say at this writing that Mr. Carmack is the first Tennessee martyr to the cause of prohibition.

The concensus of opinion among physicians is that consumption is not hereditary, but one of the preventable diseases, and that when one is attacked the victim may be relieved, if not entirely cured. In accordance with these convictions a National Anti-Tuberculosis League has been formed in the cities. One has just been organized in New Orleans. A house has been secured and put in readiness for the treatment of patients—those in an advanced stage, as well as those who have been but recently attacked. The clinic, largely charitable, we take it, was formally opened on Monday, Nov. 2, Dr. E. L. McGehee, President of the Louisiana Anti-Tuberculosis League, being master of ceremonies. Dr. McGehee, one of the leading physicians of the city, is always ready in every good word and work, and will prove an efficient helper, as well as leader, in making the fight against "the white plague." The Doctor organized a branch of the League at Hammond, in this State, on the evening of Oct. 30, and we dare say is ready to organize branches at other points where it may be deemed advisable. This League is worthy of the consideration of all intelligent and benevolent citizens.

If the college teams are playing "reformed football" there will be found plenty of persons praying for a return to the old way. In our boyhood we never heard of men being killed, or suffering broken bones on the football-ground. Now it seems that in the game there is less effort to display skill than to exhibit brute force, and surgeons are at hand expecting serious accidents. The Pittsburg Gazette-Times says: "Reformed football so-called is being played this year, and if the casualties continue to occur as frequently as they have in the last couple of weeks, there will be a widespread demand for a return to the old style of game from all except young hospital surgeons seeking practice. Retired veterans say that never in their experience have there been so many serious injuries to players so early in the season." And the strangest thing in connection with this brutal sport is the fact that institutions of learning, owned and controlled by Christian churches, not only tolerate, but encourage match games—allowing their students to go hundreds of miles—involving the loss of much time and money, to engage in a contest. And we have heard of teams traveling all day Sunday in returning home. The intercollegiate games cost far more than they are worth.

The subject of forest protection is attracting much attention. It has not been drawn in that direction any too soon—indeed not soon enough. If, one hundred years ago, our fathers had paid attention to the forests, and saved them from destruction, the face of our country to-day would present a different, and a far better appearance. We know large bodies of land—much of it in a fine state of cultivation for many years—that have been ruined—absolutely covered with sand, simply because the timber has all been taken from the surrounding hills. Our Government has undertaken the work of forest preservation and the reclamation of forests. It will encourage and aid the people in the work as far as possible. There is established a "Forest Service," and those in charge stand ready to give out all necessary information. Japan seems to have been the first, if not the only country, to give the matter the attention it deserves. There the government controls the forests, and has carefully guarded them for the past 1200 years. There the matter is reduced to a science. During all these years the people of Japan have been planting forests with a success that has been a little short of marvelous. Under careful management, the Japanese forests yield very high financial returns. This high yield is only made possible by the close utilization of every bit of the tree so that scarcely a twig is wasted, and by the improvement of the growth of their forests by carefully conducted thinning and tending. The woods are first thinned at the age of thirteen years, and then every five years after that up to the time of the final harvest, at 120 years."

We went to press too early last week to give the result of the election for president. A week after the event to say that Mr. Taft was elected, will not be news to any of our readers. We note the result now, principally, to call attention to the fact that Mr. Taft will be our president—the president of all the people, made up of members of all the parties. Never were partisans more active in presenting their claims—the leaders of the minor parties who had no hope of success whatever, as well as the two great parties, one of which was bound to triumph. Never perhaps, in the history of the country, were the rank and file of the Democratic party more certain of victory than during the closing weeks of the canvass. Never were people more completely disappointed. In this, the third race of Mr. Bryan, he was as badly beaten as he ever was—if anything, more so, especially in the East, which section of the country generally determines the election. Even New York City went for Mr. Taft, which four years ago was against Mr. Roosevelt. But, notwithstanding the great disappointment of the Democrats, like good and loyal citizens they have accepted the verdict of the people, and settled down to quiet life. The most remarkable thing in connection with the election is the small figure cut by the minor parties. Their votes did not count enough to command public attention. It will be some time yet before it is known to the public how many votes they cast. Nor is it known in which direction the body of the labor vote was cast—perhaps it never will be, for outside of the vote for the Socialist Party, and the Socialist Labor Party, it would be hard, if not impossible, to determine, whether Mr. Taft or Mr. Bryan received the greater number. Only this is certain: Mr. Gompers did not control the Federation of Labor, the votes of which, both the leading parties coveted. It is perhaps well that the Federation, as such, did not commit itself to politics. Let us hope that Mr. Taft, who takes the reins the fourth of next March will make a good president. For this let us all pray as we are commanded, and as good citizens let us render due obedience to "the powers that be." They are ordained of God.

NARROWNESS OF JESUS.

BY REV. THEO. COPELAND.

To discuss this subject at any length, except from the viewpoint of negation, or denial, is an utter impossibility. We might as well discourse upon the littleness of the majestic ocean, which rolls its unresting billows across every zone, and bathes all the islands and continents in its purifying waters. We might as well pour contempt on the infinite sky whose burning suns and blazing constellations adorn the upper deep, marching in boundless perspective along their appointed paths.

The charge of narrowness was never thrust upon Jesus by his contemporaries. On the contrary, the leaders of religious thought in his time complained of his liberal practice and teachings. "This man," they murmured, "receiveth sinners and eateth with them." On another occasion they all said, complainingly, that he had gone in to lodge with a man that was a sinner.

Christ's interpretation of the Mosaic law was anything but narrow. The sermon on the Mount clearly reveals his attitude toward the law and the prophets, which he came not to destroy, but to fulfill. He frequently widened the application of the moral code, and lifted it to higher level than it had ever held in the conceptions of the great religious teachers of the world.

The theology of subsequent times has lifted no voice of accusation against Jesus because of his narrowness. For 2000 years the genius of history has unfolded to our wondering gaze the splendid triumphs of the cross, and proved beyond any reasonable doubt that the scheme of recovering grace was intended to reach as far as the curse of sin is found.

It is true that Jesus said on one occasion, "I am not sent, but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." This remark, however, had reference to his personal ministry. As a man, Jesus was subject, for the most part, to human limitations. It was necessary, therefore, that there should be some limits to his personal ministry; and it was proper that these limits should be at the circumference of the circle of Israel. What might have been gained extensively would have been lost intensively. It was of primary importance that he should make sure of a foothold on which he might plant his moral machinery for moving the world. He was about to commit the renovation of the planet to the hands of a few chosen men, and he must discipline and equip them for an enterprise that would tax all their energies and finally cost their lives. Jesus is the universal man, and the universal Savior. Not a poet, not a philosopher, not a scientist, but all these in one. He was a man growing out of the depths of our nature. Humanity, on the surface, is broken into nationalities and individualities. But go down a little way, and you come to a place where differences give place to resemblances; force your way down and you soon arrive at the region of human unities, where every man is like every other man. So Jesus Christ emerges from the profoundest depths of our nature, from the region of unities. No Greek, no Jew, no Roman is he; but man, and the Savior of all men. In his kingdom there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free; but Christ is all and in all.

The whole Bible is replete with this pregnant thought. "How submile the conception," says a modern writer, "as we find it flaming around the lips of the prophets of God, who saw in the distance the mountain of the Lord's house exalted above the mountains and established above the hills; the New Jerusalem coming down, as a bride adorned for her husband; earth uplifted toward heaven; the smoke of its every cottage rising like the smoke of an altar; peace brooding on its oceans; righteousness running in its streams; the very bells of its horses bearing "Holiness to the Lord." In the Hebrew prophets we find it closing every vista, irradiating every gloom; lying, like a bright western heaven at the termination of every prophet's day; coloring the gorgeous page of Isaiah; gleaming through the willows where Jeremiah hung his harp; glaring on the wild eye of Ezekiel who turns from his wheels to show the waters of the sanctuary; mingling with the stern denunciations of Micah; tinging with golden edges the dreams of Daniel; and casting transient rays of transcendent beauty amid the obscure and troubled tragedy of the Apocalypse."

At Pentecost Peter preached, "The promise is to you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." In the house of Cornelius the same apostle said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness is accepted with him."

The apostle of the Gentiles, catching the echo of the great commission, carried the gospel from Jerusalem to Antioch, from Antioch to Ephesus, from Ephesus to Rome. Like his ascended Lord, his vision was world-wide, and his energies knew no abatement till in the Roman prison just before his execution he wrote his son Timothy, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand."

"The evangelization of the whole world in this generation" is emblazoned on the battle-flag of God's militant hosts, looking for and hastening to the time when the kingdom of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ."

DR. HAMILL AND THE REVIEW.

BY DR. J. A. PARKER.

Mr. Editor: The old saw about fraud and honest exchange may apply in matters of opinion as in commerce.

In your notice of the contents of our Review, in the ADVOCATE of the 2nd. inst. you criticise Dr. Hamill's opinion of what Methodism should be, according to his view of it. I wish to call your attention to what seems to me to be an historical inaccuracy in some statements in the editorial alluded to, especially in your contrast of the features of the polity of the Japanese Church with the Haynes case or the cause of the O'Kelly secession.

The faction leading in the last-named controversy proposed to take all rights or prerogatives from the Bishops in the matter of presiding elder appointments, whereas the Japanese polity gives indefinite latitude to the presiding officer. If he wants six presiding elders the Conference nominates twelve men, and if from the twelve he cannot get what he wants, the Conference must select twice as many as are wanted; and so on till the Bishop is satisfied. No such option was extended the Bishop under the O'Kelly proposition, which demanded that the Conference elect all the presiding elders, leaving the Bishop no choice whatever.

To my mind, the Japanese plan is but little, if at all, different in its ultimate results from the American method, because if the presiding Bishop wished "to lord over God's heritage," he could keep calling for nominees till he secured the men of his choice. As to the Haynes case, to which you liken the Japanese method in connection with the presiding eldership, it had no connection with that question,* but grew out of the appointment of a trial committee. In this case, the Haynes (or Kelly side of the case) was sustained by the College of Bishops.

As to the bearing of the Third Restrictive Rule on the Japanese polity, as seems to be desired by Dr. Hamill, I cannot see how the question of tenure can effect that rule. In the strict Episcopalian sense, it was not the purpose of the convention of 1784 to organize an Episcopal Church, but rather to organize a Church having "an Episcopal form of Government."—Such is the language the historian put in the mouths of the members of that convention.

This "Episcopal form" was given in the person, or persons, of "a General Itinerant Superintendency," and nothing was said about Bishops in the resolution passed by the convention defining the nature of the government of the Church just about to be organized. Nor was there any mention of the period of occupancy in the resolution adopted later in the Third Restrictive Rule.

If Bishops were elected, for a year, or a term of years, I cannot see how the Restrictive Rule would be voided or its intentions be caused to miscarry. It is a well-known fact that, from Wesley to McKendree, the title "Bishop" was ignored, while Asbury refused to accept such official title.

It is not treason to discuss these grave questions of Church polity. Wonderful advance has been made in the governmental structure of Methodism during your lifetime and mine, and the end is not yet.

The present ecclesiastical polity of all organization must keep up with the advance of thought and natural requirements, or be left behind the advancing hosts. From six months as the tenure of a pastor we passed to twelve months—from one year to two—from two to four—and we will go still further with the pastoral term no doubt.

The "High Church" idea of the "General Itinerant Superintendency" of the Methodist Episcopal Church was never heard of till 1844, and was then introduced by the Southern Delegates as an incident in the case of Bishop Andrew, and no one can prove that the dogma insisted on by the minority was ever heard of before; nor that it would then have been introduced but for the defense of an innocent and helpless man.

The attempt to change the name of the Church in, I believe, 1866—which failed of adoption—was in furtherence of the high Church idea of the Episcopacy. The name adopted in 1784 was opposed to the idea that the Episcopacy is a co-ordinate branch of the Church government. First of all was the emphasis of the facts, that the organization to be perfected, was for the "Methodist" as separate and distinct from the Anglican Church, and "Episcopal," related to the form and not the fact of its government. The words of the resolution adopted by the organizing assembly proves the correctness of this theory, viz.: "Believing the Episcopal form the more scriptural," etc. Mr. Wesley was never elected to the Episcopacy, yet he claimed to be as much a "Bishop" as his Lordship of Canterbury." How much more of a Bishop was Coke, Asbury, Andrew or McTyeire." The Episcopacy is an office, and when we attempt to endow that office with the sanctity of a ministerial order, we are on dangerous ground. St. Paul says it is an "office," and "he that desireth it desireth a good thing." It may be set down as a rule, that any deliberative body which has power to make an office and fill that office, has also a right and power to dispose of the office and its incumbent at pleasure—within constitutional limits. As to the "office," the constitution protects it and its nature, but not the incumbent. Older men as you and this writer may not live to see it, but sooner or later our present method of choosing and employing men as Bishops and presiding elders is bound to undergo an extensive change. In the past we have been most fortunate in selecting men for the Episcopacy. One apostate, and one or two inefficients, is quite enough; but for such showing, covering a period of one hundred and twenty-four years, is a favorable showing for human judgment.

If ever the time and the man comes, when a Bishop chooses presiding elders to help in partisan schemes or selfish acts, then there will be a change without violation of the Third Restrictive Rule.

Simmesport, La.

*We are well aware of the fact as stated by Dr. Parker, and when we mentioned his name in the connection we did not have the Haynes-Kelly case in mind. We had in mind B. F. Haynes' course as editor of the Tennessee Methodist in contending for the election of Bishops for a limited term of years; and, if we are not mistaken, for an elective presiding eldership.

"The American Minutes, (published a few months after the Baltimore General Conference) declared that, 'following the counsels of Mr. John Wesley, who recommended the Episcopal mode of Church government,' the Conference had formed 'an Episcopal Church.'"—Stevens' History of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Vol. ii., page 190.

The General Conference alluded to was the Christmas Conference of 1874, which organized the Church, under the direction of Thomas Coke, who had been set apart "for the Episcopal Office" by Mr. Wesley, who, "having delivered him (Dr. Coke) letters of [illegible] [illegible] Asbury was [illegible] for the [illegible] Episcopal Office [illegible] it appears that the Episcopacy [illegible] antedated the organization of the Church [illegible] called a [illegible] Church [illegible] at the [illegible] of a bare [illegible].

It is probably true that [illegible] Dr. [illegible] the "High Church" idea of [illegible] it was during the General [illegible] but the law was [illegible] tained. It was the [illegible] Dr. [illegible] action. He was sustained by his [illegible] McKendree, and the stand taken by them resulted in suspending for four years the operation of the law making presiding elders elective, and finally in repealing the law altogether, after which Dr. Soule was again elected Bishop and was ordained.

THE CHURCH AND THE TOBACCO HABIT.

BY REV. B. G. LOWREY.

There have been three events within the last three years in Louisiana that mark stages in the overthrow of the tobacco habit. (1.) The faculty and student-body of the Southwest Louisiana Industrial Institute at Lafayette some two years ago brought their tobacco together and publicly made a bonfire of it, because it hindered the cultivation of the highest type of intellectual and social manhood. (2.) Just this year the State University at Baton Rouge put the ban on cigarette-smoking among the students of that institution. (3.) The last session of the Louisiana Legislature passed a law making it a crime to give or sell tobacco or cigarette papers in any form to minors.

This is all encouraging, and only has one regretable phase, i. e., the men of the world have been wiser in their generation than the children of light; the State has led the Church. The followers of Jesus Christ are chewing and smoking, and the worldly scientists who appeal to nothing higher than the intellect are outlawing the same repulsive habit. What a picture! This seems to be one case where civilization is following the State school and the Legislature rather than the gospel, reversing the things that ought to be.

Why is such the case? As mortifying as the confession is, the blame lies primarily with our pastors. Their example and influence would put an end to the tobacco-using habit among our people in twelve months, but we seem determined to have the issue forced on us by the laity and the world. Our Methodist Church members are now tired of and are fast becoming intolerant of a tobacco-using ministry. Just recently a Methodist steward who would [illegible] without [illegible] a cigar [illegible] the writer [illegible] with [illegible] tobacco question. I had already [illegible] preacher. That [illegible] that went up from the women of the [illegible] Conference along with the others of lesser importance [illegible] the last session of our General Conference shows what has already been decreed by our church membership with reference to tobacco-using among our preachers.

There is no choice left in the matter if we would hold the respect of the world. We know of at least one place now in Louisiana where the M. [illegible] Church [illegible] abstaining [illegible] law passed [illegible] that [illegible] years [illegible] getting [illegible] Southern Meth[illegible] Methodist Episcopal [illegible] [illegible] tobacco [illegible] which was [illegible] both our [illegible] often, as the advice is not taken by many of our preachers who still come into our homes chewing and smoking, thus nullifying the teachings of our parents to their children at this point. As a Church, we need to take positive ground. Why not begin by requiring those who would be our spiritual guides to "practice abstinence" from the use of tobacco? What say the members of the coming session of our Annual Conference, to some move looking to this end?

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST HISTORY.

BY PROF. R. S. RICKETTS.

Many readers of the ADVOCATE will be interested to know that the First and Second Volumes of "Methodism in Mississippi," by Rev. John G. Jones, have recently been issued from the press of our Publishing House at Nashville. The author of this book was at infinite pains to collect the material for it, and Mississippi Methodists are his debtors for a mass of information that will be more and more appreciated as the years go by.

It is not an easy task for one to write the history of his own times. Aside from the personal element involved, especially when the writer was himself prominent as an actor in the events he relates, it is extremely difficult to keep the con[illegible] and fix the relative importance of the events themselves. The writer of such a history [illegible] wisely confine himself to a mere statement of facts. Some events must be viewed in the perspective to have full historic value, and some facts, particularly those relating to persons, need to be kept in cold storage a while before they assume their proper proportions. Notwithstanding these limitations, however, the history as far as completed is well worth reading, both for the facts it records and for the inspiration it may furnish for a farther study of the men and the times of which it treats.

It is only a little while since Mississippians [illegible] to realize that their State has a history. In the making of this history and in developing the character of the ante-bellum Mississippian, no influence was more potent than that of the Methodist Church. It may be that the first Protestant religious service held in the country which now constitutes the State of Mississippi was conducted by a Baptist-Congregational minister. But it is certainly a fact that the first organized movement for the evangelization of what was then called "the Natchez Country" was set on foot by the Methodist Church. Mississippi became a territory in March, 1798. On January 1, 1799, the South Carolina Conference met at Charleston, and at that Conference Tobias Gib-

The [illegible] the History [illegible] treat [illegible] the work [illegible]

[illegible] at the [illegible] of Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana. [illegible] establish here [illegible] itself upon a European [illegible] more than a century [illegible] In [illegible] chapters [illegible] author contributes some valuable aid to the study of this subject.

No more complex or difficult conditions confronted the Church of Christ anywhere in America than Protestantism encountered in Mississippi territory. Indeed, the historian and sociologist, no less than the writer of romance, will find in these conditions and in the outcome of the struggle a field of research rich in material that has yet been hardly touched. Gayarre, Cable and others have prospected here and there, but the mine itself has not yet been opened. In recent American romantic literature praise has been given to the Jesuit missionaries who from time to time exiled themselves in order to evangelize the Indian tribes of eastern Canada and the country lying about the great lakes. Of equal value to romance as well as to history are the lives of those pioneer itinerants who came, under circumstances no less trying, to preach the gospel in the territory of Mississippi. We owe it to ourselves and to those who follow us that the part our Church played in the winning of the southwest should not be forgotten or underestimated. We cannot afford to let "Possum Jone" represent the Protestant ministry of the time, even in fiction.

The reader of these volumes, despite their profusion of detail, will come upon some thrilling scenes and incidents, and will make or renew acquaintance with some notable characters, for there were giants in those days. It is worth while to know something of Tobias Gibson, the first Methodist missionary to this country. No less interesting will be the account given of Elisha Bowman's mission to New Orleans in 1807 and its result; of Learner Blackman, the chaplain of Old Hickory's Army in the expedition against the Indians in 1813; of William Winans, the chief organizer of our Church work in Mississippi, the great preacher who in logical power was often compared not unfavorably with John C. Calhoun; of Lewis Hobbs, the "weeping prophet;" of Lorenzo Dow, the meteor of American Methodism, and Peggy Dow, his wife; of John C. Burruss, the accomplished scholar and gentleman; of B. M. Drake, clarum et venerabile nomen; of Thomas Griffin, the "son of thunder;" of Richmond Nolley, who was frozen to death as he knelt alone and lost in the swamps of Louisiana, and of dear old Uncle Tomy Clinton, whose small body held a right royal soul and who preserved through all the dangers and privations of a pioneer preacher's life a heart like that of a little child. And there are others, laymen and preachers, whose lives and characters, no less interesting, will be more fully brought out in Volume Three, now in press.

SOMETHING NEW.

I have just come into possession of a bit of information that I thought might be interesting to some of the ADVOCATE readers, and to yourself as well, Doctor. I quote the following from the editorial page of The Watchman of Oct. 21, Atlanta, Ga.:

"A few years ago a little band of Congregational Methodists were ridiculed for their arguments in favor of a democratic or congregational form of government in Methodism, in keeping with Scriptural ideals and American principles. But this little flock is rapidly taking its place among the great religious forces of the world, and its influence is being felt strongly in the older bodies. In fact, so rapid has been its advancement for the past few months, it has attracted favorable notice from the leaders of Episcopal Methodism, who are seriously considering the question of coming into the Congregational Methodist Church. * * * That the Episcopacy, like European monarchy, is trembling before its impending doom, which it can no longer ignore, is a clearly patent fact."

Did you know that, Doctor? I have been under the impression all these years that the most reliable and the most stable thing in all this civilized land was Methodism, and now to my utter astonishment I learn [illegible] that it is tottering [illegible] almost to its fall.

But the greatest surprise of it all is that the "leaders in Episcopal Methodism" are right on the verge of dumping over into this little congregational corner. Now, Doctor, we look upon you as being among the leaders of Methodism, and I am anxious to know when you contemplate deserting us. When is this great Methodist landslide going to take place, any how?

Seriously now, how can a man who even pretends to be any sort of a Christian, to say nothing of being a preacher and a leader of his flock, as is the editor of the Watchman, publish such false and groundless statements in a religious paper?

Surely, if a modern "Ananias Club" was formed, and qualified subjects enlisted, its members they could safely claim a sufficient clerical membership to fill the office of chaplain.

AN APPEAL.

To the Ministers of the Louisiana Conference:

Dear Brethren: Press the claim for Conference Claimants, and, if possible, bring up the assessment in full. This is imperative this year as the rent from Bynum Farm will fall far below what was appropriated from that source last year. Unless there is an urgent appeal and persistent effort to collect the assessment the meager appropriations paid our worthy veterans and the widows and orphans of those who died on the firing line, will have to be reduced very largely.

You would not eat unseasoned food would you? It takes salt to give zest to what is eaten. And so coffee too may be seasoned, all its good qualities and flavor brought out. The Dutch of Holland had the secret of seasoning coffee for more than a hundred years. The French and the French-speaking people of New Orleans now have it. That is why French coffee and New Orleans coffee are famous the world over. That is why

REVIVAL AT LOUISIANA AVENUE.

Rev. H. R. Singleton and Mr. E. N. Nibergall assisted the pastor in the revival services at the Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans. The meeting lasted for ten days. All of the services were well attended and a most splendid work was done in the way of reviving the Church membership, and in awakening a larger interest in Church life and Church work.

The people were delighted with the gospel preaching of Brother Singleton. His sermons were of a high order. Because of his pleasing manner, and the influence of his earnest appeals [illegible] Christ's service he very much endeared himself to the people. The singing of Brother Nibergall added greatly to the success of the meeting. He knows how to sing and get other people to sing.

The meeting has closed, but we believe that the influence of it shall last for a long while in the lives of those who joined the Church during the meeting and in the lives of the many who [illegible]

FINE REPORT FROM BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Mrs. Lillie H. Wimberly, District Secretary of the Brookhaven District, sends us a fine report of work accomplished on her District. We hope the Secretaries of the other Districts will follow her good example and let us hear of the progress they are making. Our ADVOCATE column was undertaken for the purpose of reporting the good news from our missionary workers at home as well as in the foreign fields.

CLARA B. DRAKE.

Dear Sister Drake: Since I was elected District Secretary in March, I have done what I could for the work. I have written seventy-nine letters and twenty-six postals to our pastors and workers. I have visited the auxiliaries of Brookhaven, Hazlehurst and Crystal Springs and one Church where there is no auxiliary. I talked to the congregation, but the ladies were not ready at that time to organize.

We had a good meeting at Brookhaven. Miss Anderson was with me and all the ladies were delighted to see and hear our returned missionary and to learn more about China.

We had quite an enthusiastic time at Hazlehurst; thirty-five were present and we secured five new names for our roll. We also had the privilege of having our Conference President with us and this added greatly to our profit. I tried to tell them some things about our Board Meeting, which I had enjoyed attending, and they were very cordial in their treatment of their new District Secretary.

At Crystal Springs, the summer rain interfered somewhat with our meeting; but I believe it was enjoyed by all who were present.

Sept. 22 and 23 we had our District Conference in connection with the Home Mission Society at Silver Creek. We had a good meeting with thirty delegates, our presiding elder and six pastors, besides Brother Williams from our Orphans' Home. Brother Williams gave us a splendid talk, and I think it will bear fruit for the Orphanage.

Brother Bradley, the pastor, preached the first night; Brother Sullivan, of McComb City, the second, and Brother Thompson, the third. All of these brethren gave us splendid sermons, much enjoyed, which will prove profitable to us.

We had some very fine papers read, notably one by Sister Galloway, of Magnolia, on Tithing.

While there, I had promises from the ladies of Silver Creek and Columbia to try to organize at once W. F. M. auxiliaries. Brother Bradley promised to help the ladies of Silver Creek. Our meeting was much enjoyed and I hope will prove beneficial to our work.

DISTRICT MEETING.

The District Meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Jackson District will convene at Mount Olive on Tuesday, Nov. 17, 1908, at 8 p.m., and continue through the 18th and 19th. It is earnestly desired that every auxiliary in the district be represented. Please send names of delegates and visitors to Mrs. J. R. Ellis, Mount Olive, Miss., on or before the 10th of November. MRS. J. E. L. FERGUSON,
District Secretary.

NOTE FROM REV. P. D. HARDIN.

I have been transferred to the West Texas Conference and stationed at West End, San Antonio. Rev. J. W. McLaurin will be in charge here until Conference. Any communications in regard to the approaching Conference session should be addressed to him, or to Mr. N. A. Mott, chairman of the Entertainment Committee. I leave the work well in hand, and the Conference will be entertained royally. It is the trial of my life to leave my dear friends and brethren of Mississippi, but I think it is best. God is leading, and I follow gladly. Will all who read this offer a prayer for me and mine? God bless you, my dear brethren.

PAUL D. HARDIN.

Yazoo City, Miss.

FROM FAYETTE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Since my letter appeared in the ADVOCATE last week, we have received $10 from Rev. J. A. B. Jones on the building fund for Bell Grove Church. This makes a total of $87, received from all outside sources for this purpose. The church is now completed and paid for. It will have to be painted, which we expect to do before Conference. The building will be formally dedicated on the fourth Sunday in this month (November) at 11 a.m. All former pastors are hereby cordially invited to be present.

A MISSION ROMANCE.

"Is it worth our while to hold the meeting to-night, do you think?" asked a Londoner of his friend, one raw December night in 1856.

"Perhaps not," answered the other; "but I do not like to shirk my work, and as it was announced, some one might come."

"Come on, then," said the first speaker. "I suppose we can stand it."

That night was as black as ink, and the rain poured in torrents, but the meeting of the English Missionary Society for the Propagation of the Gospel was held, in spite of the elements, in a bright-lighted chapel in Convent Garden. A gentlemen passing by took refuge from the storm, and made up half the audience that listened to a powerful plea for the North American Indians in British Columbia.

"Work thrown away!" grumbled the Londoner, as they made their way back to Regent Square.

"Who knows?" replied the missionary. "It was God's Word and we are told that it shall not fall on the ground unheeded."

Was it work thrown away?

The passer-by, who stopped in by accident, tossed on his couch all night, thinking of the horrors of heathenism, all of which he had heard that night for the first time. In a month he had sold out his business, and was on his way to mission work among the British Columbian Indians, under the auspices of the Church Missionary Society.

About thirty-five years afterward we found him, surrounded by "his children," as he loves to call them, the center and head of the model mission station of the northwest coast, an Arcadian village of civilized Indians. It is the romance of missions.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.
Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.
Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.
Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.
Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.
Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.
Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.
Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.
Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.
Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.
Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.
Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.
Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study: Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.
Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

[illegible] adopted by the Conference.

There are two ways in which it is possible to adhere to the requirement of the petition [illegible] that these additional statistical reports which in no way change the present method of Statistical Tables for the Pastoral Charges. The first plan is to have statistical space for each society in a pastoral charge in which to report the various items corresponding to the space for the itemized reports for the pastor's reports in each presiding elder's district. In the last issue of the Minutes there are 138 Charges reporting. Of this number, 41 are Stations, the reports from which would be unnecessary to duplicate in the new tables. There are 399 societies in the Conference. This would mean that there would be 358 individual churches reporting, and for which three sets of tables will have to be added to the Minutes besides the one set we now already have. The additional cost for these tables will be approximately $225. The Statistical Tables are the most costly feature in the publication of the Minutes, and the tables in the last issue of the Minutes cost about $100. The above estimate of the additional cost is based on the tables at a cost of $75 per set.

The other way in which we might meet the requirement of the petition is by reducing the reports to the more important items: Church Membership, Value of House of Worship, Indebtedness, Expended on Church Property, Insurance Carried, Premiums Paid, Loss Collected, Senior League Members, Junior League Members, Total League Members, Total Raised by Leagues, Sunday School Scholars, Officers and Teachers, Total Raised by Sunday School, Members Woman's Foreign Mission Society, Amount Raised, Members Woman's Home Mission Society, Amount Raised, Amount Paid Presiding Elders, Amount Paid Preacher in Charge, Amount Paid Conference Collections, Amount Paid Other Objects not Elsewhere Reported, Total Amount Raised by Church. Thus reducing the items to about twenty-three, for which columns will be provided. This will about double the statistical matter for publication in the Minutes, and will cost approximately $100 additional.

How are we to meet this additional cost? If we proceed by placing an additional assessment on the Conference, it will mean that our assessment for Minutes will be about $700 in order to raise the amount necessary to meet the cost in the first instance, and about $550 to meet the [illegible]

In this connection, I would like to suggest that the brethren endeavor to bring up their collection for the Minutes. The cost for publication is ever on the increase. Paper is higher, type costs more, and the bids for the work are constantly becoming higher; it is difficult to secure advertisements, and we are almost wholly dependent on the assessments to meet the cost of publication. This is a hard year, but the assessment for each charge is small. Make it in full, if possible.

In the psalm of life, how like some inexpressibly sweet strain is an association with some friend or loved one—such was that part of our life interwoven with that of Mr. Tucker, who died in September, 1908.

Mr. Tucker was reared near Byhalia, and the fine old colonial mansion known as his home was a fountain-head for royal entertainment and truly Southern hospitality; he was a graduate of Oxford University, a valiant soldier in the Confederacy, and a splendid citizen of Marshall County. His integrity of soul, love of truth and justice, devotion to home and country and intellectual endowment made a deep impression on his associates. FOR INKY FINGERS.

A girl I know has made a wonderful discovery, which she thinks all other schoolboys and schoolgirls should know, too.

"It's so needful, mamma," she says. "All boys and girls get ink on their fingers, you know."

"Surely they do, and on their clothes as well," said her mother.

"I can't get the spots out of my clothes, but I'm sorry when they get there," responded the girl. "I try very hard not to. But I can get the ink spots off my fingers. See!"

She dipped her fingers into water, and while they were wet, she took a match out of the match safe and rubbed the sulphur end well over her ink spots. One after another the spots disappeared, leaving a row of white fingers where had been a row of inky black ones.

"There," said the girl after she had finished. "Isn't that good? I read that in a housekeeping paper, and I never knew they were any good before. I clean my fingers that way every morning now; its just splendid!"

So some other boys and girls might try Alice's cure for inky fingers.—Harper's Round Table.

TWO PERFORMING SEALS.

Toby's greatest trick was to sit in a chair and play the banjo. He would have a little cap on his head, a pair of spectacles on his funny little nose, and a large piece of music on the music stand. Then he would play the "Sea Lions' Polka"—that is to say, the band in the orchestra would really play the tune, but one of the seal's flippers would be tied to the banjo strings and these strings Toby would pull for all he was worth. The harder and quicker he pulled, the bigger was the piece of fish he would get at the end of his performance. Whether he realized this I cannot say, but he probably did, judging from his actions; he certainly knew when his trainer was pleased with him and did his very best. This giving or refusing of fish is the only way in which seals and sea lions can be punished, except perhaps a light touch from a cane, and even that has to be given carefully. A blow—sometimes even a light one—will bruise the thick layer of fat or "blubber" with which their bodies are covered; and these bruises have been known to eventually cause the animal's death.

But since seeing Toby, I have seen a sea lion that does even more wonderful things than Toby did. This is Wilmer, in the Barnum and Bailey Circus, the only sea lion in the world that can ride horseback. It is truly marvelous to see this animal climb up a ladder and mount his horse just as easily as though it were natural to him. And not only mount it, but keep his seat without the slightest danger of falling off or even slipping from the saddle.

Round and round the ring he goes in an easy canter, and when his trainer, Captain Winston, who spent years to accomplish this, throws him a large ball he catches it, balances it on his nose, and still continues his ride, poising himself and the ball in the most wonderful manner. Only once have I seen him drop the ball, and that was when the horse stumbled a little, which naturally caused him to lose his balance.—Ellen Velvin, in Wild Animal Celebrities.

LITTLE BOY WHO TRIED TO BE BRAVE.

One night the cow was lost. She was a big cow, too; and that is why it seems strange she was hard to find. All day the good old bossy had wondered up and down the lane, part of the time eating grass, part of the time resting by the fence. No one saw her go away; yet at five o'clock she was not to be found.

If the cow had possessed wings, she might have escaped into the air without being seen. Such a thing would have been possible if the little boy, and every one else in the village had been looking [illegible] toward the sky; but the cow had no wings [illegible] four strong feet, on which she [illegible] down the road past many a neighbor's [illegible]. It was dark when the biggest [illegible] on the edge of Peter Brown's woods.

The little boy held the lantern while [illegible] next to the biggest brother did the milking. There were three of these big brothers, and that night they were all going to the debating society at the Four Corners. The [illegible] most made them late. The boys had to hurry so fast they scarcely had time [illegible] good-by, and not one [illegible] baby.

It was her bedtime, and the little boy was [illegible] ing off her shoes and stockings when mother exclaimed: "Why, we forgot all about sending Baby Evans' milk!"

Little boy straightway looked solemn. Baby Evans had been ill, and was a wee, delicate infant: all skin and bones. The doctor said she mustn't be neglected for an hour.

"I wonder," mother continued, "I wonder if we have a brave little man in the house who will take the milk?"

Little boy swallowed hard, but he said: "Yes, mother, I will go!"

It was three blocks from the little boy's home to Mrs. Evans' corner; but there was a vacant house to be passed, and you must remember it was dark.

"I will put up all the curtains," said mother, "and baby and I will sit by the window and watch for you."

So the little boy started with the milk. He really felt brave before he left his mother; but the minute he passed his own gate and walked forth under the dark trees he was dreadfully scared. Three blocks to go, and the little boy was alone on the street at night for the first time. Oh, he was afraid! Every sound and every shadow made him jump; yet Baby Evans must have her milk, and mother had called him her brave little man!

The boy tried to be brave. He lifted his head and thought he heard a little child sobbing, and there, sure enough, was Jimmy Baker, sitting on the edge of the sidewalk.

"What, what's the matter?" asked the little boy.

"Fraid—fraid to—to go home in the dark!"

"Why, come along with me! I'll take care of you!" offered the little boy, taking Jimmy's small wet hand. The hand was wet with tears. Jimmy was only four and a half years old, and it was dark.

"Why, a tiny chap like you ought to be in bed by this time," suggested little boy, in grown-up tones. "How did you happen to be out so late?"

"I—I stayed over to—to John's to supper," Jimmy explained. "My—my m-mother said I could—an' after supper, John's mother went away and told me to go straight home, so my mother wouldn't worry; but—boo-hoo-o! John and I played on the horse blocks until all at once it was dark."

"Well, there, there, don't cry!" comforted little boy. "You see I found you, and so you are all right. I'm going to be six years old my next birthday, and you may come to my party."

Next thing little boy knew he and Jimmy had passed the vacant house. They did it without knowing it. This made little boy feel so brave he told Jimmy he would go all the way home with him. Jimmy lived in the house next to Mrs. Evans' cottage.

"You dear boy!" exclaimed Mrs. Evans. "I don't know what I would have done if you hadn't brought the milk. I wondered why it didn't come, but I'm alone with baby, so could neither go over to your house nor send any one. She is unusually fretful to-night. You tell your mother she should be proud of her brave boy."

Syracuse University has by far the greatest registration in its history—about 1,400 in the College proper—(more students in liberal arts than in any other two universities in the State). The Smith College of Applied Science shares in the general gain. The figures justify Dr. Day's habit of optimism concerning the development of this great institution.

Dr. Harris wires from Evanston that Northwestern University has a "largely increased entering class. Attendance greatest in history. Probable university gain, 300." We may give to the winds the fear that Chicago might not be large enough to accommodate two successful universities.

Dr. Welch has to use the word "increase" three times to report the gains at Ohio Wesleyan. There are more freshmen by 30, more new matriculates by 10, more re-enrollment by 60. This is healthy growth.

Dr. Huntington from Boston University in a city that accommodates half a dozen colleges, tells the same tale of entering classes in three departments greater than last year.

About 140 freshmen are registered at Dickinson. The Woman's College of Baltimore opens with full classrooms. Illinois Woman's College at Jacksonville has thirty students more than last year. Beyond the Mississippi, as far as we have learned, the tide flows in the same direction.—Selected.

Rev. J. W. Boswell, D.D., has been re-elected editor of this paper. The Publishing Committee passed resolutions commendatory of the work of the editor and the business manager. Rev. H. Whitehead will continue to act as assistant editor for another year. A report from the Publishing Committee will appear next week. The Publishing Committee met in the ADVOCATE Office Nov. 10th, with all present except Dr. Sullivan, who met with an accident several weeks ago, and was unable to leave his home.

CORRUPTING THE WORD OF GOD.

St. Paul said: "We are not of them which corrupt the Word of God." The word "corrupt," we are told in the original, signifies "to huckster." By huckster we understand one who peddles goods, particularly perishable goods, from house to house. As first used it was not altogether an honorable designation, but applied to one who was disposed to cheat his customers. He would adulterate his wines with water, and resort to tricks in pursuing his trade. St. Paul's meaning, therefore, is evident. He was not among those who resorted to tricks in preaching the gospel, or adulterated the Word to make it popular or palatable to the depraved tastes of men.

There must have been some men in St. Paul's day who were guilty of the sin of gospel huckstering—men of whom he was ashamed. There are plenty such men to-day. We dislike to say so, but truth compels it, if we characterize them at all. Among them we place that class of men who resort to all sorts of tricks to get a hearing, and when they secure it, fail to deliver "the whole counsel of God." Of these men it may be said they preach the truth, but fall short of preaching all the truth. To illustrate: We once attended a long series of services conducted by a man of talent and great reputation. He was a forcible man, and very successful after his style. He belonged to an orthodox Church, and, as far as we know, he was sound in his creed. But during the time we attended his meetings he never once mentioned the essential principles of the gospel. He dealt in glittering generalities—was always attractive, but his converts were not grounded in the truth. He was a gospel huckster. If he did not adulterate the Word, he kept back part of the truth. Such men are unfaithful to their Lord.

There is some excuse for the man who preaches his creed, even though in some particulars it may be erroneous, provided he honestly believes it is scriptural. We can respect such a man because he has convictions and dares maintain them. But the man who pretends to plant himself on sound doctrine, and travels from place to place "making gain of godliness," or who for the sake of counting converts will shade the conditions of salvation, or lower the plane of Christian living in order to be popular with those "who have a name to live while they are dead," is unworthy of confidence or respect. All such are "false apostles"—really "no apostles at all," but "deceitful workers"—pretending to be "workmen" for the Lord, while really seeking their own gain.

It is astounding in view of the solemnity of the work, the responsibility one assumes when he enters the ministry, and the awful judgment to which he is tending, that a man will so far forget himself and his calling as to get down to the level of a gospel huckster for the sake of worldly gain. But as long as Satan is able to "transform himself into an angel of light" we may expect him to tempt and deceive and ruin all who will listen to his seductive suggestions.

If every Church would abide the instruction of St. John fewer gospel hucksters would trouble us. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world."

UNEMPLOYED OLD AGE.

The greatest misfortune that can befall a popular preacher is to grow gray and face an "unemployed old age." Not that age is dishonorable, or in anywise wrong in itself, but because in the estimation of the people a gray-haired preacher is unfitted for popular churches. The people fix a "dead-line," a kind of movable one—in some cases fixing it at about fifty, in others at about fifty-five—never in any case allowing a man to get beyond sixty. We do not miss the truth far when we say that a man, bright and useful at forty, and in demand by many churches, is neither in demand nor wholly acceptable when he reaches fifty-five, the period when he is capable of his best work. If there is an exception it will be found in the fact that the man is preserved physically as well as mentally. It is possible that his personal appearance will count for more than his mental equipment. People will forgive a young man for being ugly if he is smart. But an ugly old man will not be tolerated.

It is noticeable that men who reach high places never "take the back track," or go around the circle twice, but that, long before they have spent their force, begin to take lower seats, and for no other reason than because they have committed the "unpardonable sin of growing old." The result is some quit the pastorate and go into other fields; some lose their energy, and some get sour and disagreeable. There is no good reason why any man should do any one of these things. The high places may not be open to him as of old, but there are plenty of other places where he would be acceptable and useful. Why should a good man, desirous of saving souls and building up the Church decline to serve a small town, or a good country charge, or, what amounts to the same thing, complain that he is undervalued when appointed to a work of what he is pleased to term "a lower grade" than he has been accustomed to receiving? Old preachers identified with independent or congregational churches, and dependent on a special call, have reason to feel that they are neglected or not properly appreciated when no call comes to them. "Unemployed old age" to one in good health who has led an active life is well calculated to produce melancholy. We could scarcely blame him for complaining. But there need be no dread of "unemployed old age" in our Methodist itinerancy so long as a man is in good health and efficient. Scores of men among us are active and doing good work who are far beyond the dead-line in age. The majority of these men are only up to the average in point of talent, and have never filled anything in the way of an appointment above an average station or circuit. But they have been contented and happy and useful—and they are still so, notwithstanding the grade of appointments they now receive is not as high as it was in their stronger days.

High grade men, who for twenty-five or thirty years have been in demand for rich and popular churches, now being no longer sought after by reason of age, ought to esteem it both an honor and a privilege to hold their places in the ranks, and to go where souls are as precious as in the cities, and where the gospel is not only as much needed but as much appreciated. They should comfort themselves with the reflection that, in addition to age and experience, they bring to these smaller charges a profound knowledge of the Holy Scriptures and a burning zeal for souls. And if they are live men, as they invariably profess to be, the people will be glad and rejoice at their coming.

METHODISTS IN THE WORLD.

A friend has forwarded us a pamphlet with the title, "The Presbyterian Church," by Rev. John W. Primrose, D.D. The pamphlet is issued by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va. Dr. Primrose, in giving the statistics of "the leading Protestant Churches throughout the world," sets them forth in the following order:

Presbyterians	8,804,546
Methodists	5,840,311
Baptists	3,313,026

Are the above figures correct? Our friend would like to know. We have no disposition to dispute Dr. Primrose's figures. He may have sources of information with which we are unacquainted. But the new Werner Edition of Encyclopedia Britannica gives the number of Presbyterians for 1890 as 27,043 ministers, and 4,705,210 communicants. Our Baptist brethren can speak for themselves, though we feel sure they are underestimated. As to Methodists, according to sources of information at hand, viz.: Dr. Ivey's Methodist Hand-Book, and the Minutes of Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the figures are as follows, including preachers, traveling and local, and lay-members:

Methodist Episcopal (North)	3,336,408
Methodist Episcopal Church, South	1,725,497
Other Methodists in the United States	1,930,251
Methodists in Europe and elsewhere	1,470,540
Total throughout the world	8,477,696

The difference between Dr. Primrose's figures and the official figures of the various bodies of Methodists is 2,628,385. He got his information from the wrong source, else from "away back yonder."

GIVING DOWN IN GEORGIA.

The Methodists and Baptists of Georgia are a giving people. They grow constantly in the grace of liberality.

For the last fiscal year the 237,000 Georgia Baptists gave to Home and Foreign Missions $101,266. The 193,000 Southern Methodists gave to Home and Foreign Missions, including Church Extension, which is Home Mission work, $108,371. Besides this, the women of the two Georgia Conferences gave to the foreign work $37,070. The women of the Home Mission Society of Georgia doubtless did quite as much as their sisters, but their work is not reported separately in the Minutes. What the Baptist women of Georgia are doing, we do not know. We should be glad to be informed.

It is not true that the churches have ceased to be courteous to strangers, or to regard the poor. A certain preacher, desiring to test this matter for himself, disguised as a poor man in old, threadbare clothes, and visited nine congregations. In eight of these congregations he was greeted as cordially as one could desire. In one only was there lack of courtesy. In that one the pastor was extremely cold.

PERSONALS.

A note from Rev. G. W. Hively requests his address changed from Hermitage, Ark., to Hachita, N. M., from which we infer he has transferred to the New Mexico Conference.

Rev. James Porter, Arkabutla, Miss., never forgets the ADVOCATE. He has rendered it service off and on during the year, and tells us that he has "more subscriptions promised," which he hopes to send soon.

We thank our good friend and Sister, Mrs. E. C. Sullivan, the helpmeet of her husband in church work, for kind words in regard to our ADVOCATE. We are happy to be assured that our feeble efforts are appreciated.

Our Louisiana Missionary Evangelist finds that, while on many works the prospects for good Conference collections are brightening, yet the salaries of the presiding elders and pastors are nearly everywhere very much behind.

Our office was honored last week by a visit from Rev. W. J. Callahan, of the "Southern Methodist Mission," Hiroshima, Japan. He was en route to Georgia, where he will meet the South Georgia Conference, of which he is a member.

Dr. T. C. Wier has sent us an account of the dedication of the Prairie Church, Prairie, Miss., the Church built by our glorified Brother Porter, which he regarded as the "crowning work of his life." The account will appear in our next issue.

Our friend and brother, Dr. R. W. Jones, of Laurel, Miss., has been elected President and Bishop Galloway Vice-President of the Department of Archives and History of Mississippi. Dr. Jones succeeds the late General Stephen D. Lee.

Rev. Dr. W. E. C. Hunnicutt is evidently renewing his youth—doing the work of pastor at Edwards, (Mississippi Conference) part of which work is looking after the interests of the ADVOCATE. He sends us a long list of subscribers with the money. We thank him very much.

A note from Rev. John A. Randolph, Chaplain, writing for himself and his family from faraway Montana, says: "We are all grieved by the death of our beloved [illegible] We [illegible] him for his own sake [illegible] sified by the high regard [illegible] daughter, Mrs. [illegible]

We had the pleasure [illegible] ing in our office Dr. [illegible] Chunky, Miss., a great [illegible] a lover of our Advocate [illegible] the town. The Dr. was in the city with his little child who is under treatment at one of the private infirmaries. He reported the little one as rapidly improving, which we were glad to hear. We thank him for [illegible] in his round of calls.

We learn from a reliable source that Rev. J. B. Williams [illegible] the Grand Cane Charge. [illegible] are all with him in his efforts [illegible] cause of the Master. Dr. Sawyer [illegible] preaching three sermons last Sunday [illegible] sixteen miles to and back from Chester, an [illegible] appointment, and addressing very large congregations morning and night at Grand Cane. The results were gratifying, and Brother Williams will be able to report a large increase in the Conference Collections over last year.

Rev. D. E. Kelly, of [illegible] Chunky, Miss., sent us a few days since a club of forty-four subscribers. This is the largest [illegible] that has been sent in at any one time this year. We have been expecting something of the kind, for this harmonizes with something Brother Kelly has done in the past. We wrote Brother Kelly some days ago to tell our readers how he succeeds in securing subscribers. Instead of giving us the methods of his work, he simply illustrates by a long list. He succeeds by "main strength and awkwardness," or, "being crafty, he catches with guile." No matter so he strings the fish.

The Army and Navy Register, published at Washington, D. C., in its issue of Oct. 17, had the following editorial note: "Chaplain John A. Randolph, Sixth Infantry, on duty at Fort William Henry Harrison, Montana, will be promoted to the grade of Major in his corps. It has been decided by the War Department that the record of Chaplain Randolph possesses the conspicuous characteristics which are by statute made a qualification of promotion in the corps of chaplains." This bit of information will be gladly received in the North Mississippi Conference to which Brother Randolph belongs, and where he has many warm friends.

Rev. A. G. Shankle, of Ruston, informs us of the serious illness, and perhaps the end, of R. M. Blocker, once a member of the Louisiana Conference. In his letter, written Nov. 7, he says the unfortunate man "will hardly live another twenty-four hours." He also makes an appeal in behalf of Mrs. Blocker and her three small children, who are utterly destitute—in absolute need. Brother Shankle is soliciting for their welfare. Any contributions in their behalf may be safely sent to Rev. A. G. Shankle, who will see that the gifts are properly bestowed. "The case is a sad one." Mrs. Blocker is a member of our Church at Ruston.

Rev. H. H. Smith, of Ashland, Va., a member of the Virginia Conference, has devised a Filing Case, especially for the classification and preservation of matter for scrap use. The case consists of three large wallets 5x8½ inches, each wallet having thirty-five pockets—will hold several thousand clippings, all properly indexed. There are also twelve pockets not indexed to be used as the preacher may desire. Such a filing case will be a great help to the preacher who desires to [illegible] systematize his work, and have such material [illegible] at hand. All he has to do is to make a [illegible] clipping [illegible] a paragraph or an illustration [illegible] put it away in the proper pocket for [illegible] reference.

[illegible] death of Mr. E. H. Keller, of New Orleans, [illegible] one of [illegible] citizens, but the [illegible] consistent [illegible] when a [illegible] a liv[illegible] perseverance and close ap[illegible] great [illegible] of New [illegible] his obliga[illegible] Methodist Episco[illegible] and for many years was an ardent supporter. He was liberal with his means, and was known as a philanthropist. Every worthy object of a public character had his encouragement and help. The world, perhaps, will never know the extent of his charities. Honor to his memory!

The Rev. W. J. Dawson, one of the noted preachers of London, is at this time conducting a series of meetings at Rayne Memorial Church in this city. He will continue the services until the 22d of this month. Dr. Dawson is a man of great reputation, and has been remarkably successful in his work. Though past middle life, he has but lately entered the field as an evangelist. Heretofore he has been known as a poet, critic, essayist, writer of fiction, and great preacher. We had the pleasure of hearing him last Monday evening. The sermon was short, sparkling, evangelical, and evinced great concern for the souls of men. To his credit, be it said, he was neither cranky nor sensational, and, with all his learning, there was nothing like pedantry in his speech. May many jewels be added to his crown in this great city.

JAMES VIVIAN, son of Robt. and Allie Harris, was born Sept. 4, 1905, and OAKLEY WARD, son of Thomas and Nancy [illegible], was born Sept. 14, 1907, and both of these little boys leaped, April 30, 1908, from the arms of fathers and mothers to him who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, look through your tears to the little beckoning hands, but hark! Jesus said, "I go to prepare a place for you." So dry your tears, and make haste to get ready for the time of the meeting with little J. V. and O. W., is nearer to-day than when they left. May God help each one to be ready, and may his Holy Spirit comfort the bereaved hearts. W. R. JONES.

Mr. HEZEKIAH W. BARLOW was born March 13, 1859, and departed this life, July 8, 1908; aged 49 years, three months and twenty-six days. He leaves a wife and four children, father, mother, brothers and sister, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. Brother "Hez" joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite a young man and was honored with the office of a steward which he filled faithfully for nine years. The last time that he met us at the house of God we gave opportunity for voluntary prayers and he was the first to lead. He was a man with a word for everybody; one could not stay with him and have "blue Monday." His death was very sudden; God called and he is gone. Loved ones weep not, but be ready for the coming of the Lord.

M. R. JONES, P. C.

Mrs. MARGARET AINSWORTH was born Oct. 14, 1841, and departed this life, May 23, 1908. She joined the M. E. Church, South in early life, and seemed to have lived a consistent life till it ended here below, and we think Aunt Margaret is to-day where the weary ones are at rest. I visited her sometime before her decease, and talked with her about her soul's welfare and she seemed to be hopeful of reaching the land of rest. Her husband and two children preceded her to the great waiting room, where we too, shall soon repair to await the judgment. She leaves seven children and a host of friends to mourn their loss. Dear ones, weep not as those who have no hope, for "Those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him when he comes." We sympathize with you in your loss, but hope it is her gain. May the Lord bless and comfort your hearts.

M. R. JONES, P. C.

Brother QUIN P. DESKIN was born Aug. 26, 1841; joined the M. E. Church, South, when young and was ever an active and true member; serving in the capacity of Sunday School superintendent, class-leader, and steward; occupying always the front seat at Church. He was a true man, gentle and tender-hearted. He was married to Miss Sallie McDougle on March 19 1868; they lived devotedly together for several years till the death angel called her home. He was married the second time to Miss Pierce, July 19, 1883, who made him a true wife until his death. I was with Brother Deskin in a meeting at his home Church some two weeks before he died and heard him say often that he was ready, that he had "a ticket clear through to the glory world." Oh, how we miss him. The Lord raise up some young man to take his place in the Church. He leaves two children, a wife, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. On Aug. 26, 1908, this being his 67th birthday, while visiting the sick of his community, he was struck by the death angel, went to sleep in Jesus, and waked up in glory.

HIS PASTOR.

LONGTOWN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I haven't had time to give you figures on our work of this year, so will now avail myself of the present opportunity and do so. We closed our last protracted service some two weeks ago and I am glad to say that every service we had was a revival service and not just a protracted meeting. We have had 253 conversions, with 132 accessions to the Longtown Charge churches; we have had displays of the old-time religion up here. I never saw God's power so forcibly felt as it was in these meetings. Old-time shouts were an everyday occurrence; this performance took place with Methodists and Baptists too. We have a religion up here that is good enough for all, and all participate in it, and everybody that has the genuine article don't keep it hid under the bushel measure; they go on the principle that they want to let their lights so shine as to illuminate the pathway for their sinner-friend that is out in darkness.

We have seven Sunday Schools, all of which are doing good work, one of them has 104 scholars. We have five W. H. M. Societies, one of which has some eighty members, also have two Foreign Societies; all these societies are doing fine work.

With the valuable help of Revs. R. H. B. Gladney, J. W. McGee, R. M. Evans, W. M. Young, W. J. O'Bryant, J. W. Hall and another dear old Brother whose name was Eruhardt from North Carolina, great good was accomplished in this section. I want to say too, that just before the beginning of our meetings that I had the privilege and pleasure of having had the valuable services of Mr. Thos. B. King, of Memphis, who is the great Layman Movement man. Brother King is a great man and he is very valuable to any preacher. I would advise everyone that can possibly have him with them to do so, he is certainly full of the Spirit and where God's Spirit is there is power.

I am, fraternally,

W. V. SHEARER, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, according to the rules of our Discipline the labors of Brother D. W. Babb, our beloved pastor, are coming to a close in our circuit, and whereas he has been so faithful these four years in the performance of each and every duty devolving upon a pastor, from that requiring his utmost strength to perform to that of a kind word spoken, and whereas his wife has been a model for, and an inspiration to all who are trying to build Christian homes; be it resolved by the Quarterly Conference of Crawford Circuit:

First—That we part with Brother Babb and his wife in sorrow, and pray God's blessings upon them both.

Second—That we, by these resolutions show our appreciation for this great work in our circuit.

Third—If Brother Babb is ever returned to our work we will gladly receive him.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed:

JAS. A. WATSON,
R. B. HARDY,

FROM AMORY, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: The labors of this pastor have been considerably increased since the early summer. The pastor of the Smithville Circuit gave up the work, and Brother Mitchell, our presiding elder, requested me to take two of the churches—Smithville and Antioch—preaching in the afternoons, after preaching at Amory at 11 a. m. So on the first and second Sundays I drive nine miles to Smithville and preach at 3 o'clock, return and preach at Amory at 7 o'clock. On the third Sunday at 3 o'clock I preach at Antioch. We might call this rather strenuous for a parson, but I have rather enjoyed it among old friends who had patience and love for me in the beginning of my ministry.

I drove out to fill an appointment at Antioch last Saturday morning, quite a congregation met me and brought dinner, and we had preaching again at 3 o'clock, making a strong pull to mend up the finances for this year, and I think Smithville and Antioch will pay all claims.

I am winding up my third year at Amory and Nettleton, and I trust we have been able to do some good. They have been years of pleasure, at least, to the pastor. Our congregations are well organized and at work. Leagues and Sunday Schools are endeavoring to give proper direction to the young life of the Church. The Harrison Band is a Juvenile Missionary Society, led by that faithful, good woman, Sister R. M. Harrison, who has been their leader for years. Doubtless she has accomplished much good. Mrs. Shipman looks after the League work at Amory and Mrs. John P. Wiygul at Nettleton, and have under their influence quite a large number of fine young men and women. Brother I. E. Roberts has been faithful for years as the leader of our Sunday School at Nettleton, which, by the way, is one of the best I ever saw. Brother J. M. May has pushed our Sunday School at Amory until he is calling for more room. We hope after the election and the financial "lid" is lifted, we will be able to serve his call.

We are glad to say the pastor of this splendid charge has no financial troubles; four times a year he receives a check for three hundred dollars and his Conference assessments promptly met. Taking everything in consideration, I do not know of a more delightful pastoral charge.

Two of our superannuates live in Amory, K. M. Harrison and J. B. Stone. The health of these dear brethren is not good. Brother Stone is just back from Texas, where he went to visit his daughter, but tells me he was quite sick while there, but he was able to be with us here Sunday morning, and close the service with one of his characteristic prayers. He seems to get mighty close to the Lord when he prays. Brother Harrison has been doing some strong preaching the past spring and summer, but of late has been suffering some and not able to be out all the time. This grand old man is greatly beloved here, and for the past five Sundays he has been able to meet Mrs. Shipman and the young Leaguers and they are always glad to hear his spiritual talks. John A. Lowe lives at Nettleton. He had located some years ago because of ill-health, but has been able to do some preaching this year, and, indeed, a great preacher is he. There is a sorrow that fills his heart and that of his splendid good wife, that he cannot give his entire time to the work of the ministry. It should be the prayers of the entire Church that the health of this useful man may be restored. He is the pastor's friend, and has a large vision of things.

Hope to see you at Conference.

LESSON FOR NOV. 15, 1908.

Subject: "The Lord our Shepherd." Psalm xxiii.

Golden Text: "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want." Psalm xxiii, 1.

We do not know at what exact time in the life of David that he was moved to write this Psalm; but the tone of the composition speaks as of one who is relating a blessed religious experience. It hath pleased the Spirit to permit each writer of the many books of sacred Scripture to color his work with a shade of individuality, for the reason, perhaps, that it be better adapted to the human understanding. It seems in David's writing: for who would tell us of our Heavenly Father as a keeper of sheep but the one who from his earliest youth had kept his earthly father's sheep? Perhaps, that reflections of David's later life is given us, as looking back over a most eventful career, he sees the loving care of the God of heaven all ~~the~~ way from the days of innocent childhood ~~and~~ youth through the days when "There was but a step between him and death." His heart was lifted up, his spirit was as a sheep of the heavenly flock, peacefully grazing beside the still waters of the river of life, and the loving shepherd was "The God of all comfort."

The shepherds of David's time were men of character, for their avocation was regarded as honorable. Their constant care of helpless creatures was an appeal to their tenderness: they went before the flock and called them to follow, calling each by name. The progress was slow for there were often some that were not able to keep up; some weak, tender lamb, that the shepherd would take up in his arms, and bear over the rough places. Sometimes the whole flock would stop, for some wandering sheep had strayed away, and the shepherd must go and bring again that one sheep they all loved. David meant all this, and even more than can here be told, when he told the disconsolate millions that "The Lord is our shepherd." It has ever been among the children of men in the struggle for existence, that the [illegible]

Now consider these wonderful things [illegible] what is the sum? What more can be said? The shepherd's care and work [illegible] complete. Far more than we can ask or think, as his bountiful gifts [illegible] the sweet singer of Israel tell this as he neared the end of his holy meditation, [illegible] cup runneth over. "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life." Surely, after having been led all the way by such a shepherd—after he hath done so much to lead me in the paths of righteousness, I cannot stray. Can we ever cause the shepherd to pleadingly ask, "Will ye also go away?" O, Simon Peter, we join with thee as thou didst say, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou alone hast the words of eternal life."

Looking backward over the journey of life's pathway, our hearts fill with thanksgiving; our eyes are dimmed with the tears of unworthiness; David's words help to utter the thought that fills our soul. "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

Then let us so live as to dwell in the house of the Lord forever, being first to live acceptably in his tabernacle on earth, without blame, with love unfeigned among his sheep that are called by his name, and afterwards to go [illegible] with hands [illegible]

Our great Shepherd will [illegible] any promise [illegible] will [illegible] their trust in him. THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE JOINT INSTITUTES.

Nothwithstanding the inactivity of the committee appointed by the 1st session of our Annual Conference to represent the Sunday School. Epworth League, Missionary, Educational and Woman's Boards in arranging and holding joint institutes, to better acquaint our people with their several lines of work in the Conference bounds this year, we still believe the plan is feasible and capable of unlimited good.

The newness of the enterprise and the limited time in which the committee had in working it out, may account for their not having done anything visible up to date.

But wouldn't it be better to have first-class Institutes at such centers as Shreveport, Monroe, Alexandria, Baton Rouge, Lake Charles and New Orleans, representing all these Boards at once than to have an excuse for a Missionary Institute here, or Sunday School Institute there, and of an Epworth League Institute yonder, etc., through each of these departments of Church work? Every member of the Church needs to be instructed in all of these lines of Christian activity. On such occasions the several Boards could hold annual mid-year meetings, the presiding elders could call preachers' meetings in the same connection, and all could take their special courses in first-class Institutes. Such joint meetings would evidently have some advantages over single Board Institutes.

1. Better teachers could be secured. We have fine specialists throughout the Church who could be engaged for a month for our Conference and be sent from place to place until multitudes of our Methodists could be instructed and inspired by their thoroughly wroughtout messages. Think of what a blessing it would be to have our people gathered together for instruction and have a Bishop, a missionary secretary or returned missionary, a great educator, a down-town pastor, a Dr. Hamill, a Miss Belle Bennett, an Epworth League secretary, and other such characters besides our own Conference workers, clerical and lay, young and old. And yet this is easily practical by arranging the Institutes in succession and having the teachers go directly from one to the other, but the co-operation of all the Boards and workers in each of the Districts would be necessary to accomplish this end.

II. To have Institutes under all these Boards takes too much time and costs too much money. Beginning with the District Preacher's Meeting, then having District Home and Foreign Mission Society Conferences, and the whole scheme of Institutes would cost a great deal of time and money. But to to appoint a certain month in the year—say June for Institute work, and let every agency of the Church turn its attention and all make their plans that way, it would seem that any Christian worker or progressive Church member might spare the time and money necessary to ride up to the center of their respective Districts on a cheap railroad rate and board at actual cost and meet the leading Christian workers of their Church. It would belittle the intelligence and consecration of our Church members to expect anything less of them—after we have shown them that we have something worth going to.

III. The enthusiasm created would not be the least of the blessings of such a gathering. The hap-hazard, lifeless, planless, meaningless gatherings of some dozen or so Christians who expect nothing and try to get nothing out of some of our District Conferences or Institutes may be changed into something progressive and fraught with great possibilities. Suppose we were to have great teachers and great themes well planned, and zealous workers not a few to inspire them, all right in our own section of the State, at our very doors, and think of the college quartets, the elocutionists, the lecturers, the recreation and the social intercourse! All this would be of easy access and highly desirable under a well managed joint institute, including the representatives of our colleges, our organized Sunday School classes, and the literary and social departments of our Epworth Leagues. Why die of dry rot when there is life everywhere?

Who should compose the committee in charge of the Joint Institute programmes? Last Conference we acted without a plan and the committee was chosen hurriedly. (a.) Let the several Boards, including both the Women's, appoint one member of the joint committee. (b.) The presiding elders might be ex-officio members. (c.) Let this committee choose an executive committee of three to take the lead and act in the interim of a regular committee meeting. We have two Vanderbilt professors, an assistant Epworth League Secretary, two college presidents and other capable men in our Conference who could arrange a programme of the highest order so there would be no trouble at this point.

How could such an enterprise be financed.

In the first place, the expense of employing teachers, lecturers, etc, from our own people would not be heavy, and in the next place, if we give the people something good they will be willing to pay for it. (1.) The several Boards might make appropriations where they have funds. (2.) An initiation fee or collection from those in attendance might meet the need. (3.- The town where the Institute is held would doubtless help. This expense met, let the committee secure the cheapest possible board for those in attendance. Where there is a college, camp ground, or Chautauqua grounds, the regular mess-hall might be used and board secured at a nominal cost.

For instance, just as Centenary closes her session in Shreveport, the Institute could convene and the same cooks and butler be retained for another week and all our Methodist and wouldbe Church workers be invited to assemble for a course in Bible-study, missions, Sunday School and Epworth League methods. That such is practical, is in evidence in the success of the Vanderbilt and Southwestern University Theological Summer Institutes. The only thing remaining is to do it, and to do it, the first necessary thing is to get at it.

If the Baptists find it of great advantage to use the fifth Sunday in such work, and the teachers, the doctors, the farmers, and the rest must have series of Institutes to attain their highest development, should not we gather our people together with as much regularity and under as favorable circumstances and develop them to be "workmen that need not to be ashamed?" What say you, brethren?

FROM HARRISVILLE, MISS.

My Dear Dr. Boswell: We have had some good meetings on the Pinola Circuit this year. Rev. B. F. Jones, D. D., was with me at Rexford and Pinola and did some good preaching. Rev. C. H. Ellis was with us at Mt. Pisgah and did faithful work. Rev. H. M. Ellis was with us at Harrisville.

Our third Quarterly Conference opened the meeting at Harrisville, with our beloved presiding elder, Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., in charge, who remained with us until Monday, having begun the meeting on Saturday. Brother Ellis came on Monday. Both of them did some good work.

We have received on profession of faith, forty-nine members. I baptized three by immersion, which were my first.

We serve a good people, most of them are farmers. They have been very kind to us since we came to our new home—gave us a pounding and have been furnishing us with vegetables and other produce. May God bless them, every one.

EPWORTH LEAGUE TOPIC.

November 15. The Spirit-Inspired Life. Rom. viii: 5-11; Col. 1-9.

The subject of our lesson is The Spirit inspired life. Perhaps a good way to come to a realization of the inspired life, is to make comparison with the inspired Word.

The Inspired Book, is that book into which God has inbreathed himself. Of old holy men of God, wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, and they have handed down to us the message of God. There were kings, and shepherds, priests and prophets, soldiers and men of peace, through whom God has spoken to us. To some there was the open vision of God, speaking, as a man might, face to face; to some there were visions and dreams of the night; others wrought under simple sense of duty, not knowing that they were a part of God's great evangel to men. Some of the men of old, marvelled at the visions they gave unto the people, not knowing whereunto they bore witness. A large part of the prophets, thought more of the people to whom they spake than of the coming generations. Through eighteen centuries the Bible was in preparation under the hands of differing men, who wrought alone, but to us comes the marvelous harmony of the Word in the completed Evangel. Through all there runs one great vital essential: God speaks through this book to men; and by whatever hands it has been wrought. God dwells in this book and his truth abides there.

2. God dwells in the inspired life. Christ, who manifests the Father to us by the Holy Spirit, is to dwell in the heart of every man inspired by the Spirit. Present in your thoughts will be the ever present Christ, you will have the mind of Christ. To put this in the thought of the Scripture lesson assigned for this subject, you will mind the things of the Spirit, or your mind will be filled with the things of the Spirit. He will be in your actions, in your purposes and in all that you are.

3. God speaks through an inspired life to men.

If The Father cannot speak through you to your fellows, it is doubtful if the Spirit dwells in you. Men are inclined to seek for the Spirit for the blessings to be received; but of you will search closely, you will find that the dominant thought is one of service to others. He is to endue you with power, he is to reveal all truth to you, that you may be a witness of the truth. You are sent out with others by the Master, even as he was sent of the Father. Men who do not stop to read the Bible, will stop to read the message of God written in your life. Are you willing to be a mouthpiece of God?

4. A few of the things which God would speak through an inspired life. He would tell by your lips and lives, that you have a Father in heaven, and that you are striving to live to the honor of your Father. He would have you tell that you have a Master who is lovable. Men talk freely about those for whom they care, and yet men who profess to love the Christ have but little to say about him. The world is far more willing to hear the messages of a Christ embodied in your life than perhaps you realize. It is [illegible] that you serve a lovable Christ, and you show forth his life. The inspired life should tell that the Christ loves men. Every one inspired by the Spirit, should breathe love for his fellows, and as the ambassador of Christ so minister to men that they shall know that not only a human but a divine love is following them. The inspired life should let the Master tell through it that sin is hateful, and that men can be saved from sin. Such a life should tell of the fellowship to come, of which we have here a type in the perfect accord that can dwell between earnest followers of the lowly Nazarene.

CONFERENCE OF MISSIONARY LEADERS AND WORKERS.

The Conference of Missionary Leaders will be held in the Methodist Training School, Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 30-31. An effort will be made to have present the president and secretary of every Conference Board of Missions and also every Conference evangelist and missionary secretary in our entire connection. This Conference will be a council of war. Its importance can hardly be overstated.

The delegates are to be given rooms and board in the school buildings at one dollar per day.

THE MID-WINTER INSTITUTE.

Immediately following the Leaders Conference will be the Mid-winter Institute of the Methodist Training School, from Jan. 1-10. The object of the Institute is to bring together the missionary workers of the Church for instruction, inspiration and fellowship.

The schedule of work will include three hours of lectures each morning. The first hour will be devoted to Bible Study, the second to Christian evangelism, and the third to missionary fields and movements. Two hours each afternoon will be given to free discussion of conditions, needs, methods and organization. The fall session of the Russian Douma assembled recently in St. Petersburg. This is the first Russian Parliament that has outlived its first session and assembled for the second time. This is the third Douma, the first two being short-lived and accomplishing practically nothing in the way of legislation. It is probable that Russia will be able to travel on its way toward full constitutional government without further disasters on the road.

NEWS OF THE NOVEMBER CENTURY.

"I used to wonder," says Helen Keller, "why scientific men and others were always asking me about my dreams. * * * My dreams do not seem to differ very much from the dreams of other people." But the account by this wonderful blind and deaf girl of her dream experiences must be of unique interest. Her article on "My Dreams," will be one of the notable features of the November Century.

L. H. Bailey, Director of the College of Agriculture, Cornell University, and Chairman of the Commission on Country Life appointed by President Roosevelt, has written for the November Century of "College Men as Farm Managers," basing his article on valuable and suggestive facts and figures. He urges strongly co-operation of the farm and the college, points out how best to bring about this co-operation, and declares that the only salvation for agriculture is that it rise to meet the college man.

FROM MONTROSE, MISS.

Dear Brother Boswell: Our annual meeting at Montrose began Oct. 18 and closed Sunday, Oct. 25. Our special help came in time to hold the evening service the first day, the morning having been left to the writer, owing to delayed trains.

Because of providential hindrances, Brother Harbin was unable to reach us during the meeting. Brother C. N. Guice, his co-worker, on reaching us, did faithful and efficient service, preaching three sermons daily and singing to the delight and edification of the large audiences which increased in numbers and interest to the last service. He proved himself a workman which needeth not to be ashamed. He does well the work of an evangelist; the Holy Spirit evidently working with him and through him in saving power. Special preparation had been made for the meeting in a series of prayer services. In addition to the weekly prayer meeting, a Tuesday afternoon meeting had been organized to specially wait on the Lord for a revival.

Beginning with October, both the young men and young ladies held special prayer meetings, apart, asking unitedly for the salvation of the the unsaved and the spiritual upbuilding of the entire membership. Some of the members added fasting, or abstinence, a number of Fridays preceding the opening of the meeting. Is it wonderful then that our God came in saving and enduring power? "And whatever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it." John xiv, 13,14.

Truly, the Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad. It had been said, "so nearly everyone is in some one of the churches, there can be only a very few added." But fifty-one were received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; eight joined the Presbyterians, and one pledged the renewal of membership in the Baptist Church in Newton, making a total of sixty. Most of these were on profession of faith. More than 100 professed conversion, or reclamation. Thirty-six new family altars were pledged and the young men's and young ladies' prayer meetings were pledged as permanent institutions.

Our Sunday School, among the best in the Conference, under the leadership of its efficient superintendent, Brother Preston L. Blackwell, aided greatly and many of the pupils were converted and added to the Church. Our League workers also did nobly, demonstrating to all the power of this arm of the Church.

Our community as a whole rejoice in this gracious visitation. We hope yet for greater and more far-reaching [illegible]

BROOKLYN, MISS.

Mr. Editor: On Oct. 27 we held our fourth Quarterly Conference for [illegible]. Brother Burton was with us in [illegible] health and [illegible]. This is his third year on the District and the work is in advance of any preceding [illegible] he will [illegible] the District another year. He ought to be, [illegible] he has the work well in hand and doubtless his fourth year will be the best. There have been many fine revivals throughout the District. The pastors will largely bring up fine reports. Brother Burton is one of our [illegible] progressive men, who is brotherly and considerate and a fine preacher. His sermon yesterday was thoughtful and full of spiritual power. He made a fine impression on his congregation. He said this was the largest Quarterly Conference on his District; composed of men whose aggregate weight was 1502 lbs., and 4 of the men about 6 feet in height. We had a most delightful Conference; its spirituality was most gracious. All hearts seemed joyous.

The spirituality of all the churches is most excellent. All the prayer meetings are good. There are scores of men and women who pray in public. Many of these are young people. Many have erected family altars. Many are loyal, ready to work anywhere and put their money in their Lord's work. Our report gave sixty accessions; 150 conversions; four large, fine working Epworth Leagues, two Home Mission Societies, with large working memberships. The Conference Collections all reported in full. The stewards reported their assessment would be paid in full by Dec. 1. This, all in spite of hard times and scarcity of money. This indicates loyalty to God and the Church and deep spirituality pervading the hearts of the people. People who have religion are glad to pay the Lord their dues.

The superintendents all reported good schools, with a nice contribution for missions. Each Epworth League President reported a good League and each doing a fine work; the Home Mission Societies well organized and growing in interest, broadening in work and liberality.

The Conference was most excellent in spirit and results and each and all were glad that they were present to participate in the deliberations. I must say it was most enjoyable. I do not think I ever attended a better one. May many blessings rest on Brooklyn and Bond. Cordially,

W. D. DOMINICK.

THE BIBLE AND THE PROBLEM OF POVERTY.

This book, written by Samuel M. Godbey, deals with one of the problems of perennial interest. The problem of poverty will probably interest men as long as this present world lasts. The author has not attempted to deal with the whole problem of poverty, nor has he spent much time on solutions of the question, but this book is a study of poverty from the standpoint of the Bible.

The Pentateuch has no theories of social life; it was not an age of philosophy, but of material facts. The writer accepts the fact of toil as a part of life. He sees no curse in work, and presents the fact that before the fall Adam kept the garden. The lesson of Genesis is that nobility is not inconsistent with manual labor and a life of rude simplicity. Shepherd princes put their own hands to the tasks to be performed.

The law of the Sabbath is in the interest of the poor man, especially. The rich man may rest when he will, the poor man must toil when his fellows toil. Only a law that strictly requires his rest, can secure him the privilege of resting. The social purpose of the Sabbath, of the Sabbatic year, of the law of the tithe, in the laws concerning the lending of money all tended to lift the poor man without [illegible] his self-respect. They also stand in the way of amassing inordinate fortunes.

A very large part of the writings of the prophets are made up of the immediate problems of the day in which they lived. No small part of these related to the oppression of the poor, the fatherless and the widows by those who were in places of authority either through wealth or birth. To relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, and plead for the widow, was the ideal of civic life set forth by the greatest of the prophets.

In perfect harmony with the teaching of the prophets was Christ's doctrine that the discharge of every duty to man should take precedence of every act of worship. But the prophets made their appeal to the rich, while Christ made his appeal to the poor. He waged no war against wealth, but he regarded the rich as unfortunate. It is safe to say that no man who faithfully walks in the steps of Jesus can lay up one of the fabulous modern fortunes.

TWO MEN OF EDUCATION.

The car was crowded, and two men thrown for the half hour into the same seat, fell at once into pleasant and friendly conversation.

"You are a Yale man, I see," said the elder, presently indicating the class pin conspicuous on the lapel of his companion's coat.

"I am so fortunate," complacently. "And you?"

"I take pride in having graduated from a district school among the green hills of Connecticut."

"Excuse me, sir, but you asked such intelligent questions and seemed so conversant with the classics as well as with modern languages, that I, of course, supposed you to be a college man."

"There never seemed to be time for me to go to college. I have been in business since I was a mere boy. I graduated in Greenleaf's National Arithmetic, and was tolerably thorough in the other so-called common branches when I left the district school; and our minister, who was one of the town committee, got me a place in his brother's store in the nearest city.

"The minister was a good fatherly sort of a man, a real pastor; and appreciating how strange his lambkin would feel in his new pasture, he went with me and remained for a few days' visit until I became used to the place. He was one of the sort of ministers who do their preaching in the pulpit, and out of it enter into the everyday life of each individual in their church family.

"During our short journey across country (for he carried me with his own reliable horse and chaise), he dropped into my mind a good many seedling ideas as to the proper value of time. Taking a newspaper, he showed me the pettiness of the trivial daily happenings that it chronicled, and taught me to take a hasty view of the telegraph news and of the editorial page by which I could keep up with the times by the expenditure of a very few moments each morning.

"'You are going into business,' he said, 'and your cousin Theodore goes to a school to get fitted for college. Now, if you so choose, you may at forty be as scholarly a man as he.'

"When I looked puzzled, and no doubt incredulous, he took a small volume of miscellaneous essays from his pocket and went on with his talk, saying:

"'You are fond of reading. Now, instead of spending your time, your precious odd moments, over gossipy newspapers and trashy novels, master the contents of this book; do not merely go through it in cursory fashion, but master it, so that you could pass an examination of its contents with credit to yourself and to the friend who has so much confidence in your ability that he presents it to you as the nucleus of a future library. If you desire books for reference or for further study, you will find them in my brother's library, for I have arranged that you are to board in his family.'

"I took the book gratefully, but with a mingled feeling of curiosity and dismay, I remember; but that very night I found time to dip into it, and ever since I have found more or less time every day for study. My library, of which indeed that little volume was the beginning, is something of a curiosity, as it is largely made up of pocket editions. Much of the time I have boarded outside the city, and going back and forth by train I have spent the time of transit in study.

"That first little book was suggestive. It led me to study the Bible, or to keep up any study begun at home with a devout grandmother, at the Sunday school and at the district school, for each morning's session in those days was begun with a general exercise of prayer, praise and reading of the New Testament, in which the teacher catechized us as thoroughly as in our geography.

"It was quite a long time before I mastered the little volume so that I understood every allusion; but when I had arrived at that point I had acquired a love of study and a knowledge of the fact that nothing is small or of little importance. The seed is at the root of the ripened harvest, and those garnered moments were my seed time to study.

"I have told this story a great many times to a great many young people. I like to buy suggestive books and to give them away. I do it as interest paid for the little volume of essays, and in memory of my dear old pastor, who never outlived his love for the young or his interest in their advancement.

"Now and then I see the seed taking root and bearing fruit. I have a young friend who is the pastor of a church in a manufacturing district, where there are a great many young working people, most of whom are only graduates of the common district school, but by being taught the value of time and of making the most of opportunities, they are making marvelous spiritual and mental growth.

"He has organized a reading club and a library as auxiliary to the Society of Christian Endeavor, and has begun teaching classes in English literature, history, civil government and physical geography. The younger members are studying the town in which they live: its geometrical form, its geographical position, its area, its government, its politics, its resources. They are making a cabinet of everything to be found in the township, vegetable, animal and mineral, and classifying the specimens intelligently.

"I am free to say that there is not a resident in the township who is not astonished at the extent and variety of that collection, and the work is by no means done yet; and what greatly enhances its value in my eyes is, that it is entirely the product of odd minutes."

"According to your theory," said the college men, who had been an interested listener, "anyone with a thorough common school education as a basis and a realization of the value of odd minutes may attain to almost anything in the way of education."

"Nothing is more true; yet I do not by any means belittle the advantage of a university course, but I do say make the most of the common school; magnify the work of the teacher of the common school; put none but the best into that position, and impress them with the fact that they have under their care, from day to day, the future men and women who are to hold this country as a Christian nation."—(The Christian Intelligencer).

THE SMALL REPAIRS.

I am a firm believer in the stitch in time—most women who have been trained by sensible mothers do. I know that the freshness of wearing apparel can be prolonged by vigilance and the timely use of the needle. I saw a basketful of beautiful silk stockings the other day which are entirely out of commission through carelessness. In some of them stitches had been allowed to run down till there was no hope of repairing the mischief, and in others small holes had been allowed to grow to large ones, and the stockings were of no further use.

The owner happened to be able to replace them, but that did not excuse her negligence. Had she been poor I doubt if she would have taken better care of her belongings. There are women to whom money comes hard who neglect to protect the hems of their petticoats with a braid of some sort, and who pay no attention to the call for repairs till the damage becomes serious and requires the expenditure of a great deal of time. They never look trig and trim because they will not repair buttonholes, replace missing buttons, and mend small breaks in the stitching of clothing.—Southern Churchman.

Dun's Review of Trade has the following to say concerning the business enterprises of the country: "Decided improvement is noted in most trade reports this week, especially in respect to distributive departments. Orders have come to manufacturers more freely, in many cases accompanied by requests for immediate or very early delivery. Evidences of increased confidence are numerous, and prices are more firmly held where concessions have been offered recently without attracting buyers. Many mills have resumed after months of idleness, sufficient orders having accumulated to assure active capacity during the balance of the year, and there is a general belief that contracts will be placed freely during the next two months. Textile mills and shoe shops make particularly good reports, and the broadening demand for pig iron testifies to the expectation that a good volume of business is coming to the steel mills. Weather conditions have stimulated retail trade and needed rain has greatly improved the situation, especially at mills that were idle because of low water. Winter wheat prospects have also brightened, and forest fires no longer prevail."

A few states have legislated against the "cigarette," Louisiana among the number. Other states will follow. Kansas will likely do so at the next session of its Legislature. Some figures that will be presented to the body will stir the lawmakers to action. What prevails in Kansas doubtless prevails in all states where no action has been taken. A press dispatch to the great dailies gives out the following: "Prof. Wm. McKeever, of the Kansas Agricultural Department, has tabulated reports based on personal investigation of the condition of 2500 cigarette-using schoolboys, who are described by Prof. McKeever as 'sallow,' 'sore-eyed,' 'puny,' 'squaky,' 'sickly,' 'short-winded' and 'extremely nervous.' Cigarette-smoking boys and students, Prof. McKeever found, suffered from sore throat, weak eyes, pain in the chest, short wind, stomach trouble and pains in the heart. They also tended to obesity in some cases. The effect on mental activity was marked, several very youthful smokers were nearly imbeciles, and out of 2500 examined only six were marked bright students, ten were average and the rest were poor or worthless. It is this wholesale indictment of the cigarette by McKeever that has wrought up Kansas, and will probably mean legislation." That presents a fearful outlook for the future of Kansas boys.

Actors and actresses, it seems, have less respect for the sanctity of the marriage relation than any class of people in our country. Whether they "marry in haste and repent at leisure," and go to the divorce court for relief, or whether they marry simply because it is the custom of the country, and use the divorce court as a convenience, does not fully appear. Only one thing is clear: they have little respect for God's law of marriage. One reason for this, perhaps, is because these men and women have no homes. They are always on the road, and know little or nothing of social life outside of what they experience and see in hotels and boarding-houses. Some of these men and women overdo the thing. We read of a leading actor who, a few days ago, married the fourth time. Three of the women he married had been divorced, and he had been divorced twice. Such scandals seem to be taken as a matter of course by the public. The parties to them forfeit nothing in the way of popularity—indeed, a divorce brings to some of them notice they would not otherwise receive. The sad thing about this business is the fact that not a few people obtain well-nigh all the knowledge they have of morals from the stage, and when they note that actors and actresses have so little regard for marriage, and are not frowned upon by theatre-goers, they necessarily imbibe the same spirit. But, if it be true that they have so much regard for the marriage relation that they will not tolerate a violation of the marriage vows, then it must be that much social corruption exists in their ranks. Looked at in either way, the marriage of one man twice divorced himself to three divorced women in succession is an intolerable scandal. The marriage and divorce laws of our country are too lax.

Archbishop Glennon, of St. Louis, was employed by the United States Government some months ago to take the census of the Roman Catholic Church in this country. Why an Archbishop was employed to do this secular work has never been made public, as far as we know. We presume, however, the thing was inspired by some "prince of the Church," and the authorities simply acquiesced. We have not heard of any Episcopal or Methodist Bishop, Baptist or Presbyterian dignitary applying for a like job. It is unprecedented in our history, and without justification. But be this as it may, Archbishop Glennon, according to the reports made in the papers, has given out the figures as to New Orleans and the diocese of Archbishop Blenk. The report is that in the city of New Orleans there are something over 181,000 Roman Catholic "communicants." To us, the statement seems incredible. The last Federal census showed less than 300,000 inhabitants in the city. Probably the number, after eight years, has grown to 310,000. If there are 181,000 Roman Catholic "communicants" in the city, what must be the Roman Catholic population? As a rule, the population of a church—that is the communicants and infant children of communicants, and those who are adherents, though not members—number about three to one. On this basis the Roman Catholic population of New Orleans would count something above the number of all the people in the city, including Protestants, Jews and infidels, as well as "the faithful." Our notion is the press dispatches made a slip, substituting "communicants" for population, and thereby have grealy augmented the strength of Romanism in New Orleans.

The Monroe Enquirer, of South Carolina, gives its readers information concerning an invention by Dr. H. F. Chreitzberg, which, if put to use by the railroads of the country, will doubtless save many wrecks and many lives. Dr. Chreitzberg is a preacher of high standing in the Western North Carolina Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The Enquirer says it is "a device whereby an engineer has absolute control of the working of switches. Millions of property and thousands of lives have been lost by trains running into open switches. A careless switchman forgets to close a switch or the hand of a criminal opens the switch, and the train dashes in and is wrecked. With the little piece of mechanism, Dr. Chreitzberg has invented, attached to a switch all danger of a wreck on open switches is done away with. No matter how fast the train is running, the engine man can throw the switch to the main line. The device is attached to the switch, and there is no change whatever in the form of the switch. Dr. Chreitzberg has a model railroad equipped with engine, switch and signal board, and the model works perfectly. For over three years Dr. Chreitzberg has been at work on this invention. We fully believe that he has something which is worth a fortune. There is no other invention like it. Like a great many other useful inventions, the little switch-throwing device is simple, and it will cost but a few dollars to equip a switch with it. The invention will soon be patented."

Mr. Thomas Taggert, who, for the four years ending with last July, was chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has given out a statement to the effect that he "is not a candidate for United States Senator." We dare say he would stand no show of election should he offer for the position, but he has done well to announce that he is not a candidate. It will relieve the anxiety on the subject—numbers of people in Indiana and elsewhere believing that he is not a suitable man for such a dignified and honorable position, for, though he might not have been elected himself, he would possibly keep some good man out of the place. It is no bad sign when such men as Mr. Taggert are turned down. Men of his sort have had too much to do in shaping the politics of our country, but they are passing—we hope never to return.

THE PENITENT'S PRAYERS.

By Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt.

Father, spare thy erring child;
Though I've strayed in wandrings wild
And deserved thy chastening rod,
Still thou art my father, God.

Though I've disobeyed thy word,
Heeded not the call I heard,
Sinned despite thy warning voice,
Grieved thee by my willful choice,

Yet, my Father, I return—
All my self-will I'd unlearn;
Though ungrateful I have been,
Jesus died to save from sin.

Keep me, Father, lest I stray;
Take my sinfulness away;
I with tears each sin would blot—
Spare thy child and chasten not.

Evil I would cease to do,
And to duty's call be true;
Glad thy loving child to be,
I would find my home in thee.

HOLDING ON TO THE TRUTH.

BY REV. R. F. HARRISON.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Your editorial on "Things That Hurt," in a recent issue of the ADVOCATE, was timely and to the point. I was thankful for its appearance. A few more on the same line will be in perfect order.

One has only to observe his fellow-man, read the newspapers and learn of the awful crimes committed, in order to be convinced of the dreadfull reality of the "fall" of Adam and Eve, and its tremendous consequences. To him whose eyes have been opened, it is no "allegory of the fall," but a fearfully literal and staggering fact!

Again, the person who rejects the statement made of Jonah, and denominates it the "fable of Jonah," virtually repudiates Jesus Christ: for he accepted the account as literal, saying to those who were seeking a "sign": "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth."

Jesus evidently considered it no "fable," but an actual occurrence, intended to typify his burial and resurrection, just as he expects us to understand it to-day and for all time.

He who discounts Christ's sayings discounts Christ himself; and that person, no matter whether editor, minister or layman, should be discounted by the Church of Jesus Christ. Nothing so honors God as to implicitly believe his Word; nothing so dishonors him as to disbelieve it. When he said "Let there be light, and there was light," light came at his word, and that is what he wants us to see and believe. And I do.

When Jesus Christ called forth Lazarus to life from his grave by his word, he expected us to believe it just that way. And I do!

What we greatly need to-day in Methodism is enforcement of discipline. The Lord hasten the day when it will be enforced!

Luella, La.

ARE WE SAFE AS METHODISTS?

There is a sense in which we are not safe until we are in heaven, and there is another in which we are safe as long as our hearts are changed by the Holy Spirit, and then are kept in that condition by our living as God requires; but the question with which we now wish to deal is, Are we safe as an organized, active church?

Perhaps no one would dare to say that we are not the best organized church on earth, and, too, all things considered, that we are not the most thoroughly equipped church on earth, but still that does not leave us groundless for inoptimistic tendencies, and even a fearful spiritual wreck.

One tendency is to suspect one as being prejudiced or jealous if he finds fault with certain practices, etc., and hence is passed wholly unnoticed, or treated as an enemy to harmony and brotherly love, and the practices allowed to continue.

But, suppose we concede that the one finding fault was prejudiced, or jealous, or both, would it be wise to pass the practices unnoticed and uncorrected that are hurtful and jeopardizing our very existence as a holy and godly organization? Cannot the most stupid see that such a tendency, if not checked and ended, will inevitably bring speedy ruin to the spirituality of any church, however perfect in its organization and equipment. We ought to be glad to discover any practices that are in the least destructive to our spirituality and end them as soon as possible.

Another tendency is that of praising what has no merit at all, and also praising the worthy beyond real merit, even to sinful extravagance. Such a tendency is a gradual death to conscience and a pamperer of that pride of which Solomon spoke when he said: "Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall." (Prov. xvi. 18.)

Another tendency is the love of money, which St. Paul declares: "For the love of money is the root of all evil." (I. Tim. vi. 10.) In proportion as one loves money, in that proportion does he lose interest in others, unless they are helpful or favorable to his getting it. His heart grows cold and dead, and he becomes more and more liable to act and speak falsehoods, as well as to adopt unjust methods to get it. Indeed, he is on the road to all manner of sins.

Another tendency is not to enforce discipline at all. No organization is worthy of a name as such, if it has no rules for its regulation, and not even then, if it does not enforce them rigidly. Where is the church or conference in Southern Methodism that is not loose in enforcement of discipline, if not neglecting it almost altogether?

Another tendency is to lightness and foolishness. Many of our representative men when they appear before our Conferences and our people generally to represent our important interests, seem to think that, if they succeed in awakening the interest necessary, and especially to secure the collection desired, they must crack jokes, turn to a clown and have an abundance of laughter and fun. The same, unfortunately, is true of ministers while preaching to children. Some seem to think it very necessary to have a big time of fun to get children to be religious. Once, after it was announced that a certain brother would preach to the children, a little girl said, "We'll have fun now!" That was her best idea of it.

What does all this mean, if it does not mean false views of sacred things and a perverted religious taste. Solomon said, "The simple inherit folly" (Prov. xiv. 18), and in the following twenty-fourth verse he said: "Foolishness of fools is folly." Seriousness is departing from us, although Paul said "that the aged men be sober, grave." (Titus ii. 2), of course, as an example to all the rest. Solomon said: "The thought of foolishness is sin." (Prov. xxiv. 9.)

Another tendency is a disregard for deliberately made promises. Not only is this true with the laity, but also the ministry. During a service, while a protracted meeting is in progress, a whole audience will make a promise and break it before the next service.

Other tendencies could be mentioned, but these are sufficient to enable us to see that we are not safe while such tendencies obtain, and, too, they enable us to find the reasons for our present lackings, whether in the number and consecration of ministers, or true spiritually of our people.

Let us so awake against all evils then we shall indorse no one nor anything that is wrong. Let us become a synonym for all that is just, honorable, pure and good, and then our ranks will be filled with the needed numbers, and with the right men.

BREAKING APPOINTMENTS.

BY REV. R. F. HARRISON.

In order to success along any line there must be system, regulation and punctuality. Without these there will be failure. It takes this in the home, in the business world and in the Church, in order to complete success. Where a minister announces, "I will preach for you all next fourth Sunday, unless providentially hindered," he should certainly do so. If he fails to do so, and breaks his appointment several times, disappointing his people, without a good reason, he will soon find his congregation dropping off; and if he continues to do so, he will soon awake to the realization that his appointments have become his disappointments. If he disappoints the people, like begets like, and they will soon most certainly disappoint him. He will soon face empty pews. I have seen congregations drop off to only a few because of this laxity. Preachers, do not break your appointments!

Luella, La.

A REPLICATION.

The strictures of both the editor and his correspondent, Mrs. McKinney, on my late article on "Substitution" calls for some notice at my hands.

Both the editor and Mrs. McKinney seem to think my argument is a liquor argument, while the question is primarily one of substituting on our Lord.

The editor says: "In this matter let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." To this I must except. If the sacrament of the Lord's Supper is a man-made ordinance, then man has the privilege to choose whatsoever elements he may think proper, or which he may be "fully persuaded in his own mind" most fittingly represents the thing signified. But if it is a divine institution, then conformity to the pattern is an absolute necessity, and I affirm that no stretch of faith can make the sacrament of the Lord's Supper out of different elements than those used by the Savior.

That God holds men to strict account in carrying out his institutions is aptly illustrated in our Sunday school lesson of a few Sundays past, in the account of the death of Uzzah, for which David was directly responsible because of the fact that he substituted another for the sons of Levi, who, according to divine institution alone, should carry the ark from place to place.

I enjoy the ADVOCATE, and have great respect for its editor; but I doubt his right to judge between the Savior of men and his ordinance. If the sacrament was instituted with the use of "unfermented wine," which Bishop Keener had the grace to call "fermented nonsense," let us use the unfermented article.

Again, both the editor and his correspondent take me to task for suggesting the use of "chemical compounds," which one tells us is "logwood, alcohol and poison." Beg pardon, but my plea is for wine, not "chemical compounds." Neither do I insist on sending to the saloon or a horrid drug store to get it. I doubt not, wine is as easily gotten in a pure state as the miserable makeshifts often used in its stead.

I wish to assure Mrs. McKinney that the editor was not asleep when my article "got in," but that it went to him with a personal note from the writer, especially commending it to his editorial judgment, and he published it with adverse criticism. Then, I thank her for her splendid illustration of my position in her reference to baptism.

No, dear Madam, I would not insist on the "waters of Jordan," but I would insist on water. I do not think it needful to get wine from the same vine from whose fruit the Savior passed the "cup of blessings," but water for baptismal and wine for sacramental purposes. I would not think of administering baptism with any other element than water. Likewise, I believe this institution cannot be administered without the divinely appointed elements.

Now, if this institution is an ordinance of man, man has choice of the elements. But if it is the Lord's—then, of but one kind of bread did he say "this is my body," of one kind of "fruit of the vine," "this is my blood in the new testament."

Brother Honnoll, who also writes, makes an earnest effort, in his argument, to show me [illegible] wrong, but he is far from convincing, and gives a strong argument against himself through an error in statement of fact when he affirms the absence of leaven in the natural fruit of the vine, and its presence in the wine when fermented. He [illegible] the facts in the case. [illegible] our Lord used an unleavened bread, [illegible] unleavened wine could not have been other than fresh or preserved juice of the grape in an unfermented state, as the [illegible] of which the speaker are [illegible] in the [illegible] of the grape and produce fermentation, and are reproduced thereby; while the fermented wine has [illegible] the impurities in the course of fermentation.

Brother Honnoll's array of authorities as to the different kinds of wine goes for naught, as that question, he admits, has partisans on both sides. Indeed, I could give him quite a respectable list of able scholars who agree that "wine is the fermented juice of the grape," while loosely applied to various forms of grape juice.

But let us remember that the Son of Man was accustomed to the "cup of blessings," and doubtless his often partaking of it where he was a guest, and the "cup of blessings" had been passed from hand to hand, each touching the cup to his lips and taking a sip of the wine, had, doubtless, laid him open to the charge of the Jews that he was a wine-bibber, this small sip being construed by his enemies against him; and yet their false charge would have had no force whatever had the wine of this cup not been the fermented article.

Now, as to the juice of the grape existing in many forms unfermented in the land of our Lord's ministry, and in his days being inferred from the fact that such is the case to-day, is as little to be justified as the theory that, since cotton is the chief crop in the Delta and strawberries and cream the chief articles of commerce here at Hammond, La., that such was the case two thousand years ago; or that the habits of the Jews in the days of Christ were the same as those of the Mohammedans, who for centuries have dwelt in the Land of our Lord's ministry; and, again, that these two alien races, with different faiths and different ideals, had the same habits of life as our good friend, Mrs. McKinney.

Then my good brother forgets that in the eleventh chapter of I Corinthians St. Paul condemns the use of wine in a perverted service, where a feast was made at the church, each carrying his own supper, some going away hungry and others drunken, and all this without condemning the use of the wine that caused the drunkenness.

One more point and I will close. Brother Honnoll can't believe that Christ made wine, because wine is alcoholic. Yet God made man, and so formed his body of the dust of the ground that as soon as the juice of the grape, containing its natural parts, enters his stomach, it begins to turn into alcohol. God is as responsible for alcohol as for grapes. Yours for truth.

K. S. Enochs.

LETTER FROM REV. GEORGE JACKSON.

Dear Brother: [illegible] only a little over a month until the Louisiana Conference will meet at Leesville, and before [illegible] in December I will have entered upon my fifty-second anniversary in the Conference. I have lived at [illegible] seventy years. Before [illegible] there were a few [illegible] in the [illegible] with [illegible]. Have [illegible] Lecompte. [illegible] two members [illegible] that were [illegible] organization of the church—myself and Sister Brewer. I think I preached the first sermon (not sure), but I held the first love feast that was held in our new church.

I was the first Sunday School Superintendent here, and I have watched its progress from the start. We have had a variety of preachers; the Conference has sent its talent here, but the church in all these years cannot compare with it at the present time, under the administration of our young brother, Rev. R. H. Harper, a chip of the old block, a worthy son of his worthy sire, the Rev. J. D. Harper. He looks after every interest of the Church. This hard year he has raised more money for the Church and Conference collections than was ever raised before. He has added by profession of faith and letter this year twenty-seven members; he has one of the best Sunday Schools in the Conference. I have attended Sunday Schools from Shreveport to New Orleans, and many places in the country, but I have not visited one where there is better order kept, where more children stay to hear preaching than at Lecompte. I have been connected with the Sunday School for seventy-three years. I am happy to say that my young brother, John Brewer, son of our dear Sister Brewer, whom I have known from a child, who has been the superintendent for six years is loved by teachers and people. The school has prospered, and is still growing, and to-day is one of the best in the country. In all of the schools that I have visited I have not seen teachers show such interest and take such pains to instruct their classes as they do at Lecompte.

The pastor has organized a good Epworth League here. I predict a great future for this young preacher. Any church or circuit might be glad to get him. He stands high here with his people, and they would be glad to get him another year.

With best wishes to the ADVOCATE, I remain, my dear brother, fraternally,

GEO. JACKSON.

FINAL TO BROTHER GEDDIE.

BY REV. J. W. HONNOLL.

If I have said what Brother Geddie, in the ADVOCATE of Oct. 22, says I have said, it is time for me to hush and say no more.

He says of me in this article: "He thinks that we have stronger inclinations to evil than we have to good, and that because of this the great majority have commenced sinning in infancy;" again, "Brother Honnoll says that all except Adam and Eve started to sinning in their infancy." "Brother Honnoll says they actually sin in their infancy."

I think this quite a grave charge, and if I have said what Brother G. says I have said, he will please point out the article in which I said it, and I will apologise to the readers of the ADVOCATE, for I do not believe what he charges me with having said, and did not intend to say anything of the kind. If I have not said it, it is Brother Geddie's duty to state to the readers of this ADVOCATE that he has misrepresented me.

Not to try to prove that what I have said amounts to the same, for he has no right to put words into my mouth which I have not used. He has no right, because I have said that the child is born with an inclination to sin, that I say it sins, for I hold that there is a difference in an inclination to sin and sinning. I leave Brother G. to enjoy his sense of victory, for I do not propose to hold any controversy with a Brother who will misquote me as he has done. I might be able to meet some of his many conclusions, but I had as soon undertake to catch a brood of young quails which had been scattered by the warning voice of the mother bird.

He can say now what he pleases and I shall treat him as a man did his wife who occasionally gave him a lick on the head. His friends insisted that he should not allow it. "O," he said, "It does her a great deal of good, and it does not hurt me." Brother Geddie wrote well in the beginning, but he reminds me of the North Carolina bully, who stepped out on the streets of a little town and swore he could whip anything in that town. No one said anything, and he added I can whip anything in this county. No one took it up. Then he swore he could whip anything in North Carolina. Some one struck him and knocked him down. He got up rubbing his face and said, "I extended my proposition a little too far."

He has demolished John Wesley, Fletcher, Watson, Benson, Adam Clark, Dr. Summers, our Hymn Book and Discipline, and has given us Pelagianism in its purity. The great battle has now been fought. The Methodist theologians of more than one hundred years have all been slain. "How are the mighty fallen!"

We surrender with only one condition: that we be allowed to bury our dead in one common grave. We must put Wesley's Notes and Sermons, Clark's and Benson's Commentaries, Watson's Institutes and Bible Dictionary, Bledsoe's Theodicy, Ralston's Elements of Divinity, Dr. Whedon's Commentaries and all our works on depravity in the grave—bury them out of sight—and sing, "Hark from the tombs a doleful sound." All these have written of something which never existed. We must adjust ourselves to the new light, rewrite our hymns, revise our Discipline, and rejoice that one D. M. Geddie has brought new light into the theological world.

An effort was made long ago to correct this false doctrine by one Pelagius. "But the world do move." The true light has come!

CHURCH DEDICATION AT PRAIRIE STATION.

The new church at Prairie Station, Prairie Circuit, Aberdeen District, was dedicated on Sunday, Oct. 25, 1908, by Rev. J. H. Mitchell, presiding elder. Prairie is a small town on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, eight miles west of Aberdeen. The charge was served by Rev. R. G. Porter last year and the present up to the time of his death. It was an ideal day. The autumn air was bracing; the prairie roads, after the long dry spell, were in fine condition, almost like a pavement. People from the village and surrounding country, with representatives from adjacent towns, were present, and the church was well filled with a congregation of excellent people. Sister Porter and a daughter, Mrs. Alice Hawkins, were present.

Rev. Amos Kendall, of Aberdeen, and the writer assisted in the dedication services. The sermon by Brother Mitchell was an appropriate discourse from that beautiful text, Solomon's Song vi, 10: "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?" After the sermon a balance due on the church was provided for. Then the officers of the church and a number of ladies who had been active in the work were called to take their positions in front of the chancel; and the house was presented, to be set apart from all unhallowed and common purposes for the worship of Almighty God; and was received in due form by the presiding elder.

Services concluded, a sumptuous and elegant dinner was spread outside the church, and it was greatly enjoyed by the congregation.

In the afternoon, in connection with the Quarterly Conference, a memorial service was held in honor of the ascended pastor. Short addresses were made by Brother Kendall, Hon. James Gordon of Okolona, the writer and Brother Mitchell.

It was a red-letter day in the history of Prairie Church. The congregation rejoiced in the completion of their work, and the large gathering sympathized with the congregation in their gladness. The prevailing sentiment might have been voiced in the words, "We have had a good and profitable day."

The church was finished, and complete in its appointments; comfortably seated, neatly painted without and within; having a recess behind the pulpit for the organ and choir. The windows were all beautiful memorial windows, one of which bore the names of Rev. R. G. Porter and Rev. J. H. Mitchell.

Some of the congregation had been slow to yield their preference for the old location, a mile or so in the country, where for many years they were wont to assemble for the worship of God, a place hallowed by many sacred memories and associations—yet this glad day witnessed a loy people, united and joyous in their new house worship.

Brother Porter had looked forward with gra ful and pleasant anticipations to this dedicati day, the crowning day of his year's labors. H presence would have added life and joy to t occasion, for he was greatly esteemed and lov by his people. Their joy on this day was ming with sorrow for the recent passing away of th honored pastor. But was he not with us, thou unseen, rejoicing with his people in the succ of their labors and of his own plans?

The dedication of the new church at Prai Station inaugurates a work which shall be la ing for good, tending to the moral and religio uplift of the community, the salvation of soul and the upbuilding of our Lord's kingdom in th beautiful prairie country.

COFFEE TALKS.

No. 2.
Strength.

A prime essential of a good coffee is strength. Not that everyone appreciate strong coffee: some prefer a weak decoction. But if the coffee itself is fresh and strong, a small quantity is sufficient for ordinary purposes. If it is not, a small quantity will make a flat, insipid drink and it will require an enormous amount to make any showing for strength. A strong coffee is therefore the most economical. That is one of the reasons why is so popular to-day that it is sold everywhere; —it is a DOUBLE STRENGTH coffee, requires only one-half so much and goes twice as far as the ordinary kind. Six million pounds of this coffee are consumed annually.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

"Then they said one to another, we do not ell: This day is a day of good tidings, and we ld our peace; if we tarry till the morning ght, some mischief will come upon us: Now erefore come that we may go and tell the ing's household." II Kings 8-9. John R. Mott s said: "To have a knowledge of Christ is to cur a responsibility to every man who has not." he need of the heathen too often escapes us. he multitude of Christian people have no conception of what heathenism means. While the esponse to our Master's call, "go"—"tell," is not hat it should be by far, yet, thank God, we can y neither is it what it once was. I cannot tell of any great progress in our Conference Society, but can say with joy that the work shows signs of healthy growth and development. While we are not keeping abreast of many Conference Societies, we are beyond some, so we have a right to feel encouraged, and I want to tell it to all our workers; since our annual meeting there have been six adult, three young people's and three juvenile organizations. There have been others mentioned but not regularly reported. Some district secretaries, notably of Corinth, Sardis and Oxford, have wrought well during the summer, and I dare say the others will fall into line now that cooler weather has brought a return of many from vacation pleasures. As to the amount of money paid, I will merely give the totals by districts: Winona District, $161.30; Corinth, $471.01; Columbus, $281.12; Aberdeen, $187.05; Sardis, $133.45; Greenville, $125.04; Oxford, $412.14; Durant, $194.90.

Our number of specials has been increased by several, and one or more study circles have been formed. If we can induce our people, both adult and young, to read more on missionary subjects, we will have gained several points in the right direction. In order that the best service may be obtained, mind and heart must be dedicated to the Lord. We feel the need of informed as well as consecrated leaders in the Church. Intellect touched by the Spirit is power. I do urge the organization of more study classes. A marked increase of interest is manifest wherever they are found.

The fact of not having a student in the Training School this session causes deepest regret. We are doing the next best thing—allowing our sister Mississippi Conference the use of our scholarship, praying that God may touch some one of our young women's hearts with a definite purpose, leading her to use the scholarship next session. Our week of prayer and thanksgiving is drawing near. Let me urge every auxiliary society to observe it. May it be a time of gracious privilege, when the women of the church in daily concert lift up their hearts unto the Lord for the special outpouring of his Spirit. Programmes are carefully prepared for these services. They will add knowledge and increased interest and constrain each one present to earnest prayer. Let us, as a Conference Society, take courage, thank God for past success, push on to higher attainments in the future, feeling sure that "God is able to do exceeding abundantly above all we can ask or think."

A JOINT MEETING.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Greenville District met in annual session in Leland, Miss., October 23rd, 24th and 25th.

Mrs. E. D. Lewis, secretary of Home Mission Society, and Miss Susie P. Trigg, secretary of Foreign, were present and presided over the sessions of business relating to their respective lines of work. With such competent, enthusiastic leaders, our work is sure to advance.

Rev. J. W. Honnoll, our Conference host, was on hand from time of first arrival of delegates to the close of meeting, ministering to our wants, and assisting in every possible way to its success. His presence was a benediction.

About thirty delegates and visitors were in attendance. Many went to Leland for the first time but we needed only to glance at the smiling faces of the reception committee and to feel the hearty hand-clasp to convince us we were not strangers.

A royal welcome awaited us, both hearts and homes were open to receive us.

Among the visitors present we make mention of Mrs. Robt. Somerville, of Greenville, who contributed much to the success of the meeting by her practical talks and timely suggestions.

The meeting opened Friday night with addresses of welcome and response; address on Foreign Missions, and recitations, interspersed with sweet music rendered by the Leland choir.

Saturday was taken up with hearing reports of societies in the District. These reports show the work to be in a live, growing condition, but not what we wish, nor what we hope to make it; for Greenville District, considering her resources, should lead in this work.

On Sunday morning we listened to an inspiring sermon by Bro. T. H. Lipscomb, of Friars Point; Sunday afternoon a children's mass meeting was held. Sunday evening's service, which consisted of addresses, reports and appropriate songs, closed the meeting, and it was conceded by all to be a most successful one in every way.

Mrs. Lewis reports 21 adult auxiliaries and 2 juvenile, with a strong membership, having remitted for all purposes the past year $677.89.

Miss Trigg reports thirteen adult and two juvenile societies, with total membership of about two hundred. Amount sent treasurer last year, $601.11. Our district supports four scholarships, two in Mexico, one in Brazil and one in China. We intend to increase our financial report this year, as we have pledged to raise $100 over and above all funds previously paid for the purpose of making Miss Wasson, our missionary, an honorary life member. Our pledge money will go this year towards the support of Miss Daisy Dye.

We regret exceedingly to lose from our district Mrs. Lewis, who goes with her husband to Nashville to continue his studies in Vanderbilt. We hope, though, after Bro. Lewis finishes his course we may claim them again for Greenville District.

Mrs. Ridgeway of Boyle succeeds Mrs. Lewis as district secretary.

No invitation having been received to entertain the Conference next year, the place of meeting will be mentioned later.

MRS. G. JONES, Secretary.

A WORD FROM OKOLONA, MISS.

My Dear Dr. Boswell: A brief account of the work at Okolona, I am sure, will be interesting to many readers of the "Advocate." Our new church enterprise was put on foot more than three years ago, under the pastorate of Rev. N. A. Augustus. The building proper was begun under the pastorate of Rev. W. E. M. Brogan. Last year the Conference saw fit to remove from us Brother Brogan, who had wrought so well, and sent us the Rev. Robert A. Clark. The church building was rushed to completion early in the year, and by the last of June we were worshiping in our beautiful church, which will cost, when finished, in the neighborhood of $20,000, including lot. This year has marked the greatest growth the church has had for many years. The prayer meetings have more than doubled in attendance, the Sunday school has more than doubled, and by the time Conference convenes fully one hundred members will have been added to the church roll. The services of the church are well attended, and are spiritual. The young people are doing a fine work under the direction of the pastor in the Junior and Senior Epworth Leagues. The finances of the church, though we have been under the strain of building, will be in advance of anything we have done heretofore. The pastor will be able to report all the claims paid in full. In the beginning of the year we raised the salary $150, making it $1050, and some increase was also made in the Conference assessments, but, as above stated, everything will be paid in full. Realizing that we ought to make still further advancement, at the fourth quarterly meeting a week or so ago, the Board of Stewards unanimously voted to make the salary for another year $1250, and expressed a unanimous wish for the return of Brother Clark. Also suitable resolutions were passed relative to Brother J. H. Mitchell, our beloved Presiding Elder, who is finishing his quadrennium on the district. (See resolutions elsewhere). The women of our church have worked nobly, and their zeal, love for the cause and self sacrifices have had a large part in the planning and completion of our church.

We have a large number of young men and young women in the church who are willing to do anything for the advancement of the church work, and a great work is being done by them in their Leagues. As a whole, our work is in a very fine condition, and we hope to do even better things in the future.

F. J. McDONNELL,
Chairman Board of Stewards.

A TRIBUTE TO REV. R. [illegible] PORTER.

We, the members of the [illegible] Quarterly Conference [illegible] [illegible] of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, desire to express our profound [illegible] for the untimely [illegible] of our beloved pastor, Rev. R. [illegible] Porter, and the irreparable loss which we have sustained as a result of his departure from us. [illegible] is the loser—the gain is his. How true the declaration that, "in the midst of life we are in death!" Brother "[illegible]," as he was familiarly called, was in his seventieth year, and was winding up his fiftieth year in the ministry of the Church he loved so much and served so faithfully, all these years having been spent on districts, stations and circuits. He was a good preacher, explaining, illustrating and enforcing the doctrines, parables and moral principles of Christianity in a unique and original way. He was indeed a strong man in the pulpit. He knew how to break unto the people the Bread of Life, and to invite thirsty souls to the flowing waters of the Wells of Salvation. He also wielded the pen of a ready writer. He was remarkably gifted in this respect, as his "Book for Boys" and his hundreds of articles published in our Church papers abundantly prove. He was pleasant and cheerful, instructive and entertaining in the social circle. Optimism was one of his most prominent and distinguishing characteristics, scattering the exhilarating rays of unclouded sunshine wherever he went, and his going from us is lamented by all who knew him.

But as God buries his workmen and carries on the work, and all things work together for good to them that love God, we bow submissively to this divinely-inflicted stroke, looking forward to the time when, through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the promised guidance of the Holy Spirit, we shall meet and greet our brother again.

We commend the grief-stricken wife and all the dear children to that God who says, "Leave thy fatherless children; I will preserve them; and let thy widows trust in me."

Signed by: J. H. Haughton, Wheeler Watson, J. C. Gathings and Amos Kendall.

KEEP CLOSE TO THE BOYS.

Some fathers are not well acquainted with their boys. They know their names and faces, but do not know what they are doing when out of sight, nor where they spend their evenings, nor the company they keep, nor the aims they have in life, nor the principles which are being instilled into them. They are not on familiar terms with their sons. They do not have their confidence. It is indispensable to be very close to the son if one will help in the formation of his character. It is a great point gained when the son prefers the company of his father to any other company. Blessed is that father whose son's heart bounds with gladness when his father comes home and says, "Come, let us take a walk, or play a game, or talk about the book you are reading."

The victory is half won when the boy really enjoys the company of his father, but it is a [illegible] [illegible] when the father is [illegible] and indifferent [illegible] the interests and feelings of the son. When [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] If the [illegible] of the home is [illegible] and gloomy and the atmosphere of the saloon is [illegible] and bright, the boy will go away from the home to the saloon. It may be false sunshine that attracts him, [illegible] If the father will give close attention to his son he must not be grumpy and [illegible]

No one can abide in the heart of his son unless he is thoroughly sincere. He need not be learned, but he must be sincere. He may not be a philosopher, but he must be sincere. He may not be able to overwhelm his son with powerful arguments, but he must attract and hold him by his sincerity. A boy will understand whether his father believes the things he says or whether he is talking for effect. If he is not honest to the very core of his being his words will fall to the ground. But if he is thoroughly sincere a single word will weigh more than any logic. His words will be as apples of gold in baskets of silver. They will be like nails fastened in a sure place by the master of assemblies.—Christian [illegible]

THE FACT OF SIN.

[illegible] The character of [illegible] and the [illegible] [illegible] are not accounted for [illegible] Man is more than [illegible] [illegible] There is the [illegible] [illegible] Man [illegible] a being with the [illegible] This is not the [illegible] It is universal and belongs to the nature of man. However we may explain the fact, the fact remains. Sin is guilt. It is [illegible] not simply a transgression of natural law; it is the transgression of the law of right, the highest law of our nature. The law of right carries with it the recognition of One over us to whom we are responsible. There is One to whom the law of right [illegible] is fundamental in the government as it is [illegible] [illegible] Sin separates [illegible] It cannot be otherwise. [illegible] will [illegible] rises [illegible] in his [illegible] the [illegible] Nothing [illegible] infinite [illegible] separation [illegible] attribute [illegible] Love and right cannot be separated [illegible] for [illegible] He cannot lift [illegible] he cannot work [illegible] he cannot set [illegible] moral [illegible] There [illegible] inertia [illegible] evermore [illegible] greater [illegible] our [illegible] nature [illegible] All are included under sin; all are separated from [illegible] There is no [illegible] for him [illegible] there is no hope of deliverance from the power of sin and from its guilt except through the atonement of Christ. The love of God was revealed in Christ, but it was so revealed as to emphasize the guilt and helplessness of man. He [illegible] his Son, but gave him as the sin-bearer. He laid upon him the iniquity of us all. He gave him to bear our sins in himself on the cross. No suggestion is given of any other possible reconciliation with God, or of deliverance possible in any other way. Only by the death of Christ is there salvation.

For our present purpose we make no reference to any theory of the death of Christ but [illegible] the fact of the atonement. He died [illegible] his death is our salvation. We [illegible] what the [illegible] fact of [illegible] means—[illegible] separation from God, helplessness, utter [illegible] helplessness before God. Over against this is the [illegible] love of God, resting upon his [illegible] in the atonement, calling, calling to men of every tribe and condition, calling to us individually, "Come unto me and be saved." "Whosoever cometh I will in no wise cast out."—United Presbyterian.

THE ABUNDANCE UNDERGROUND.

BY HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.

"The windmills are very picturesque. I knew they were plentiful in Holland, but I didn't know there were so many of them anywhere in this country. I suppose they are useful as well as ornamental."

The big brown rancher looked at his questioner with a little smile, as if he fancied she were joking. Then, meeting the serious gravity of her look, he checked his smile.

"Well, yes'm. They're pretty useful. I reckon that's the part we're especially interested in. You see, we haven't had any rain this winter, but we've got to have the water."

The stranger looked around her with new interest. The luxuriant green of the fruit trees charmed her eyes, and, beyond, long rows of thrifty vegetables stretched until they seemed almost to meet. "But doesn't the supply of underground water ever run out?" she questioned. "Do your windmills always pump what you need?"

"Always," the other said confidently. "Up on the surface we have our dry years. If we trust to the rain we're more than likely to be disappointed. But there's plenty of water underground."

That California dialogue was recalled long after when a young girl complained of the heartlessness of the world. "Nobody cares what happens to anybody else," she declared accusingly. "We all want good times ourselves, and we don't care how much suffering and unhappiness there is if it doesn't come near us."

Her words were interrupted by a bit of startling news. A warehouse near the water's edge had collapsed. Most of the workmen were out of it at the time, and one or two who had lingered behind their mates had already been rescued. But a boy employed about the place was missing, and was thought to be buried in the debris.

All night the crowd stood about the ruins while the search went on. After a time a faint sound was heard, as if someone had knocked feebly against a piece of metal. The crowd went wild with excitement as the word was passed along, and then hushed to listen for another sound. The rescuers were working wildly. The boy was alive. They must reach him in time.

By and by they had removed enough of the debris so that they could speak to him. They found he was injured, suffering and frightened. They took turns in cheering him. Brawny men bent over the pile of rubbish, calling down tender, encouraging words. A young man with a sweet voice began to sing the hymn, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," and many voices in the crowd took up the refrain softly, and in the darkness of the night tears ran from eyes not used to weeping.

It was dawn when they took him out, a frail, limp, pathetic little figure. It was only the life of an untaught, hard-working boy that had been saved, but the crowd went wild again. Cheer on cheer rent the air. Men who had passed a sleepless night went home with a sense of gladness that drowned out all thought of weariness; the boy [illegible] was safe.

"It's wonderful!" said the girl who [illegible]

CANDY OR CHINA?

BY EMMA [illegible]

"Oh, I do hate to wash dishes!" sighed Elva Forrest, as she lifted the breakfast plates and [illegible] in the rinsing water.

"Mrs. Bassett says Kitty likes it," replied Mrs. [illegible]

"Well, I should [illegible]," Elva [illegible] as pretty china as she has to have. When I was over there to tea I wiped the dishes for Kitty, and they were so lovely—all violets and lilies-of-the-valley and tiny gilt bands. I do not wonder that Kitty likes to wash such dishes."

Elva hoped her mother would say, "Well, we'll have some new ones," but instead she only asked: "How much money did Uncle Mart give you a fortnight for candy?"

"Fifteen cents," the little girl answered. "I get a quarter of a pound of those chocolates with nuts inside."

"I saw some very pretty cream pitchers at Conklin's the other day, for only fifteen cents," Mrs. Forrest remarked.

For a minute Elva did not seem to see any connection between the cream pitcher and her candy money; then her face grew bright and she said: "Oh!"

Her mother smiled. "I think you are eating almost too much candy nowadays, and if you wish to spend any of your money for china instead of chocolates I am very willing, and I am sure Uncle Mart won't care."

"I will," cried Elva. "Oh, that will be lovely! Uncle Mart gives me [illegible] and I'd a great deal rather have some pretty dishes to wash and [illegible] without the candy. I'll take the fifteen cents and [illegible] right down and get that little pitcher this afternoon. May I?"

The candy money came in quite plentifully, for Uncle Mart and Aunt [illegible] were generous with their little niece, and Elva's pieces of pretty china made her heart glad. Every week she added something to her store. [illegible] saved the [illegible] be added to her next gift, in order to buy a larger, or more costly dish.

[illegible] began saving her money, and then the morning she and Uncle Mart went to town together. They visited several crockery shops before the two were [illegible] satisfied, but when they went [illegible] a queer-shaped [illegible] and Elva's little purse was quite empty. The next day Mrs. Forrest found beside her plate at breakfast a beautiful china nut-dish, with [illegible] handles. Mamma was delighted, and it was just such a dish as she had long wanted.

A FANCY.

I like to imagine that there is an invisible telephone line stretching between my Father's house and me.

As early as possible in the morning, I like to take down the receiver and after saying, "Dear Father in heaven," wait until the assurance of His presence at the other end of the line fills my heart and soul with peace. Then, waiting in the hushed joy of the silent communion, I gather my strength for the day and do not feel the necessity of much farther prayer than this, for I am persuaded that He knows my needs most perfectly—my needs for just this day, and He has the work and the blessing already prepared. Or, if it be that it is sorrow and burdens that wait, rather than gladness and ease, [illegible] it matters, when all through the hours I can reach Him at any moment if faith fail or courage turn to weakness.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE REPORT.

The Publishing Committee, representing the Louisiana, North Mississippi, and the Mississippi Conferences, met in the Advocate Office Tuesday, Nov. 10th, with all present except Dr. Sullivan, who met with a painful accident some weeks ago, and was unable to attend. Rev. J. W. Boswell, D.D., was re-elected editor for another year and he announces that Rev. H. Whitehead will continue as assistant editor. Mr. Charles O. Chalmers continues as business manager under the old contract for three years longer. The editorial work and the business management of the paper were carefully reviewed and approved by resolutions of commendation.

It has been a hard year for the paper. Its business, like other interests of our country, has suffered shrinkage during the distressing depression of business. The business manager was able to report a clean balance sheet at the expense of his private interests. From the net earnings of the paper, Mr. Chalmers realized only fairly good interest on the $10,000 he has invested in the business with nothing left to compensate him for his services. The outlook for another year promises no more, if as much, as the one just closed.

The Advocate needs and must have the active support and financial help of our Methodist people throughout Louisiana and Mississippi, and must have it now. It is too much to ask of the editor and manager to give their services through the Advocate to the Church at financial loss and personal sacrifice, while the Church withholds from them the support she owes, and which these brethren have a right to expect.

Some necessary changes are soon to be made in the paper, which will add to its attractiveness. With the limited means at hand, it is marvelous that the Advocate force is able to give the Church as good a paper as it does. Brethren, how much longer will we require our servants to make brick without straw? Fraternally,

CHAS. W. CRISLER,
For Committee.

BIGOTRY AND LIBERALISM.

The question of putting the Bible in the public schools is one that interests the people. Some favor it, others oppose it. Not long since there appeared in the department of "Letters from the People" in the Times-Democrat, from a Baptist brother who favored the reading of the Bible in the schools, provided such passages as he supposed pointed specifically to Baptist belief should be selected. Unless this should be done, he objected to the use of the Book. In other words, if Baptists could be employed to do the reading or dictate it so as to give the reading a Baptist bias, it would be all right. Otherwise the Bible must be kept out of the public schools. This is bigotry pure and simple.

On the other hand, in the same department of the Times-Democrat of Nov. 3, we find the "Demands of Liberalism." The demands are nine in number. We herewith present them to our readers, as an evidence of the spirit that animates some men in this Christian land of ours:

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall be no longer exempt from taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in the Legislatures, in the Navy and Militia, and in prisons, asylums and all other institutions supported by the public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a textbook or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitution of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privileges or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly and promptly made.

We hope the author of the nine "Demands of Liberalism" will not think us impertinent if we add another:

10. That the churches and schools, and government, and all the people, be handed over to the devil to be used by him at his will.

With the Roman Catholics and Jews, Baptists and Liberalists in opposition, it is no wonder the Bible is ruled out of our public schools.

FISHERS OF MEN.

When Jesus called Peter and Andrew he said "follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Whether they understood the full import of the words it is unnecessary to inquire. They obeyed. They left their nets and followed him, "for they were fishers." Why these men were so prompt in obedience is because they had been deeply impressed by the preaching of Jesus, and awed by the miracle he wrought on the occasion, which miracle is detailed by St. Luke. They recognized his authority. He appealed to them in a language they understood, and proposed an occupation they had followed all their lives. No matter whether men were to be caught in great draughts in nets as fishes were at this time, or one by one, as fishes are taken by a baited hook, they understood the art, and were ready for the undertaking.

Fishing cannot be classed as a science; it is altogether an art. Still, in order to succeed, those who fish must know something about it, and possess a degree of tact at angling. It is a fact that some men can catch fish, and some cannot. We have seen two men side by side, with hook and line and bait exactly alike—fishing at the same depth, both just as earnest and just as anxious, but one caught fish and the other got none. Fishermen said "one was lucky, the other was not." We attempt no explanation.

Dr. Whedon, in his Commentary, says: "The comparison of the preacher to the fisherman, as derived from the passage (Matt. iv. 18-20), was a favorite idea with the early writers of the Christian Church. Fish in the waters are as sinners in the world. It is the preacher's art so to bait the hook of divine truth as that, with ready appetite, the sinner will receive it and be captured for salvation. Hence there was a striking accordance, and perhaps even an intended typeism, between the early engagements of these men and their subsequent profession as apostles."

Preachers are still fishers of men. As the waters yet abound in fish, so the world is yet full of sinners. And sinners to-day are as careless and indifferent to their soul's interests—in many places as godless and defiant—as at any period of the world's history. Nowhere and at no time, independently of God's grace and quickening power, are they inclined to seek salvation. If they recognize the claim of Christ at all, they regard it lightly or spurn it altogether. They must be saved. The gospel must be carried to them—thrust upon their attention. Soul-savers must go after them as fishermen go after fish. Otherwise they can never be caught. Fish search for food, but they never go out of their element to take a hook, or jump into a net.

Those who, in the early days, went out to catch men carried with them only the pure and simple gospel. They delivered it with zeal and unction, believing it to be the power of God unto salvation. Peter witnessed and helped to effect the miracle when, at the command of the Master, the net was let down and "enclosed a multitude of fishes." He took part also in the first great "catch" of men after the Lord's ascension, when, on Pentecost, he and his fellow-disciples gathered in three thousand souls. From then on to this day, with hook and net, one by one, and sometimes by multitudes, God's fishermen have been catching men.

The gospel does not change. It never can. The truth is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. It is still the one thing that attracts and catches men when rightly presented, and proves that God yet has power on earth to forgive sins.

The methods change, the fishermen die and are succeeded by others, for God's work must go on, but the fish and the bait are just what they were when Peter cast his hooks and dropped his nets in the waters of Gennesaret.

PERSONALS.

Miss Ella Keener, daughter of the late Dr. John O. Keener, and granddaughter of Bishop Keener, was married in St. Louis, Nov. 11, to Mr. Ernest T. Chudwell, of Nashville, Tenn.

"Died-in-the-wool Methodist" is the sort of Methodist Rev. B. P. Jaco, presiding elder of the Corinth District, is said to be by the Red Bay (Alabama) Methodist. We had an idea that Brother Jaco was very much alive.

Rev. H. B. Thomason, of the Louisiana Conference, has been transferred to the Oklahoma Conference, which closed its annual session last week. We have not yet learned his appointment.

Rev. J. A. Wells, of Vimville, Miss., reports a good year. There have been at least one hundred and fifty professions of conversions and sanctification, and forty-five or fifty added to the Church. At the late Quarterly Meeting, Oct. 31, good reports were made.

The day after our paper went to press last week we received a list of eleven new subscribers and three renewals from Rev. H. M. Young, of Belzona, Miss., hence his name does not appear in the printed list. We thank Brother Young and will give him due credit next time the list is printed.

Rev. E. L. Cargill, writing from St. Francisville under date of Nov. 10, says: "We expect to begin a revival meeting to-morrow evening. Brother T. M. Buley will do the preaching, and Brother R. W. Jeffrey will have charge of the singing." We hope the meeting will be crowned with great success.

We thank Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Ellis for an invitation to the marriage of their daughter, Mabel Clare, to Rev. John W. Chisolm, of the Mississippi Conference. The wedding will be solemnized at 8 o'clock Thursday evening, Dec. 3, at Montrose, Miss. May they have a prosperous voyage through life.

A piece of news comes to us by way of Houston, Texas, to the effect that Rev. J. E. Wray, of New Orleans, who has done four years of splendid service at First Church, will be transferred to the Texas Conference. We sincerely trust this is a mistake. Brother Wray is an active and efficient worker and one of the finest preachers in our connection.

Rev. J. M. Alford, of Bunkie, La., says in a private letter to the editor: "Notwithstanding the unprecedented bad crop year, boll wevil, etc., in this section, I am going to report Baker circuit up to anything it has done in the past, though we may not pay all the assessments, as we had over one hundred dollars more this year than was ever assessed before."

We thank the brethren of the three Conferences, one and all, who have kindly expressed gratification at our return to the ADVOCATE for another term. One brother who has done most excellent work for the paper, says: "I hasten to assure you that I shall try to give the ADVOCATE better support than I ever have." We heartily appreciate all the kind words received.

Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, writing to the editor, expresses sorrow that, on account of his affliction, he was unable to meet with the Publishing Committee last week. He is still in his "rolling chair" improving, and hopes to meet the brethren at Water Valley. We would greatly rejoice to see him there. We thank him for kind words. We greatly appreciate them.

Rev. J. O. Bennett, of Mer Rouge, La., is a good friend of the ADVOCATE. He has sent us many subscribers during the year, and writes that he is "getting up another club of ten and will send the names in a few days," and adds, "I am doing what I can to increase the subscription list in the bounds of my work. We now have more ADVOCATES than we have Methodist homes in the Mer Rouge circuit." Who can beat that?

Rev. J. A. Goad, of McCool Charge, North Mississippi Conference, is closing his third year on that important work, and will make a good report at Conference. He is held in high esteem by the people of McCool, regardless of denomination. The McCool Item speaks in praise of Brother Goad's preaching, especially of his two last sermons at McCool. The Item expresses the hope that he will be returned for another year.

Dr. Sawyer kindly furnishes us the following personal note: "The young pastor of the Bon Ami charge, on the Kansas City Southern Railroad, Rev. Robert M. Brown, is doing a fine work in his hard field. He is held in high esteem, not only by his flock, but by the entire community of Bon Ami and Carson. He has large congregations and his preaching and faithful pastoral work is accomplishing much good. He will make a creditable showing on the Conference collections, and the spirituality of his people has grown greatly. Brown is a useful man."

From a reliable source we are glad to be able to report that both Centenary and Mansfield colleges are moving on well. Additional students are still entering and the faculties and student bodies of both institutions are doing faithful work. Each college should, however, have very many more of our boys and girls to develop into cultured Christian men and women. That would be so if very many more of our Methodist fathers and mothers could be brought to realize the necessity of a Christian education for their children. Still the outlook is brightening.

More than once have we seen it stated that the Rev. Dr. McIntyre, now a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was converted in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, St. Louis, under the preaching of Rev. Mr. Bushong. As a matter of fact, the Rev. Mr. Bushong never preached in a Southern Methodist Church in St. Louis. The preacher on the occasion was Rev. J. W. Cunningham, who still lives in St. Louis. The particulars are detailed in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of Nov. 9. In a letter to Brother Cunningham Bishop McIntyre says: "I never knew who preached that night, but thought he was Rev. Bushong, whom I had seen the day before. But if you had anything to do with that night's work, eternity will not be long enough to exhaust my gratitude to you." Brother Cunningham's correspondence with Bishop McIntyre ought to settle the question.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Among the last announcements which our pastors in Mississippi will make, let me ask them to include Millsaps College. Tell our friends to send in their payments for 1908, if they please, and to send them Now.

LOWER COAST MISSION.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We are just closing our second year in the regular pastorate of "The Lower Coast Missions." Our Sabbath school has done very well this year under the efficient leadership of our worthy superintendent and steward, Brother Arthur Lee. His teachers are earnest and sincere and we believe their work will tell in after years in the young life of the Church now growing up. We are praying that God will lay his hand upon some of these young boys and girls now growing up and "send them forth into the harvest." The church membership is not all we wish it to be, but it is all that can be expected owing to the different denominations represented in the settlement. We are counting on the generation now growing up. Our finances are about as good as any country appointment. The pastor's salary will be paid up in full, if not over the assessment. Some of the other collections will be paid up in full and some will not owing to the condition of the work being a mission itself. Brethren, pray for "Wesley Chapel;" there is splendid "timber" growing up here that can well be used in the founding and building of the Church in future years.

GOING TO WATER VALLEY.

Brethren who will go to Conference by way of Holly Springs are advised that the trains connect as follows:

Frisco trains west reach here at 6:12 a. m., 8:55 a. m., 4:40 p. m., and 6:45 p. m. East bound trains are due at 8:55 a. m., 9:55 a. m., 6:50 p. m., and 10:37 p. m. Illinois Central trains leave for Water Valley at 9:44 a. m., and 8:30 p. m. Returning: 5:18 a. m. and 6:40 p. m. I shall be most happy to show passing brethren any courtesies possible.

ISAAC D. BORDERS.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Let me ask all our friends to remember that by or before Dec. 1, of this year we want the second installment on the Endowment Fund. I especially desire those who owe small amounts to pay in full if possible.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-four years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of them. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased membranes and makes a radical cure, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

Sunday School

By W. B. Campbell.

LESSON FOR NOV. 22, 1908.

Subject: "Solomon Anointed King." I Kings i, 32-40, 50-53.

Golden Text: "Know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind." 1 Chron. xxviii. 9.

King David could weep, grieve and mourn for his son Absalom, but he must not prolong his grief before the people. Absalom was the disobedient, wayward son, but his father loved him. The Father in heaven is ever ready to forgive and receive the penitent prodigal. No, the grief of the king must not be prolonged, and when Joab came in and remonstrated, David had but to call to mind that in olden times Aaron, the high priest, was forbidden to show his sorrow when fire from the Lord went out and devoured Nadab and Abihu.

Joab was a soldier and a general, and he foresaw approaching trouble. [illegible] he told the king that it was necessary that he should take an active and foremost part in affairs. David was aroused to the urgency of the occasion but not until after a jealousy had arisen on the part of the ten tribes toward the one tribe of Judah. David had tried to conciliate his old subjects for the preservation of peace, and had even appointed Amasa commander-in-chief of the army without giving any notice to Joab, who held that position.

The spirit of rebellion was only smoldering among the people. Sheba, of the tribe of Benjamin, arose and began to collect an army of the disaffected; he started toward the north, gathering followers as he went. David was [illegible] "Now shall Sheba [illegible] do us more harm than did Absalom."

Amasa was ordered to assemble his men of war and go in pursuit of the rebellious Benjamite. He was so slow in organizing the army that Joab, without any orders, and with the troops already under his command, made a rapid advance to capture Sheba. The force under Amasa came up to and joined Joab's force near Gibeon, and when the two generals met Joab's jealousy was so great that, in the same treacherous manner with which he killed Abner at the beginning of David's reign as king, he killed Amasa and left his body lying in the highway. For this cruel deed and for the death of Absalom and Abner, Joab afterwards paid the penalty with his own life.

The army continued on the march until Sheba was overtaken at the city of Abel, where he was slain and his followers dispersed. Joab then returned with his army to Jerusalem. Trouble would not remain away for long. War began again with the Philistines, and in four battles the Israelites were victorious, in the account of which the bravery of many of David's men is mentioned.

David was now "old and stricken in years." Yet still more sorrow was in store for him. Adonijah, the fourth son of the king, turned against his father, following in the steps of Absalom. He proclaimed himself king and had many followers, among whom was the old warrior, Joab, who had been so loyal to his royal master, and so alive to the interests of state that he violated the law of God, having the Jesuitical idea that the end justified the means. While this rebellion was being organized, Adonijah having already surrounded himself with courtiers and attendants, Nathan, the prophet, and Bathsheba, David's wife and Solomon's mother, held a consultation, the result of which was that Bathsheba should seek an audience with the king and remind him of his promise to her that Solomon should be heir to the throne. While Bathsheba was speaking with King David, the attendants announced Nathan the prophet. After rendering the homage due to him, the good old prophet [illegible] in which [illegible] Bathsheba pleaded for her son. [illegible] the prophet [illegible] Adonijah [illegible] made with the approval of the king and [illegible] had not shewed it unto thy servant, who should sit on the throne of my lord the king after him."

David's answer was without hesitation, and was [illegible] in words [illegible] renewing [illegible] that her son Solomon should be king [illegible] that very time he called [illegible] the king, Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada. When they were come into the king's presence he said: "Take my son Solomon, and bring him down to Gihon: let him ride upon mine own mule, and anoint him there king over Israel; and blow ye with the trumpet and say, God save King Solomon." The son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said: "Amen: the Lord God of my lord the king say so, too." Thus did the successor of Joab proclaim his loyalty. The king's commands were obeyed and Solomon at once took the reins of government, being king in truth even before his father died.

All the people of Israel were well pleased, and peace once more was [illegible] in the land of God's chosen people. The leaders of the last revolt were filled with fear lest Solomon consign them to the punishment they justly deserved. Adonijah came, panic-stricken, and sought the sanctuary of the Tabernacle, and, catching hold of the horns of the altar, said he would not come forth unless given promise that his life be spared, and that promise confirmed by the oath of King Solomon. The proverbial wisdom of the wise king was shown at [illegible] as he said: "If he will show himself a worthy man, there shall not an hair of him fall to the ground."

These events are all a part of the history of God's chosen nation, but from them, as from every part of God's Word, there is a lesson for all who read. Men go on from day to day filling up the time from the cradle to the grave, not having known that they were instruments in God's hand, working out the eternal purpose. So it is with us, however humble or obscure our path through life may be, we have our part in God's great plan of redemption, filling up his promise to Abraham and his seed, whether [illegible] or by faith in Christ, for "it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do, of his own good pleasure."

THE EFFECT OF PROHIBITION

Mida's Criterion, in its staff correspondence from Philadelphia, says: "There is not much activity in the wine and spirit market. * * * Our trade is at the present time contending against the greatest and most wide-spread movement for prohibition that it has ever been called upon to meet, and the uncertainty of the future is not conducive to large buying." The Kentucky correspondent of the same paper says: "The Kentucky whisky market is in the dumps. * * * The first ten days of March have fallen short considerably." Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular reports: "There is little of an encouraging nature from a business standpoint to report. Collections are slow. Railway returns continue to show declines. * * * In the wine and spirit trade all the reports that reach us are to the effect that trade is not of a satisfactory nature."—Exchange.

LAYMAN FINDS STOMACH CURE.

It is a generally admitted fact that among ministers and their families Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative. It is not often that the layman has a chance to "speak up in meeting," and hence these words from Mr. Joseph Murphy of Indianapolis, Ind., whose picture we present herewith:

Mr. Joseph Murphy

"All my life I had needed a laxative to cure my constipation and stomach trouble. I couldn't eat anything; I couldn't get what I did eat out of my system. I tried everything, because my work, engineer on a railroad train, makes it necessary that I feel strong and well. Finally it was my good fortune to meet up with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, through the recommendation of a friend. I took it, and was cured. That is some time ago, but I am still cured."

It can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1 a bottle. Send your address and a free test bottle will be sent to your home. If there is something mystery about your case that you want explained, write the doctor. For the advice or free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 668 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

PEARL RIVER CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, Presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, arranged for me to take this work as supply, so I reached the first appointment the fourth Sunday in January, and found the work in very bad condition spiritually. This work, the Pearl River Circuit or mission, embraces several hundred square miles of territory lying between the New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad and Pearl River, and south of the Columbia branch of the G. and S. I. R. R. It is populated largely by farmers, and some of them are doing well. Methodism used to be strong here, but for lack of pastoral attention I suppose they have fallen off, until now we only have three churches, neither of them being very strong, while the Baptists have been advancing all along until now they have twelve organized churches. I have seven regular appointments, one at a Baptist Church and three at schoolhouses, and there are three other places where we ought to have Methodist preaching. I have held protracted meetings at all three of my churches. At Peine's Chapel Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, presiding elder, did all the preaching, except one sermon by the pastor and two services conducted by an exhorter. Visible results: a toning up of a part of the membership and one accession to the church at Wesley's Chapel.

Brother J. C. Ellis came to us Monday night and preached till Wednesday night, but Circuit Court and sickness hindered us here.

Brother P. H. Howse came to us at Byrd's Chapel Sunday at 11 o'clock and remained till Thursday. Visible results: promises on the part of several of the church members to better living and twelve accessions to the church.

I have taken in twenty-one members in all this year and restored two to membership. So I think this work is in better condition now than it has been in some time.

C. O. MILLER, P. C.

TETTER

can be cured without much trouble. Don't give it up because your case is of long standing. If you have had your face or hands covered with Tetter, pimples or other diseases for many years, and have tried everything without success, do not despair, you can be as easily and quickly cured by Tetterine as a case a few day old. Others have tried it after many years suffering and have been absolutely cured in a short time. Try it. EPWORTH LEAGUE TOPIC.

November 22. The City of Christ: Matt. xxi, 10; Zech. viii, 1-8. (Home Mission Topic.)

In the Old Testament, the vision of the prophet describes the ideal Israel as dwelling in Jerusalem. In the New Testament; the dwelling place of the redeemed is called the New Jerusalem, and described with many symbols to set forth its glory. It is said that the Lord shall dwell in the midst of his people there. Of old the faithful men who turned not back when they met the trials that eset the way, were said to seek a city which hath foundations, whose maker and builder is God. The heart of man seems to turn to the city, and in spite of all that reason and experience tells of earthly cities, yet the drift of mankind over the whole earth is into them.

2. The city as it is,

The city first of all means crowded life. Here men are brought into close touch with each other, and readily fall into the evil ways of those surrounding them. The competition of the city life is intense, and the weaker are pressed to the wall and a large percentage of the people live in unhealthy and crowded homes, surrounded by influences which certainly do not tend to high ideals of moral living. The vices of men take an aggressive form, and strong tides tend to draw down every man that is caught in their currents. The city is the most lonesome. place in the world. You are surrounded by a multitude of people that do not know you, and that you do not know and do not care for. It is easy to drift into a spirit of indifference, that destroys the healthy respect for public opinion, which men naturally feel. The great churches are in the city, but it is impossible to know everyone who passes their doors, and many a needy man curses the Church, while the Church is putting forth its best efforts to reach the men who need it. There are great unreached masses in the city, who seem to know not God, and fear not man. And yet it is evident that before long the majority of the people will live in the cities, and the prevailing life of the city, will be the life of the nation.

3. The city for Christ.

The Church is to-day girding itself for the evangelization and redemption of the city. We suggest some things which are being done. The deaconess and the pastor are visiting from house to house and getting in touch with the people. The membership of the Church, both old and young, are being pressed into this same task, for it is personal contact with men, which counts for the most. Day nurseries and kindergartens are established to care for the small children, of the mothers who must go out to work. Night schools are established, and boy's and girl's clubs, where the social, physical, and spiritual sides of life are touched. In some cities boarding houses for girls are opened where at the lowest possible rates, without a tinge of charity, the girls may have a Christian home. This same spot is often a social center in which girls may meet their friends of evenings. No one can overestimate the value of such work rightly conducted. The Young Women's Christian Association has done a large work of this kind. No small thing has been done for the men and women of the next generation, in providing playgrounds for the children of this day. Two tasks are given to the Church; to lead men to the knowledge of the Christ, and to develop their lives to the point where they shall fulfill the Master's will. The Church as a whole should be concerned as to the accomplishment of these ends in the cities. Those who live in the cities should realize, that without exception, the Christ would go forth with them to reach the men, women, and children living on every side.

MEXICO AND PROHIBITION

The prohibition sentiment has even invaded Mexico as is shown by the following article in the El Paso Herald:

"Is the prohibition sentiment spreading even to Mexico? The state of Morella has just enacted a law prohibiting the sale of liquor by the glass to be drunk in the place where bought. Liquor may be bought and sold by the bottle only, and must be carried away. Many states have largely suppressed gambling of the worst sort by stringent laws and faithful enforcement. High license prevails nearly everywhere in cities, and the number of saloons in the various States has been greatly curtailed within the last few years. Police regulations are all the time being made more strict."—The Citizen.

Recently a vote was taken in Arkansas to determine whether the next legislature of that State should pass a State prohibition law. Only seventeen counties gave a majority against the proposition, fifty-seven favoring it, the majority in favor of the proposed law for the State being 22,034. It is safe to assume that Arkansas will soon join the ranks of prohibition Southern States.

SCOTT & BOWNE 409 Pearl Street New York

FROM VARDAMAN CIRCUIT.

Dear Bro. Boswell: We have had a glorious summer, and are very busy now getting ready for Conference. When we first came here (July) we were made to feel welcome in many ways. We were given a pounding, which we appreciated greatly, and everything since has convinced us that we came to the right place. Surely, these are among the best people of earth. One hundred and eighteen members have been taken into the church; one church organized, with a membership of 71; 16 infants baptized; 3 prayer meetings organized.

We were fortunate in securing the services of Revs. W. S. Lagrone, W. L. Graves, Joe Ingram, W. A. Bruner, T. A. West and R. P. Goar.

Brother West lives in Texas; was out here visiting, and did some splendid preaching. The other brethren are all living in North Mississippi; are all consecrated men and too well known for further comment. I learned to love each of them and hope to have the pleasure of working with them again. Our new congregation is building a house of worship. They will name the Church Grave's Chapel in honor of W. L. Graves, of Houston, who preached during our meeting there. Vardaman hopes to have a handsome house ready for use by the middle of January.

The Lord is blessing us wonderfully and we have many reasons to praise his holy name. Pray for us.

Yours in the Master's cause,
ARTHUR G. HALL.

FROM PACHUTA, MISS.

Dear Advocate: I am now on my last round, which closes my quadrennium on the Pachuta charge. As I look back over the four years' work, I see many mistakes and failures, but I feel greatly rejoiced that many have been blessed along the way, and about one hundred and fifty have been converted and joined the Church. We have had fine revivals on the charge this year, the best since I have been on the work. The following brethren have rendered faithful service in the meetings: Brothers G. D. Anders, W. R. Harvel, W. W. Graves, P. H. Howse and J. H. Williams. These brethren will not soon be forgotten by my people. My last meeting was held at Salem last week. The preaching was done by the pastor. We have received about thirty-five on profession this year.

Three of our faithful members have died recently. Brother John E. Evans, of Pachuta; Mrs. G. W. McRee, of De-Soto, and Mrs. J. R. Price, of Adam's Chapel. We feel that all have gone home to rest.

This is a good charge. It is most [illegible] large for one man. I hope the day will [illegible] when it can be divided. We have all had fine health [illegible] who [illegible] afraid of [illegible]. The [illegible] has greatly blessed [illegible] and we [illegible]. Am praying that I may have a full report at Conference.

We have two [illegible] Epworth Leagues—one at D[illegible] and one at Orange. Both were helpful in our revivals and are doing fine work among our young people.

May God bless our Great Church.
L. F. ALFORD.

FROM EROS, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have had thirty-three accessions to the church on the Eros Charge this year, and baptized [illegible] infant children. Ceiled, painted and furnished the parsonage; papered two rooms and built a nice yard fence. Held my own meetings, save three days. Have forwarded to Brother W. B. Thomson, treasurer, $66 on missions. Collections nearly in full, though they are about 120 per cent above what they were last year. Have built an altar rail, and have some money on church debt. Congregations are good. Sunday schools are doing substantial work. A few subscriptions for the Advocate taken, and a few family altars erected. Yours,
J. J. KELLY.

FIFTH STREET, MERIDIAN

Dear Dr. Boswell: We are starting off well at Fifth Street Church. The work is moving on nicely. We had the embarrassment of being a stranger. We have made 150 family pastoral visits; received 17 members. Our Sunday school is large, enrolling nearly 300—91 in the home department. We have a cradle roll, a study circle, etc. We have Junior and Senior Leagues. Our mission societies are active. The church suffered much in the illness of its pastor for most of the year, but were loyal as could be. We have a good, active plant, and will do a great work in the cause of our Lord. C. M. CHAPMAN, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by Okolona Station, North Mississippi Conference.

Whereas Brother J. H. Mitchell is serving his fourth year as presiding elder of this (the Aberdeen) district, and, under our church government cannot be returned, and whereas this is the Fourth Quarterly Conference for the Okolona Station; therefore, be it Resolved:

First—It is with a deep feeling of loss and sorrow that we have to give him up as our presiding elder.

Second—That we recognize in him those qualities of mind and heart that pre-eminently fit him for this office, possessing, as he does, executive ability of a high order, and also knowing no such word as failure; untiring, energetic and consecrated to the Master's cause.

Third—We assure him of our love and confidence, and extend to him our well wishes and prayers for continued success and usefulness.

Fourth—That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Conference, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

READ WHAT VITAE-ORE IS.

Vitae-Ore is a mineral remedy, a combination of substances from which many world's noted curative springs derive medicinal power and healing virtue. These properties of the springs come from the natural deposits of mineral in the earth through which water forces its way, only a very small proportion of the medicinal substances in these mineral deposits being thus taken up by the liquid. Vitae-Ore consists of compounds of Iron, Sulphur and Magnesium, elements which are among the chief curative agents in nearly every healing mineral spring and are necessary for the creation and retention of health. One package of this mineral substance, mixed with water, equals in medicinal strength and curative healing value, many gallons of the world's powerful mineral waters, drunk fresh at the springs.

Was Nothing But Skin and Bones.

NEEDMORE, N. CAR.—I was taken sick with a cold two years ago and had some kind of a wheeze at the pit of my stomach. I thought perhaps I was going to have Consumption; I never was so sick before in my life. I tried everything and finally was examined by the best Doctors. Some told me I had Stomach Trouble, then Asthma. I thought my time was short. Every Spring and Fall I would have these attacks. My husband paid out over $1,000 for different medicines. I felt as though I was nothing but skin and bones. I could not even carry a pail of water or stoop to put wood in the stove. My husband had to assist me when ever I walked, I was so very weak. Then I was taken sick with La Grippe, and Bronchitis, and all thought I was going to die. I saw the Vitae-Ore advertisement and my husband wrote for it. When it came I stopped all my doctor's medicine. The second dose of Vitae-Ore made me so hungry I had to eat between meals. My appetite continued to grow better and I could eat meat, onions and corn bread. Before taking Vitae-Ore I only weighed 107 pounds; since taking it I have gained 25 pounds. Everybody is surprised to see me so stout and strong and I am better than I have been in the last two years. I work in the garden, milk my cow and do other chores.

MRS. A. H. WELCH.

Suffered Terribly With Kidneys.

Passed Large Kidney Stones, Had Palpitation of the Heart and Was Always Tired.

EDDY, TEX.—Vitae-Ore has proven to be a wonderful medicine for me. I was terribly bothered with my Kidneys and had tried different kinds of medicine until I had decided that none of them would do me any good. There is no telling how many stones I passed; the last one was mighty large and Oh! so painful. No one can realize what I suffered but those who have had this kind of Kidney trouble. I also had Palpitation of the Heart and could not sleep on my left side at all. It seemed like my heart would jump out through my side. I was always tired and could not do anything I wanted to do.

I saw the Vitae-Ore ad. like a drowning man catches at a straw, and when I read "We leave it to you to judge," I thought it was good enough for me, and wrote for a package. I had used it but a short time when I could tell a difference and when the month was up I sent for more. The second week after I commenced it I got back to doing some of my work and honestly believe that I walked twenty-five miles a day for a week, felt all right and slept well at night. Now I cannot praise Vitae-Ore too much, for it has been a God-send to me. I feel almost like a new man, better than for four years past. I eat well, do my work and sleep on my left side.

W. T. CURRY.

CURED OF INDIGESTION.

BRINSON, GA.—I was sick with Indigestion for five years, not able to do anything but sit and wish for death's relief. I had three of the best doctors, but all shook their heads and said I had it so bad that Heart Trouble had taken hold. I tried Vitae-Ore and in five days I could eat anything and have been in good health ever since. One package cured me two years ago and I have not spent one cent on doctors since.

MRS. TULA COWART.

Can you not give 5 minutes to write for it, 5 minutes to properly prepare it upon its arrival, and 3 minutes each day for 30 days to use it. That is all it takes. Cannot you give 100 minutes time if it means new health, new strength, new blood, new force, new energy, vigor, life and happiness? You are to be the judge. Rheumatism Cured at 80 Years.

MENOMINEE, MICH.—About six years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism in my shoulder, which caused me a great deal of pain in my neck, and my arms were stiff from the elbow down to the ends of my fingers. The pain passed to my other shoulder, and I suffered so terribly I could hardly turn over in bed and could not put on my clothes without great difficulty. The Vitae-Ore advertisement attracted my attention four years ago and I decided to give it a trial. Before I had used an entire package I felt much improved, but to make the cure entirely sure I used another package. Vitae-Ore cured me even though I was 80 years old. I recommend Vitae-Ore with pleasure and think it is the greatest preventive of sickness and disease. It would be a great blessing if everybody would give it a trial. I know it has helped me wonderfully; gave me an appetite, vigor and strength. I am now 84 years old, feel well and enjoy walking every day. People say it is wonderful at my age and I give the credit to Vitae-Ore.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

"Once again the season is at hand when, according to the ancient custom of our people, it becomes the duty of the President to appoint a day of prayer and thanksgiving to God.

"Year by year this nation grows in strength and worldly power. During the century and a quarter that has elapsed since our entry into the circle of independent peoples we have grown and prospered in material things to a degree never known before, and not now known in any other country. The thirteen colonies, which struggled along the seacoast of the Atlantic and were hemmed in but a few miles west of tidewater by the Indian-haunted wilderness, have been transformed into the mightiest republic which the world has ever seen. Its domains stretch across the continent from one to the other of the two greatest oceans, and it exercises dominion alike in the Arctic and tropic realms. The growth in wealth and population has surpassed even the growth in territory. Nowhere else in the world is the average of individual comfort and material well-being as high as in our fortunate land.

"For the very reason that in material well-being we have thus abounded, we owe it to the Almighty to show equal progress in moral and spiritual things. With a nation, as with the individuals who make a nation, material well-being is an indispensable foundation. But the foundation avails nothing by itself. That life is wasted, and worse than wasted, which is spent in piling, heap upon heap, those things which minister merely to the pleasure of the body and to the power that rests only on wealth. Upon material well-being as a foundation must be raised the structure of the lofty life of the spirit, if this nation is properly to fulfill its great mission and to accomplish all that we so ardently hope and desire. The things of the body are good; the things of the intellect better; but best of all are the things of the soul, for, in the nation as in the individual, in the long run it is character that counts. Let us, therefore, as a people, set our faces resolutely against evil, and with broad charity, with kindness and good-will toward all men, but with unflinching determination to smite down wrong, strive with all the strength that is given us for righteousness in public and in private life.

"Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, do set apart Thursday, the 26th day of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and on that day I recommend that the people shall cease from their daily work, and, in their homes or in their churches, meet devoutly to thank the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received in the past, and to pray that they may be given strength so to order their lives as to deserve a continuation of these blessings in the future.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this 31st day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eight, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-third.

Glances at the World.

Senator Carmack of Tennessee two weeks since was shot down in the streets of Nashville and instantly killed—a martyr to prohibition. Now comes the news that Attorney-General Heney of San Francisco, who so vigorously and successfully prosecuted the grafters, was shot by a man who was removed from a jury trying the chief of the grafters because it was discovered that he was an ex-convict and ineligible for jury duty. The man who did the shooting has since put an end to his own life. Fortunately, the shot at Mr. Heney did not prove fatal. He still lives, and will get well; and no doubt when he recovers he will continue his good work with as much energy and success as ever. Since the attack on Mr. Heney, the citizens of San Francisco have held a mass meeting and resolved to stand by the officers and courts in their efforts to ferret out crime, and punish the criminals. The task is a huge one—quite as great as was the task of Hercules when required to cleanse the stables of Augeas. Let us hope that they will be as successful.

Bryan's Commoner has this to say about the destruction of the birds: "The appeal of the Audubon Society for funds for the prosecution of bird-killers should meet with a hearty response. But, after all, would it not be better to begin a crusade against the bird wearers? The bird-killers would soon find their occupation gone if there was none to wear the birds after being properly mounted. The practice of wearing birds as personal adornment is responsible for the wholesale slaughter of the feathered songsters; and until 'woman, lovely woman,' ceases to adorn herself with the corpses of birds the cruel work will continue. 'You cruel boys,' exclaimed a woman when she saw some boys robbing a bird's nest of its young. 'What would the poor mother bird say if she could speak?' 'She wouldn't say nuttin',' retorted one of the boys, ''cause she's a roostin' on yer hat dis minute.' All appeals for the protection of the birds will be vain until the use of birds and feathers as articles of adornment is no longer prevalent."

The late election returns were surprising to not a few. The Socialists made more noise than all the minor parties put together—were not only surprised themselves, but their vote surprised others. They claimed that Mr. Debbs would poll a full million votes. But he got not more than 500,000. Even in the large cities, Chicago and others, there was a falling off from four years ago. The labor vote was likewise surprising, and we suppose Mr. Gompers was the most surprised man in the country. He utterly failed to control it. He did not turn the election in a single State. Labor was more independent than he and others supposed. The prohibitionists, too, were surprised. Elated by the success of the prohibition wave, the party prohibitionists counted on a greatly increased vote. They were disappointed. The figures have not yet been made public, but the impression is that Mr. Chafin got fewer votes than did Dr. Swallow four years ago. The prohibition sentiment has gained largely, and is growing constantly, but the prohibitionists prefer to look upon it, and treat it, as moral, rather than as a party measure. So our party prohibitionists, though disappointed, have no ground for chagrin or despair of the ultimate triumph of their principles. The people are determined on the destruction of the liquor business, and they will succeed.

We think it likely that very many of our readers have little knowledge of the means used by some leading churches in our cities to raise money. The Daily Picayune of this city furnishes the necessary information. In its issue of Nov. 17th occurs this bit of news: "The first of a series of euchres was given Sunday by the ladies and gentlemen of St. Vincent de Paul's Parish. The proceeds of the entertainment will go to the fund which is being raised for the purchase of new pews for the church, and the money made from the entertainments which will be given in future will be used for the same purpose." Personally, we know no more about "euchre" than we do about "jack-pot"—nothing at all. Both are games of gamblers. That the persons engaged in the games here mentioned played for stakes is evident from the fact that the names of those who won are mentioned. In other words they gambled. And note the fact that these gambling games were played on the Sabbath by faithful Christians, who, it is presumed, have not time for such things in the week. This is in perfect keeping with the conduct of one of the faithful who justified his Sunday ball playing by saying that his priest taught him that "by attending mass on Sunday morning he was free to do as he pleased the remainder of the day." Hence, Sunday afternoons are given over to pleasure—rides, ball games, to the theatre, and gambling and dancing parties.

The Hon. William F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, lately deceased, left what is characterized as "a unique will." The bulk of his estate—perhaps the whole of it, amounting to two million dollars—was left to his wife, but at her death the amount is "to go to Madison University in Wisconsin, only half the income to be used annually, and the other half to be invested and made to increase year after year by its gaining power. When this sum has reached twenty millions the amount of the net income to be used is reduced to one-quarter of all, which sum would far surpass the original one-half. When the whole has become thirty millions it shall be free from limitations in amount of income to be expended, but all shall be used as provided in the will. It probably will be at least two centuries before the twenty-million mark is reached." This will of Mr. Vilas is something after the order of the will of Benjamin Franklin, who more than a century ago gave one thousand pounds ($5000) to the city of Boston, which amount he provided should not be used, but allowed to accumulate until one hundred years had passed. Boston kept faith with Mr. Franklin, who evidently had confidence in the stability of the government and the integrity of his executors. Will Madison University keep faith with Mr. Vilas? Considerably less than one hundred years ago one philanthropist, John McDonogh, left a large sum of money for school purposes to the city of New Orleans, and a like sum to Baltimore. One supreme condition of the will was that "the Bible be used as one of the principal text-books." Baltimore keeps faith with John McDonogh. New Orleans has violated the sacred trust. There is a difference in men.

Bishop Hoss, in the Nashville Tennessean, pays the following tribute to his martyred friend, Senator Carmack, who was foully murdered on the streets of Nashville a few days ago: "It is impossible for me to write much. My heart is broken. Senator Carmack's death overwhelmed me. He was by all odds the greatest Tennesseean that has appeared in public life in this generation. As a Senator he commanded the admiration of the nation. In his whole career there is not the slightest trace or stain of dishonor. No dirty dollar ever touched his fingers. He came out of the Senate poor, and his friends knew it and were proud of it. He never engaged in bargain and intrigue; he never compromised principle for preferment; he never turned aside one hair's breadth from the straight path of truth and courage. Defeat did not break his spirit nor sour his temper. When Tennessee turned her back on him, the noblest of her sons, he kept his head erect and moved right onward. The evil forces that were banded against him did not dismay him; the slanders that were circulated to ruin him utterly failed to alter or modify the inflexibility of his purpose. Much as I loved him living, and unspeakable as is my grief over his death, I should rather see him wrapped in his shroud than to have him alive again and enjoying place and prominence at the expense of bartered manhood. Being dead, he yet speaketh. Human as he was, compassed with ordinary infirmities as he was, he yet had a heart as warm as a summer sea and a transparent simplicity of nature like that of a child. O, my dear, dear friend! Shall I ever look upon his like again?" Dr. Winton, editor of the Christian Advocate, in his tribute to the dead statesman, closes with the following words: "Senator Carmack has died the death of a martyr to the cause of civic righteousness and public sobriety, but his cause is not dead. Tennessee will rise in her majestic strength and, with ten thousand scourging thongs, drive from her borders her social enemies who have brought about the lamented death of her most gifted and gallant son. The prohibitionist is dead, but prohibition, the choicest flower in our public life, will spring from his grave to give fragrance and beauty to this fair State of the South. Gone is the great man, but forever will remain his great manhood. Editor, Congressman, Senator, Statesman, Christian, live on in the hearts of thy countrymen! And may thy eternity ring with the praises of those who have entered into thy labors, and who will live in the pure atmosphere made possible by thy sacrifice! May heaven comfort thy lonely widow and bring to a noble manhood thy fatherless son!"

REMARKABLE.

I have five aged members on my charge, the youngest of whom is over eighty-one years old. Brother Samuel Weems, father of Rev. J. M. Weems, is ninety-four years old. He is healthy in body and spirit. His mind is as clear on religion as it ever was. He is a deeply spiritual man. Has one hundred and thirteen descendants, and every one of them who has arrived at the years of accountability is a member of the Church. Sister Lizzie Bender is eighty-three years old, is a regular attendant at Church; is a very appreciative hearer and is an active member of the Woman's Home Mission Society. She is truly an elect lady. Brother Lod Moore, my uncle, and his wife, Elizabeth, are, respectively, eighty-seven and eighty-five years old. They stand in the faith waiting for the summons of the Master. They have been married sixty-six years and are as devoted to each other as a right young couple. Brother Willis Eichelberger has passed his eighty-first birthday; attends Sabbath School regularly and superintends the same. He talks about the heavenly verities as he does about the things around his earthly home. I had given me by a member of my Church a few days ago the first volume of the Methodist Magazine, which was published in 1818. In that volume is published a letter from George Washington, while President, to Bishops Asbury and Coke.

WALDO W. MOORE,
Pastor of Homewood Charge, Mississippi Conf.

PREJUDICE VS. CHRISTIANITY.

BY REV. J. M. ALFORD.

After reading the recent articles in the ADVOCATE about the "Baptist Drift," I am constrained to write under the above caption. I have read Dr. Boswell's editorials, also articles from Dr. J. M. Weems of Mississippi, Brother Peebles and "Circuit Rider," as well as communications from Brothers Woodward and Lowrey, of Louisiana. I note what they say about the ultra positions taken by the Baptist brethren.

The term "prejudice" comes from two Latin words, meaning "to judge before;" literally, to pass judgment before the evidence has been given. This is the primary meaning, but the modern and more common meaning is narrow-mindedness, and is, therefore, a synonym of unfairness and partiality, and always originates in a biased, not to say abased, mind. It delights in exclusion, and is a rank stranger to inclusion. It nurses hatred and fosters quarrels. It scorns the catholic spirit of our blessed Christianity, and hates liberality. It detests co-operation, and delights in circumscription. It honors pride, and despises humility. It breeds contempt for others and creates selfishness; is the product of ignorance, and the mother of bigotry. One able writer said: "Ignorance, prejudice and bigotry always follow each other in the sequence of a natural offspring." Indeed, ignorance is the only mother that ever did give birth to such an unfortunate progeny as prejudice and bigotry. It has been said, that prejudice always follows ignorance with a snubbed-nose contempt for all with whom it disagrees, guaranteeing a bountiful supply of mental and moral blindness. Fanaticism is akin to this thing we call prejudice. The prejudiced person has the misfortune to believe it is his duty to persecute others. It was this thing that kindled the fires of persecution of old and established the inquisition. Religious intolerance and barbarous cruelty are some of the natural products of this monster of hell, called prejudice. It ought to have died away with the "dark ages," but, sad to say, it is a legacy bequeathed to this generation—handed down to some churches of modern times. Is it not a wise saying that "tradition and not truth" is at the bottom of this thing called prejudice? When you hear one person trying to degrade others and prostitute their denominational tenets, and unchurch them because they do not hold to the same views, and do not accept his interpretation of certain passages of Scripture, and then disclaim social equality with them because they cannot pronounce the current "shibboleth," be it known it is prejudice!

That thing that denies me the right to all the privileges and graces of the Church of Jesus Christ, and says, "You are of the earth earthy," and "I am holier than thou," is modern Pharisaism pure and simple, and is the quintessence of prejudice! Some have tried to "corner" on the Lord's Supper. Did you ever see a Methodist co-operate with the Baptists in their meeting, and help to make it a success, and at the last service be invited to stand aside? The Communion is going to be administered now—to whom? To the legitimate children, of course! "All you that were born out of wedlock stay away! Christians? Yes, indeed—but not Baptists!" You have had a "feast of soul" with them all the week, rejoiced together "in hope of the glory of God," but now a Baptist communion is going to be observed; therefore, you are not worthy, because, forsooth, you have not been baptized. In other words, a Baptist Communion is much holier than communing together with the Lord on earth and enjoying his everlasting benedictions together in glory. Prejudice, O prejudice, where are thy bounds!

Now, this thing we call prejudice is not of modern origin. We find in the fifth chapter of Acts where the Jews were trying to kill Peter and the other apostles because they were "filling all Jerusalem with their doctrines." (Pity that [illegible] The truth is [illegible] between Michael and Satan [illegible] over the body of Moses the archangel durst not bring a "railing accusation" against Satan, but said "The Lord rebuke thee." Vengeance belongeth unto God. Let us not, therefore, stigmatize others as simply a "sect" or a "religious society," when we see they are increasing all the time in numbers and in zeal for the success of Christ's kingdom on earth. Not only were the Jews always prejudiced against the disciples, but we find the disciples prejudiced against others. In Luke ix. 49, 50 it says: "And John answered him and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name and we forbade him because he followeth not with us." Now hear the rebuke of Jesus: "And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us." How this reminds us of what Gamaliel said to the Jews! It is very plain here that the spirit of Christ is very different from the spirit of some denominations.

The Evangelist Mark gives us the same account of the prejudiced disciples that Luke does. In the 9th chapter and 38th verse we read: "And John answered him and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him, because he followeth not us." Now hear the timely rebuke of Jesus again: "Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water in my name because ye belong to Christ, verily, I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." Yet, Brother Jordan, in his article on the "Baptist Drift," is kind enough to warn us that our "works will be burned," as [illegible] all the Baptists who have "drifted" from the sacred principles of the Baptist Church. He is generous enough, however, to allow us to get into heaven "by the skin of our teeth—yet so as by fire." Our works are going to be burned, and we "suffer loss and shame at the coming of Christ," because, as he stated, our works have not been done as directed by the Baptist Church. Alas for the teeming millions who have never heard, and who may never hear, of this great essential and only [illegible] in the moral realm! But what of all the good churches [illegible] and yet have not [illegible] "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil," and hence [illegible] "will be burned up." This position taken by Brother Jordan [illegible] Church reminds me of a [illegible] going down the Mississippi River by the side of a great ocean steamer, and saying "You are not in it; I am [illegible] you are just a little [illegible] of wood, hay, stubble, and liable to be burned any time [illegible] I'm the only [illegible] the old ship of Zion—the only true and safe [illegible]." In other words, they say of others, "He followeth not us." Now, remember in that loving rebuke of Christ to John, he said: "Verily, he shall not lose his reward." That does not sound like "his works will be burned." Of course, this is the difference between Christ and one who is a victim of prejudice! It has [illegible] want to [illegible] followeth [illegible] connection, [illegible] damaging [illegible] Brother Jordan in half [illegible] whosoever shall offend [illegible] better for him that a millstone were hanged [illegible] sea." [illegible] and [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] world for [illegible] show your try [illegible] and thus [illegible] Yet this is [illegible] would do or say [illegible] against any church or individual who is striving to do the will of God.

If you are prejudiced against other denominations, you are evidently prejudiced against the Lord, for he is blessing and prospering them. They love the Lord, and when you oppose them, it is "Jesus whom thou persecutest." There have always been different modes and methods of carrying on the work of God in soul-saving, and I suppose there always will be. What did Paul mean when he said "there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit; differences of administrations, but the same Lord"? You remember, he used the physical body to illustrate the Church—the body of Christ. "As we, therefore, have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office, so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and everyone members one of another." The 12th chapter of I Corinthians and the 4th of Ephesians teach us of the unity of the Spirit and oneness of Christ, even though there be separate visible organizations. There is the one universal Church, of which Christ is the Head, and all those in the various organizations who are vitally connected with him by faith go to make up the membership of this spiritual, invisible Church.

Yet some people are so prejudiced that they cannot see Christ in anything save their own little denomination, which is but a fractional part of the whole. How little this world would be if all could be seen with the natural eye from one viewpoint! The sun is no larger than a [illegible] of silver half-dime to some people. A very small [illegible] placed near the eye will really shut out the sun from human vision. And so, a little, narrow-contracted, shriveled-up denominational [illegible] will shut out the great Sun of Righteousness, who wants to shine in our hearts, enabling us to get a proper view of God in his relation to us as our common Father. A new railroad went through the country, and a certain young man went out to the station to witness the sights. The following was his verdict when he returned home: "People shore do learn lots by travelin' 'round. If the world is as big the other way as the way I went, she's a whopper." [illegible] if Brother Jordan, and others, would look out a little from their own circumscribed views, [illegible] the scales of prejudice from their eyes, they would learn something. They would certainly have a larger vision of God. Elijah thought he was the only prophet who was left. But God taught him that many others there were who had not bowed the knee to Baal. Paul was prejudiced against the disciples until the Lord knocked him down and convinced him of his error.

Christ taught in the parable of the vine (John xv.) that all are disciples if they are bearing fruit. Christ made fruit-bearing the test of discipleship. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples." But it is evident that some people make water baptism, and a particular mode at that, the test! Brother Jordan would say, "Herein is my Father glorified that ye be immersed." Now, if I see any denomination bearing fruit to the glory of God, I am not going to try to encompass their defeat. When you see one denomination fighting another, it is to be taken for granted that they

[illegible] character [illegible] just what they had before the Reformation [illegible] prophecy [illegible] to pass. A [illegible] told me that the time [illegible] when there would be [illegible] Protestants [illegible] under the one name [illegible]. Soon after that I read in a Baptist paper that the [illegible] world was fast becoming [illegible] principles—rather [illegible] Jordan's "Baptist Drift." [illegible] the Episcopalians teaches [illegible] that they are the only true apostolic church. The Catholics say that the time will come when all the "heretics"—the Protestants—will return to the "mother church." Now, here are all three churches each one claiming to be the only true church. The question is, Which one is right? One has as much claim as the other. Each claims to take the Bible as a guide. The fact that there are great and good men in all these churches cannot be doubted; men of master-minds, and whose integrity cannot be gainsaid. One has as much right and as much authority as the other to claim "apostolic succession." Yet we find each one of these saying all others ought to come over to my way of thinking, and each claiming that others are really coming to him. In the name of common-sense, and in the face of facts, how can they make such claims? Do we not see the different churches prospering? Every year we find new members being added, and progress in missionary zeal and increased activity in the various enterprises of each church. Instead of their becoming just one, or even fewer, we find new denominations coming into existence from time to time, as God sees fit to call them out. God raised up the people called "The Methodists" to do a work that the churches extant ought to have done. But they were asleep, and God called on others. And when we fail to do the work which we have been called to do, God will simply be true to his established principles—do as he has always done in the past—call on others to "spread Scriptural holiness over the land" and give the pure gospel to the people!

As to the Baptists "drifting" from their former principles of so-called orthodoxy, perhaps Brother Jordan knows more about that than I do. I do know, however, that I see a more liberal spirit among them than I saw ten years ago. In this I rejoice because I see the Lord in it; but Brother Jordan grieves because he sees the devil in it. He is grieved because the prayer of Christ in the 17th chapter of John—"that they all may be one as we are one"—is being answered. I remember administering the sacrament to the superintendent of the Baptist Sunday school not long ago. This I did more than once. He said he loved his Lord better than he did a "useless law" of his church. In the same town they took a lady into their church without rebaptising her, who had been a member of the Christian (Campbellite) Church, because they did not want her to join the Methodist Church. Yet, I notice that Brother Jordan deplores the fact that the Christian world is becoming more unified, because, alas, it is contrary to Baptist principles!

As I read the article of Brother Jordan, trying to explain his position, I was impressed that it was one of those explanations that does not explain. The more I study the position they take as to who are the real Christians, and what con-[illegible]

[illegible] and moral refinement [illegible] where [illegible]

All this [illegible] we hear [illegible] about their being the only church—[illegible] as the spiritual aristocracy [illegible] ants and possessing the exclusive right to say who are, and who are not, in the [illegible] of the faith, as church members, makes me feel as if we had taken an order [illegible]. It is remarkable to notice what little sense some sensible people have!

MORE PRESIDING ELDERS AND MORE DISTRICTS.

BY REV. [illegible]

The Rev. J. M. Alford, of the Louisiana Conference, writes [illegible] article in the Advocate [illegible] I have seen on the above subject—in which I [illegible] agreement. That presiding elders are a necessity to the greatest harmony and greatest success of our Church has never admitted of a doubt in my mind. The [illegible] from the experience of thirty-four years in the itinerant ministry [illegible] contrast of harmony in keeping our pulpits filled under all emergencies, and all other churches with their various forms of supplying and keeping their pulpits filled with preachers. If a preacher dies or his pulpit is vacated from any other cause, the presiding elder, who is on the ground, knows the style of preacher needed, and also [illegible] the Bishop of the man, and [illegible] the congregation [illegible] with [illegible] preaching a single Sabbath.

Again, as to the changes of men from place to place, there is no man who knows the fitness of things between preacher and people better than the presiding elder, if he is a wise man, and he should always be a man of discretion and not [illegible] party cliques, with the best interests of the Church dominating and fairness between men striven for. Partiality should never enter into the make-up of a presiding elder.

But we often hear them spoken of in disparaging terms—such as "they no more visit with us; they are just after their stipend," etc. All of this is grating to any pastor who loves his Church, and it comes from the presiding elders being overloaded. He is a much harder worked man than formerly, but it does not tell upon the masses, because his coming [illegible] quick, and at a time they don't see him.

Mid-week appointments for a quarterly meet-[illegible] is a [illegible] far as spirituality goes. Of [illegible] and [illegible] referred to by Brother Alford [illegible] made up [illegible] days, and especially we [illegible] who are [illegible] country. [illegible] fifteen appointments [illegible] let the presiding elder be reinstated [illegible] give him some showing of assuming the responsibilities [illegible] as a father of his children, and a helper of his wife in their sacred [illegible] raise their children in the fear of [illegible] his home [illegible] great [illegible] in the [illegible]. Let us have more [illegible] can [illegible] the [illegible] dis-[illegible]

[illegible] our Bishops will have [illegible] districts never [illegible] country charge [illegible] presiding elder to [illegible] the people [illegible] of great value to them, which [illegible] the [illegible] Saturday and Sunday.

Again, we plead for smaller districts, [illegible] as [illegible] our Northern brethren in [illegible] districts there will [illegible] sentiment [illegible] in the next fifteen years [illegible] away with the presiding eldership altogether [illegible]

NEW ORLEANS, U. S. A.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE LOUISIANA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

Upon call from Chairman, Rev. C. V. Edwards of the Headquarter's Committee, the above body met in annual session in the First Methodist Church in Alexandria, Nov. 17th. The attendance was small, but the interest was live, and the work is in better condition than ever before, if a suitable man can be secured at once to take the lead in the superintendency.

Acting Chairman, Rev. J. C. Barr, of the Headquarter's Committee in New Orleans, rendered a full account of the treasurer and showed that the more than ten thousand dollars that had been raised in the two and a half years of the League's life had been wisely and economically expended, only a small balance remaining in the treasury. More funds are needed for the immediate carrying on of the work of the organization. The Convention unanimously and cordially accepted both the treasurer's and chairman's report, and commended the fidelity of those in charge of the League's affairs.

A Board of Trustees, consisting of some thirty of the best citizens of the State at large, was carefully chosen, and Rev. Claude L. Jones, of Shreveport, was elected President, and Rev. C. W. Stumpt, of Bunkie, Secretary; and a strong Headquarters Committee was selected; mostly from the citizens of New Orleans, with Rev. J. C. Barr President and Prof. Asa Miller Secretary and Treasurer.

Rev. Brooks Lawrence, the State Superintendent of Alabama, who has proven himself more than a match for his State's liquor leaders, was present as a guest of honor. He proved to be a wise counsellor during the sessions, and closed the convention with an inspiring address at night.

The Headquarters Committee was instructed to immediately employ a Superintendent for Louisiana, and to press the battle till every licensed saloon in the State is closed by law, every law aimed against this giant foe of humanity in our fair State is rigidly enforced, and to this task Chairman J. C. Barr, has enthusiastically given himself.

P. O. Lowrey.

LOUISIANA ORPHANAGE.

Dear Brethren: Work Day has resulted to date in $2488 cash. Some have written me that there was cash on hand in pastor's hands. I do beg you to send reports before Nov. 30th, so that I may make out full returns Dec. 1st.

The memorial feature begins to look interesting. The chapel will be called the Pharr Memorial for Capt. and Mrs. J. N. Pharr, an expression from their friends. The Olive Baker Room is named for Brother H. L. Baker's daughter of Platenville—still living. Mrs. Lewis S. Clark will name one dormitory for her husband, the late Col. L. S. Clark of St. Mary Parish. I mention this because it will show anyone who contemplates naming one of our dormitories that a loved one's name would be surrounded by a fine company of names. I have other inquiries.

Fraternally, C. C. WIER.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE.

The following from Rev. W. M. Williams, Manager of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, in Our Home, the official organ of the institution, tells us of the "glorious success" of "Work Day" in Mississippi. The Manager is greatly encouraged, and we hope his report will stimulate the friends of the orphans both in Mississippi and Louisiana:

"Bless the Lord, O My Soul, and forget not all his benefits."

To all who have co-operated with us in our "Work Day Plan" we take off our hat and make as polite a bow as we know how, bless you. I wish I could publish all the letters I have received and the names of the workers and donors, but this is impossible. It would take a Sunday edition to hold all, so we will publish only two letters as samples of the many that we have received, showing the result of effort and the happiness and joy that come to those who work for Christ's kingdom. They also show what a pleasure it is to children as well as to adults to serve the Lord.

We would like to make mention of many whom we think did remarkably well and deserve praise. But we would not know where to stop. We would be sure to leave some out that had done equally as well, so we just publish in our financial report the churches and Sunday Schools and the amounts. Read that carefully and you can see yourself what is being done by God's faithful ones.

Many of the best contributions from "Work Day" have been from those places that have sent us a regular monthly collection all year. Take Fernwood, for instance. It had sent us about $150 before, then sent us $105.52 from "Work Day" and $21.50 at the same time as their monthly contribution. There are many stronger churches in both Conferences that have not done half that much. I am more and more convinced that wherever the monthly plan has been adopted and the interest of the Home kept before the people, that they have done well and will always do well. Let those who did not observe "Work Day" have a rally Thanksgiving Day. Our receipts this month, as you will see from our report, has been $2,803.54. About $2000 of this is the result and proceeds of "Work Day." "Work Day" proceeds are still coming in and I think will amount to at least $2500. If it had not been for this special effort we would have been in a "hole." Our expenses this month have been very heavy. The salaries of our three teachers for the first month, renewal of insurance policies, school books, and other things for winter. But now we are out of debt and have something to make some of the much-needed improvements. Praise the Lord.

We take new courage and say to all, let's make this institution one that God will honor and that will honor his people.

In grateful appreciation.

W. M. Williams, Manager.

"CALL TO THE MINISTRY."

BY A YOUNG MAN.

I wish to draw attention to the fact that few young men are called to the ministry. Here, in our Millsaps College, the roll numbers about three hundred; and there are only twenty-two or twenty-three ministerial students.

I think it would be a good plan for every Christian in the land to pray the Lord to call more reapers to the harvest, and pray that they will willingly answer the call; saying: "Master, here am I; send me, send me." The harvest is ripe, and there are so few reapers in the field.

We should also pray that the mothers and fathers will raise their families for the cause of the Lord, and be willing to submit to his will when he calls them. How few have consented to hear the call of the Lord and feel that they are unworthy of the sacred life! If the Lord did not see what we could do for him he would not have called us to serve him. We see where he said, "Go, ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." In our hearts we feel that we are not qualified for the great work, but why should we feel such delicacy about it? The Lord calls us, and he has promised to be with us. What shall we fear, then?

We can truthfully say that when we are called to the ministry we have the noblest, highest, happiest and most honorable calling God can bestow upon his servants. Honorable calling—why, we are chosen by the Lord!

I would not, if I could, bring the least breath of influence to bear with a young man determining on his life's vocation, but I would urge him with all the power and earnestness at my command to listen to God's call, and should he hear the still, small voice, saying "Feed my lambs," I would plead with him to harken to the command of his God and Maker.

May God call many of our young men into his vineyard, and may he make his call so clear that there will be no doubt in their minds that he has heard the voice of his Lord. May he give them his strength and grace, for, without it, we can accomplish nothing.

BROTHER GEDDIE'S LAST WORD.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I have just read Brother Honnoll's article in the Advocate, and make haste to reply. And I hope you can publish it in your next issue.

In his article published in the Advocate of Sept. 24th, 1908, Brother Honnoll said:

"In spite of the fact that God has been warning and calling by men and angels, and much has been done to save the world from sin, the great majority have gone wrong, and all except Adam and Eve started in infancy."

Now, I thought that the words "sin" and "wrong" meant in this sentence the same thing, and as "all except Adam and Eve started" to doing "wrong in infancy," then they "started" to sinning "in infancy." But Brother Honnoll has a right, as every man does, to explain his own language, and as he says he did not mean that infants sin, I accept it as an entirely satisfactory explanation.

As to any willful misrepresentation of him, I deny the charge. I had no thought of misrepresenting him, or of in any way treating him unbrotherly. I have the profoundest respect for him and his views, and if I have said one word that can be construed as unbrotherly, I hereby ask his forgiveness.

As to my Pelagian views, I have only this to say: In all that I have written on the moral state of infants, I have freely and fully declared my belief in the doctrine of Adamic depravity, and attributed their salvation from it to the atoning merit of Jesus Christ. If that is Pelagianism, I plead guilty to the charge; if not, I stand acquitted. Very truly, D. M. Geddie.

Verona, Miss.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the services of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France; and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Mrs. [illegible]: The [illegible] Auxiliary [illegible] year has been having [illegible] meetings [illegible]. We have these at some residence [illegible] readings and a social [illegible] in the afternoon. They have been very successful and [illegible] interest in the meeting.

The past week the Home and Foreign Auxiliaries united in their efforts to have a Week of Prayer. We spent a delightful week. So many of our women are [illegible] to lead meetings and pray in public. The week has helped us spiritually. It was indeed a great blessing to us.

The most important work in the district is that of our young girls. Under the leadership of Mrs. T. M. Searles, they are doing great things. They expect to give Miss Martin a kindergarten course in the Scarritt Training School. They belong to our Foreign Auxiliary, but work for the Home Mission also. If our societies could realize what great helpers the girls are, every auxiliary would have them enlist. Mrs. Searles has been a great help to our girls, as well as to our Woman's Auxiliary. We feel that she is a great blessing to all of us.

Let me tell you in regard to our Conference to be held here next March that we hope to have it our very best. Mrs. Lipscomb writes: "Miss Cobb and Miss Davies are under promise to be here at our Annual Meeting." She is also trying to secure Miss White and Miss Pyle. Miss Pyle is of the Laura Haygood Memorial, and will be in America soon. We want to get some Bishop; so, you see, we are hoping to have a very fine meeting. Urge your auxiliary to work harder than ever, as we want our District to have number one reports in all lines.

Other places in the district report pretty good work, but not so good as I desire. Of course, you know more about your own auxiliary than I can tell you. The Port Gibson Auxiliary has been such a help to me since I have been Secretary. [illegible] wishes to you, one and all. Sincerely, MRS. A. N. BRIEN.

We feel encouraged by the reports of Mrs. Wimberly and Mrs. Brien. The other secretaries are cordially urged to send news from their districts. Our Port Gibson Auxiliary does not hold its Week of Prayer with the Home Mission Auxiliary, because we think each society realizes more in spiritual and material results by having a week of its own. We observe the week embracing our National Thanksgiving Day, and hope that our thanksgivings may not fall behind those of former years.

PRESIDENT PORT-GIBSON AUXILIARY.

FROM MRS. WATKINS.

Dear Sisters: We expect to learn many things from the brethren. I was particularly impressed with their plan of enrolling 10,000 "emergency men"—men who would agree to give one, two, five or ten dollars each when called on as often as three or four times a year, when, for any cause, an immediate demand for money may arise.

What is the matter with having in our Conference 100 emergency women, who will stand back of a deficit or in front of a need?

If we had such a band now, I would know just where to get $45 for the repairing and refitting of the Mississippi Room and the Cornelia Gunning Room at the Scarritt Bible and Training School. Miss Gibson has had the work done, as it was necessary, and we must refund her the [illegible] a our home. [illegible] be the first to enlist on the Emergency R[illegible].

[illegible] Secretary, Mrs. A. F. [illegible], sends us these interesting notes, with the Story of Miss Tsao as read by Mrs. S. J. [illegible] at First Church, Jackson, Miss.:

The North Mississippi Conference has very [illegible] given [illegible] the use of the Helen Finley Scholarship [illegible] of our missionary candidates, whereby we have only $30 to pay this scholarship being worth only $150 a year, instead of [illegible].

The auxiliary at First Church, Jackson, has [illegible] good meetings, giving forethought and careful preparation to each programme. The one for last month was particularly interesting, and was as follows:

His [illegible] have continued his training in [illegible]. One, John Marshall, studied at [illegible] University, and is considered the best [illegible] of English in Shanghai. He is at present secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Shanghai, and is doing splendid work.

Another son, Charley Marshall, was sent abroad by the Chinese Government as interpreter with an embassy of prominent men, which went to study the modes of government of other nations.

The youngest son is a student at Yale University, he also a Government student. The youngest daughter is now a sophomore in a medical college in Philadelphia.

But it is with another daughter, Fang Yuin Tsao, that our story more particularly concerns itself. At the age of 18 she entered the McTyeire School as one of the charter pupils. One of her teachers at this school was our own Miss Hughes. While a student there, her father received a very advantageous offer for her hand in marriage. He had received other proposals, but this was such an especially satisfactory one that he deemed it wise to consider it. You have heard that it is the custom of the Chinese to sell their daughters to the highest bidders, as it were, and perhaps the natural cupidity latent in the Chinese breast was aroused. Nevertheless, he said, "I am a Christian; I will consult my daughter." He sought the Superintendent of the school, and, telling her his wishes, [illegible] her permission to speak to his daughter upon the subject. Returning from the [illegible] he shook his head, partly in sorrow, perhaps, for the worldly advancement he had lost, but more in pride in the [illegible] and [illegible] his daughter had displayed.

"She does not want to be married," he told the Superintendent. "She prefers to go on to school and prepare herself to do something for the education of womankind and the advancement of China. I yield to her decision. I am a Christian."

So Fang Yuin Tsao, or Lavinia Marshall, as she was known in English circles, continued to study, and later spent four years in [illegible] College, [illegible]. Returning to China, she taught five years in the McTyeire School.

At various times she had positions offered her in different schools in China, but her heart was set upon again studying in America, that she might be well fitted to accept a responsible position. So, in her own words, [illegible] she taught and waited and prayed for the opportunity, which came at last.

The Chinese Government granted to four young Chinese women several years' study in America. Most prominent among these was Miss Tsao. She was not required to stand the examination, but, on account of her scholarship and character, was selected as one worthy to be sent to America. She is allowed to devote as many years as she wishes to self-improvement.

She is now at Wellesley College, preparing herself for leadership in China. We have a letter from her full of hopes and plans for the future, and breathing the spirit and the courage to carry out these plans.

Presumably, she has never regretted her girlhood's decision back there in the old McTyeire School.

A TURKEY FOR BETTY.

Betty began it. She and Robbie were playing out in the yard when a man went by with some crates of live turkeys.

"What for?" Betty queried.

"Why, to eat," answered her brother.

"Is it good?" Betty inquired innocently.

"Good?" cried Robbie. "Betty Ives, didn't you ever have any turkey?"

"I don't guess I did," Betty answered.

"Why-ee!" and Robbie looked at his sister with astonished eyes. Then he thought a minute, and began counting off on his fingers.

"Last Thanksgiving we didn't have one—then you were four, nor the year before that—then you were three, and the year before that when we had a bouncer, and grandpa and grandma were here, you were only two—too little to eat turkey, weren't you? It's too bad! Never tasted turkey—my!"

"Is it good as candy?" asked Betty, wistfully.

"Why, it's—different," Robbie answered. "It's something like chicken—only ten times better."

"Better'n chicken?" exclaimed the little girl. As if anything could be more delicious than chicken! "Why, don't we have it?" she asked.

"Costs too much," said Robbie. "Mamma said last year maybe we could this, and now she says we can't. I had some cold last Christmas, when my Sunday School teacher asked us up there to spend the evening—my, wasn't it good!" and Robbie smacked his lips in remembrance of the feast.

Shortly afterwards Robbie went up-stairs and counted the money in his small purse. There was exactly fifty-one cents—that wouldn't buy a turkey. All that day and the next, when he wasn't busy with lessons or play, he was planning about a possible turkey.

"I mustn't forget to have your father order some kindling-wood," Mrs. Ives told Robbie's sister Lydia, and the boy overheard. "It seems as if we were always out of kindlings. I believe I'll ask the grocer to bring me some boxes; they'll be handy to split up, if I get in a strait."

Robbie put his purse in his pocket and started for the grocery.

"Boxes?" said the clerk. "We sell good ones with covers for five cents apiece; if the covers are broken, for three cents, just as they come, big and little."

Robbie finally made a bargain to have fifteen good-sized boxes—those with imperfect covers—delivered at his home for fifty cents, and to the tune of Yankee Doodle he returned to make a place in the cellar for his purchase.

"What in the world are you going to do with all those?" asked Jasper, his high school brother.

"Split 'em up and sell 'em," was the reply.

"Guess you'll get tired of splitting," commented Minot, coming out from his book long enough to say it.

But Robbie was not daunted by any prophesies of ill; his eye was on an invisible turkey. His hatchet was busy from the time school was out until tea was ready.

He begged some big paper bags of his mother, and offered to sell her a bagful of kindlings for five cents. He calculated that each box would make at least two bags of wood.

Mrs. Ives was a glad purchaser, and as soon as there was stock enough Robbie started out in search of other customers. Most of the neighbors bought one or more bags, and Robbie's purse grew heavy, and his heart light. He felt as if the turkey was now more than a possibility.

Some of the money was used for the buying of more boxes, and the hatchet was heard at all hours when the boy could catch a few minutes. Jasper said that his brother was making a regular wood-yard of the cellar.

Robbie took nobody into his confidence, so there were many conjectures as to his spending of the profits.

"I don't believe he makes ten cents on a dollar," declared Minot. "Say, Rob, how much do you make?"

But the young wood-dealer was not inclined to tell, and only grinned at the query.

Two nights before Thanksgiving he came home in company with a ten-pound turkey, and at Betty's squeal, who was always on hand to greet her brother, Minot ran into the kitchen. His shouts brought Lydia and Jasper, and then the father and mother followed.

"It's as good a one as Mr. Porter had in the market—he said so himself!" Robbie asserted proudly. "A ten-pounder!" he cried, swinging the bird at arm's length. "Just lift it, and see."

"And did the kindlings really buy this?" questioned Minot, incredulously.

"I started in on fifty-one cents—that's all!" answered Robbie. "To think of Betty's being five years old and never tasted of turkey! I was bound she should, if I could get one."

At the Thanksgiving dinner Robbie watched Betty anxiously as she took her first bite of the unknown dainty.

It had scarcely passed her lips when she looked up at her brother with an ecstatic smile.

"It is mag-licious!" she said.—The Congregationalist.

A BLACK BOY'S HEART.

They were the prettiest pair of ponies ever exhibited at the state fair, and their groom was only a colored boy, who ran by their side as they went round and round the ring obeying every word or motion of his. When they stopped before the grand-stand the ponies rubbed up to Cato as though they loved him.

"What is their price?" asked a horse dealer, for it was known that they were for sale.

"Five hundred dollars," said Cato.

"Stuff and nonsense," said the horse dealer. "I'll give you $300 cash for them."

Cato shook his head and turned away for another offer; but, though every one admired them, no one wanted to buy.

"There," said the horse dealer, "you see no one wants them. Tell me who owns them. He will be glad to take my offer."

"Dey longs to my young missus, an' she ain't gwine to sell 'cept she get $500 for 'em," said Cato.

"Humph!" said the horse dealer. "A young girl owns them, does she? Well, if you will swear that one of them went lame, I will give you $50. You never had so much money in your life—did you, now?"

Cato gave such a start that the ponies started, too. Then, looking up, he said:

"Reck'n yer think dat 'cause de Lord done [illegible] Cato a black [illegible] a black heart, [illegible] when it dat [illegible]"

[illegible] who had overheard the conversation. "Why [illegible] your [illegible] to sell the ponies?"

"De planter [illegible] next week," said Cato. "[illegible] He [illegible] raise de [illegible] he got all but $[illegible] he took [illegible] Dat how comes [illegible] de ponies."

"Well," said the gentleman, "you take them [illegible] if they are sold for $500. My man [illegible] with you [illegible] the money. Tell her [illegible] to Europe for a year and would consider it a favor if she would use them while I am away. If she can buy them back when I return, I shall be very glad to sell them to her."

"Ef Cato ever kin serve you, sir, he jes' boun'ter do dat t'ing."

"You have done it already, Cato."

"What, sah? I ain't never see you befo'."

"True; but you have given me an opportunity to help another in trouble. You gave it to me just now, when I overheard you refuse to blacken your heart for that man's money."—Selected.

THE DUTY OF THANKSGIVING.

The goodness and mercy of God call for thanksgiving. "O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth forever."

Divine mercy is abundantly exhibited in the grace of God that bringeth salvation to men. In no sense does man deserve salvation. He has in himself no merit to recommend him to divine favor, nor has he ever done anything to entitle him to any consideration. Otherwise grace would not be of favor, but of right or debt, and as St. Paul argues, grace would cease to be grace.

Mercy is defined as the disposition "to pity the miserable and forgive injuries." Could created intelligences be in a more pitiable condition than was man when he lost his high and holy estate, and became not only a sinner, but literally a being "without God, and without hope in the world?" We cannot wonder that under the circumstances the race developed into such godless characters as described by St. Paul in his epistle to the Romans, "filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection, implacable and unmerciful." Such, St. Paul also tells the Corinthians, "were some of you," and such are we to-day. "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace are ye saved;) and hath raised us up together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus."

God's mercy in Christ Jesus is followed by "forgiveness of sins to all them that with hearty repentance and true faith turn" to him. To such, instead of a sense of guilt and condemnation there comes a sense of peace with God and assurance of eternal life, or as St. Peter expresses it, "a joy unspeakable and full of glory."

The mercy of God in Christ Jesus is extended to all men. Not a human soul lives that is not included in the gracious provision of the gospel. It could not be otherwise, seeing God is the Father of all men, as well as the author and giver of all life. And, if any man falls short of receiving the full blessings of the gospel in this life, it is either his own fault in rejecting the offer, or because the Church fails to bring him a knowledge of Christ and his Word. In our own happy land it is a cause of devout thankfulness to God that his people not only enjoy the fulness of the blessings of Christ, but are active in pressing his claims on their neighbors and in sending his gospel to the regions beyond.

The goodness of God is quite as manifest as his mercy. In our thought we can scarcely separate [illegible] mercy from his goodness. Yet mercy [illegible] spiritual [illegible] welfare. God [illegible] his goodness [illegible] over all his works. [illegible] with man and [illegible] than that, and [illegible] in the place with those [illegible] another place. [illegible] say that [illegible] more highly favored than are those [illegible] are [illegible] relatively others. [illegible] when we consider that God made everything [illegible] every creature to the sphere [illegible] lives, we can but see that the difference [illegible] degree of goodness is [illegible] slight [illegible] cause [illegible] temperate zone [illegible] sea [illegible] highly [illegible] the Laplander [illegible] fur coats [illegible] women [illegible] he can thrive in a land where the sun is always shining. He is as happy in his [illegible]. We are in the [illegible].

As citizens of the United States we feel that we have the best land and the best government in the world. The Englishman feels the same way. So does the German. And so do the men of China and Japan. All the earth has reason for gratitude to God, and wherever the [illegible] has been planted and men acknowledge the rule of Christ, thankfulness reigns in their hearts.

Looking at men as individuals we see differences in their worldly surroundings. Some are clothed in purple and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day. Others are hardly able to procure the necessities of life—to [illegible] luxuries they are total strangers. The rich are supposed to be happy and the poor [illegible]. As a matter of fact, the poor are as happy as the rich, and feel in their hearts that they have much for which to be thankful. Millions [illegible], poor as they are, could not be persuaded to exchange places with their wealthy neighbors, if with the exchange they were compelled to bear the rich man's burdens.

At this Thanksgiving season, we as a people have abundant reason to pour out our hearts in gratitude to God who has so richly favored us. In his great mercy he has blessed us with revivals of religion and the ingatherings of hundreds of thousands of souls. He has given us peace throughout all our borders, and we are at peace with all the world. Our labors everywhere have been crowned with great success. Goodness everywhere has abounded.

Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men.

PLEA FOR SMALLER DISTRICTS.

Two weeks since Rev. J. M. Alford presented in these columns a plea for smaller districts. We fully agree with him. It is perhaps useless to make such a plea, for the tendency is to make them larger, instead of smaller. It is hard to arrest a tendency, especially if it is declared to be in the direction of progress.

We know that in some cities and large towns there is [illegible] to the presiding eldership. As yet the country charges are but little affected—in many sections they are not affected at all. The opposition, as we have seen it, was principally on two grounds: (1) Lack of preaching ability, and (2) the service rendered is not worth what is paid for it.

The supposition is that the number of presiding elders are reduced, and the number of charges in a district multiplied, for the purpose of securing stronger men, and giving them a better support, and at the same time lessen the burden on the several charges. In the enlargement of the districts are these [illegible] realized? [illegible] the presiding elder gets better [illegible] we suppose [illegible] is true. But what district gets stronger [illegible] preaching, and what charge is [illegible] any part of the burden of support?

We are not prepared to answer the questions [illegible] asked. But [illegible]. The presiding elder comes no nearer earning what is paid [illegible] under the new regime than under the [illegible], if his worth is measured by the amount of time spent in a given charge and the amount of preaching he does. He is not worth half as much. This will necessarily increase instead of [illegible] complaint. If in [illegible] towns and cities the people complained when the presiding elder gave them Saturday and Sunday, preached three or four times and held love-feast, in addition to presiding over the Quarterly Conference, how [illegible] will they complain when he spends [illegible] only one day with them, often holding only one [illegible] service, for which he receives three-fourths as much pay as if he had rendered two days' service? This is a practical question.

If the practice of enlarging the Districts is [illegible] and presiding elders are forced to give [illegible] country charges only one Quarterly Meeting a year on Saturday and Sunday—holding the other three [illegible] in a week day—it is only a question of time when we will [illegible] from them that we now hear from [illegible], viz: "We do not feel like paying an extra [illegible] for work that can just as [illegible] be done by the preacher-in-charge." The fewest number of them will not take a connectional view of the matter. They will look on him [illegible] as the preacher preaches a little and holds [illegible] Conferences. His function as the [illegible] to be [illegible] ignored.

The worst thing we see in the enlargement of [illegible] Districts is [illegible] the secularization of the presiding [illegible] be otherwise. How can [illegible] evangelist when by law he is com[illegible] nearly three Quarterly Conferences [illegible] week? Under such circumstances the [illegible] business of the Church is his [illegible] concern.

[illegible] question [illegible] is scarcely worth considering, for little if anything is saved to the Church by reducing the number of presiding elders. Let anyone make the calculation, considering that the salary of the enlarged District is largely increased, and that the presiding elders [illegible] pastorates get about as large salaries [illegible] while serving small Districts.

More of this, perhaps, later.

A WESLEY HOUSE IN NEW ORLEANS.

Dr. J. R. Nelson of the Parent Mission Board, [illegible] Miss Belle Bennett and Mrs. McDonnell, President and Secretary, respectively, of the Woman's Home Mission Society, spent two or three days in the city in the interest of the work among the foreigners in our city. The purpose, as we understand, is to secure a site for a building to be called the Wesley House, in which the religious welfare of immigrants may be guarded. They are looking over the ground, that they may invest wisely and spend what money they may raise to the best advantage. The Board already has an Italian preacher at work, who is doing well, and gives promise of great usefulness. The movement here will be watched with great interest, and we hope it may be greatly blessed. When all their plans are made, if possible, we will make [illegible] through the ADVOCATE.

The following sentence taken from the New York [illegible], ought to awaken serious reflection in the mind of every conscientious voter in the land: "The persistent cry that prohibition cannot be enforced only means that the political bosses are determined that it shall not be, and that many of the voters who are in favor of prohibition have not firmness enough of purpose to refuse to support bosses who so act." What voters are to do, who are bound hand and foot by bosses, we are not able to say.

PERSONALS.

We learn from the Sardis Reporter that the corner-stone of the new church at Sardis will be laid Thanksgiving Day, and that Bishop Morrison is expected to be present and conduct the exercises.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge is winding out his year's work finely on the Pinegrove Circuit, Baton Rouge District. One of the last things done was to secure a fine list of readers for the ADVOCATE. He has our sincere thanks.

Two of our old Mississippi preachers are this year appointed to churches in San Antonio, Tex. Rev. P. D. Hardin goes to West End, and Rev. N. B. Harmon to Prospect Hill. Thanks for greetings from the Empire of the West.

Rev. S. D. Howard, of Eunice, La., one of our most active preachers, is just out of a fifteen days' spell of malarial fever, but still weak and unable to do work. His sickness came upon him just when he felt that he could least afford to spend the time from his charge. We trust he may come out all right.

A friend informs us of the sudden "going away" of one of the best members of our Crystal Springs (Miss.) Church, Mrs. Kate Barnes. At the time of her death she was nursing a loved relative in Jackson. "In serving God she helped humanity; the law of kindness was in her heart. Heaven is her home!"

Rev. W. H. Saunders has been blessed this year in his work at Gloster. He will report to Conference "over forty additions to the Church, a thriving League, an improved Sunday School, good prayer-meeting, increased attendance on the preaching services, and all the financial claims met in full." That is a good record.

Rev. E. D. Lewis, of the North Mississippi Conference, and stationed at Gunnison, has been transferred to the Tennessee Conference and stationed at University Church, near Nashville. He has entered the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University. He has commenced work in his new charge with bright prospects.

Those who live to visit Seashore Camp Ground next year will miss a familiar face, that of Mr. J. H. Lakin, of Montgomery, Ala. He has not failed for many years to occupy his cottage, and to take an active interest in all the religious services of the Camp Meeting. He passed away at his home in Montgomery on Sunday morning last, at 70 years of age.

The beautiful new church at Campti, La., which was built this year by Rev. Charles E. Staples and his faithful flock, is to be dedicated on Sunday, Nov. 29, 1908. Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D., will preach the sermon and dedicate the building. Brother Staples, we learn, has everything in good shape, and will have, as usual, a fine report for Conference.

Dr. Sawyer is in receipt of a letter from Rev. Leon I. McCain, one of our talented young Louisiana preachers, who left us about a year ago, having done a fine work in the Colfax and Montgomery Charge. He went to Albuquerque, N. Mex., and the itinerant wheel has landed him for this year in the important appointment of Nogales, Arizona. He is doing well, and his prospects are bright for a prosperous year's work.

Dr. John R. Nelson, missionary secretary, spent Sunday last in the city. In the morning he preached at Felicity Street Church, and in the evening at Second Church. Brother Townsley, pastor of the Second Church, was happy over the success of Dr. Nelson's work, which was of an evangelistic character. At the close of the sermon he called for penitents. Two ladies came to the altar, and were soundly converted, both leaving the church in a happy frame of mind and determined to work for the Master.

Dr. Sawyer spent Saturday and Sunday last on the Logansport work, preaching at three points to good congregations, and at Logansport addressing a well-attended men's meeting on Sunday afternoon. Fine results were had at each point. Rev. C. M. Morris, the young preacher in charge, will have an excellent report on all lines to make at the Annual Conference. Dr. Holder held a very successful meeting for him some time ago, and at every church on the circuit the preaching and labors of the energetic Morris have yielded gratifying results.

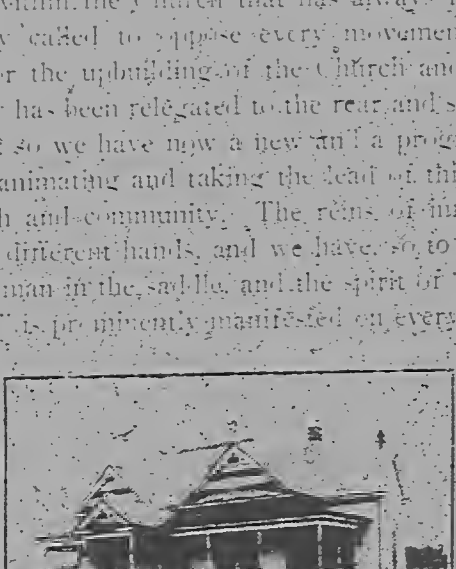
Dr. W. J. Dawson closed his engagement with the Rayne Memorial Church on Sunday evening last. For two weeks he preached twice a day. His sermons were of a very high order, thoroughly evangelical [illegible] appreciated by his hearers, and it is believed that he accomplished much good. There is nothing in his methods similar to what our people are accustomed to seeing in the average evangelist or revivalist. Judging by the sermons we heard, we think his effect was to reach the intellect rather than to stir the emotions of the people. He is without doubt a great preacher.

Dr. David D. Thompson, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, Chicago, was struck by an automobile on the evening of Nov. 8 in St. Louis, and died. By the death [illegible] clear, forcible and fearless writer, and gave the Church a great paper. He was a layman—the first layman occupying the position of editor of an official journal of our sister Methodism. He understood the doctrines of the Church, and was sound, both in doctrine and experience. We deplore his untimely end, and sympathize with his bereaved wife and children. The preachers of North Mississippi will remember him as a pleasant visitor at the session of Conference held in Holly Springs.

FOUR YEARS AT ROSE HILL.

BY REV. W. W. GRAVES.

I am winding up my fourth year on the Rose Hill Charge, and they have been four busy years. True, we have not "turned the world upside down," and yet we have accomplished some things of more than ordinary importance. The hoodlum element that has predominated here in days past is only a thing of remembrance. And the "old-fogy-do-nothing-Rip-Van-Winkle" element within the Church that has always felt especially called to oppose every movement that was for the upbuilding of the Church and community has been relegated to the rear and snowed under; so we have now a new and a progressive spirit animating and taking the lead of things in Church and community. The reins of influence are in different hands, and we have, so to speak, a new man in the saddle, and the spirit of "doing things" is prominently manifested on every hand.



We have built a new, modern, up-to-date parsonage, a picture of which is here shown.

This parsonage is located on a lot containing six and a half acres of land, which is about equally divided in pasture, garden and truck-patch. It is the most desirable lot in town, and nature could have done nothing more to make it an ideal place for a parsonage, and we have exhausted our skill and means to build upon it an ideal preacher's home.

It is only a few days until we take our leave, and my successor will find a pleasant home. On his arrival at the parsonage he will be met by a band of the best ladies with a good, warm supper prepared that would tempt a king's appetite. [illegible] these four years. He will also find the parsonage clean, every door with hinges and locks, not a pane out of a window, every gate with hinges and latch, not a [illegible] and the prettiest front in town. And when he goes to the barn he will find good, dry stables for his horses, with doors, hinges and latches on them, and a trough substantially put up to feed in—all made by the hands that pencil this sketch.

I will also leave for my successor one among the finest turnip patches in the community and two or three rows of fine, tender winter cabbage. He will also find a fine pile of good oak wood corded up in the edge of the yard to make him a fire, enough stovewood to begin housekeeping with, and—and—and this, together with the finding that he will get enough to make him the happiest preacher this side of the pearly gates. "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them."

During my pastorate here there has been reported somewhere near three hundred conversions and reclamations on the charge. I have received ninety-four members into the Church; baptized eighty infants; married thirty-three couples, and preached twenty-eight funeral sermons. May God bless the people of Rose Hill. Amen!

Persons who attend a strange church and complain of a lack of courteous treatment are generally of two classes: those of a sensitive nature, who look for and expect a slight, and those who seem not to care for attention and make haste to leave the house lest someone should offer to shake hands. We have seen strangers leave church in such a hurry that the preacher could not have caught them had he tried ever so hard. According to our way of thinking, strangers are as much bound to show themselves approachable as the preacher and people are to show themselves courteous.

[illegible] resolutions were adopted [illegible] W. H. M. S. [illegible] Church [illegible] Mrs. J. A. Gulley [illegible]

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, [illegible] to call our beloved friend and co-worker Mrs. J. A. Gulley from her labors on earth to her reward in heaven; and whereas Mrs. Gulley was so thoroughly interested in the work and growth of the society [illegible] of which she was one of the most efficient officers; and whereas she was true to the faith, proving her belief by her works, her love by her loyalty and fidelity; therefore, be it resolved:

First—That in the death of Mrs. Gulley the Woman's Home Mission Society has lost a most faithful and earnest member, whose departure is most keenly felt. She has passed away like a gentle breath into the beautiful land, by angels blest. In our hearts we do say, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord—their works do follow them."

Second—That her place in our midst cannot soon be filled, but we bow to the will of the Father, who doeth all things well.

Third—That we shall miss her from our counsels; yet her life of piety, faith and devotion to duty will ever be an ensample to us, inspiring us to go forward in our work, ever looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. May God bless and comfort those from whom, for a time, she is separated. May each one learn to say, "Not as I will," and may the words grow sweeter as the days grow fewer between those who knew and loved her.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, spread upon the minutes of the W. H. M. S., and published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed by: Mrs. E. J. Harris, Mrs. C. P. Wetherbee, Mrs. Robert Brown.

JAMES MONROE LIPSCOMB was born in Spartanburg District, S. C., Oct. 4, 1822, and died at his home near Noxapater, Miss., Oct. 26, 1908. Brother Lipscomb was married to Miss Jeannett Thompson in 1844. Of this union was born nine children, six of whom live to mourn the death of a devoted father. Brother Lipscomb was converted in 1884 at Noxapater, in a meeting held by Rev. A. J. Foster, joined the M. E. Church, South, living and dying an honored member. In his last years he was not able to attend the services of his church regularly, on account of failing strength. Brother Lipscomb was one of our most law-abiding citizens, a true friend to the needy and helpless, honest in all his dealings, upright in every relation in life. He was a loving, indulgent husband and father. His good wife preceded him to heaven by more than two years. What a joyous meeting it must have been! Brother Lipscomb was the father of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference, whose life is the product of the godly training received from his consecrated father and mother. All his children are worthy, useful members of the Methodist Church. The high esteem in which he was held was evidenced by the large number of sorrowing friends

W. RAPER.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. MARY E. DUNN CARNEY, was the daughter of Robert B. Dunn and Jane Boatner. She was happily married to James G. Carney [illegible] by President John C. Miller, of Centenary College. She was born June [illegible] and went to her reward July [illegible]. She joined the Methodist Church in early life and was an earnest, consistent member till her death. Most of her life was spent near old Olive Branch Church, where her son Roman, a prosperous merchant and farmer, now resides, and at whose altars the writer first found peace with God. As far back as I can remember Brother and Sister Carney were among the most earnest and faithful supporters of that church. Later they moved to Slaughter, La., seeking more congenial society and better schools for their children, and there the Church found in them the same earnest workers. Brother Carney went to his reward in July of 1903, and now they have been reunited in that land of eternal spring and sunshine where the word farewell is never said and death will never more be known. Their only daughter, Mrs. Jennie C. Jean, a highly cultured and refined member of the Church of her father and mother, residing at Slaughter, with her brother at Olive Branch, together with a large circle of friends and relatives, mourn their loss. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope. What to us is loss to them is eternal gain. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

R. W. TUCKER.

Mrs. CAROLINE McREE was born in Clark County, Miss., on the 28th day of May, 1839. She was married to Mr. Geo. McRee on the 9th day of June, 1853. God blessed this union with sixteen children, nine of whom survive. She became a member of the M. E. Church, South, at an early period in life. Consecrating herself to the service of her Lord, she remained faithful to the end. Sister McRee was one of those splendid types of Christian womanhood in which every adorning grace and virtue seemed to center. Her life gave forth a light that was wonderfully convincing that Jesus, with whom she walked; the Holy Spirit, with whom she was in daily communion, were as real and personal to her as those of her most intimate associates in life. She was one of those choice spirits whose exemplary life could not fail to leave its impress for good wherever she was known. It has been said by those who knew her best that hers was a spirit of rejoicing and praise; that there never seemed to appear a cloud in her spiritual sky. She "died well," in the full triumphs of a Chris-

FROM BELZONA, MISS.

Dear Brother Boswell: I have forwarded all my Conference collections in full made on Belzona charge for this Conference year, and we are ready for Conference. We have painted our church at Belzona, putting two coats on, which makes it look real inviting and clean. We have expended about one hundred dollars on our parsonage, making it much more comfortable. We have had the pleasure of two poundings by our people, which gladdened our hearts and made us feel that our labor was appreciated among them. I am glad the Publishing Committee elected you again our editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. We are certainly glad and pray our [illegible] Heavenly Father that you may be spared to us many years in this capacity.

IN THE CHRISTMAS CENTURY.

A peculiar interest attaches to the review of tariff history and the frank discussion of the tariff question by Andrew Carnegie which will be published in the Christmas Century. Mr. Carnegie's experience and convictions—public opinion to the contrary—are, he declares, for a tariff for revenue instead of a tariff for protection, the issue of forty years ago, and therefore the strict maintenance of the present duties upon foreign luxuries paid by the rich. The present tariff rightfully exempts the masses of the people from almost all national taxation, because they have not the ability to pay, as required by Adam Smith, the greatest economic authority."

WHAT TO GIVE FOR CHRISTMAS.

As Christmas commemorates the birth of Christ, we know of no present that would be more appropriate than a nice, attractive Bible, and we call attention to the special offer made by the Pentecostal Publishing Company, of Louisville, Ky., on another page of this issue. Don't fail to read it.

EPWORTH LEAGUE TOPIC.

1. When Jesus was taken up from his disciples, they were told that he should so come again. They gazed anxiously into the [illegible] heavens [illegible] for the time the Master was taken from them. The resurrection and the return of Jesus [illegible] the great [illegible] the Apostles [illegible] a [illegible] of the Apostles [illegible] who murmured and said, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning." [illegible] the last lines of the [illegible] there runs a constant [illegible] of the return of the Christ. Nineteen hundred years men have lived in constant expectation of the return of Jesus.

2. Why did he leave us and why does he linger?

Jesus said to his disciples, "It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come." (John xvi. 7.) If the Master had remained among men, we would have been [illegible] with his physical presence that we would have lost sight of his spiritual omnipresence. As it is, the [illegible] of his servants is conscious of the presence of the great King in the hour of trial and need. The great Teacher has given the world its lesson to learn, and some day we will have to recite. Were he [illegible] manifestly upon us we would [illegible] The world is steadily advancing towards the goal. Each individual life must learn its portion of the lesson. The Master [illegible] that we might learn our part, and he lingers until the fullness of time, when he will come again. It is needless to say that he will come when no one looks for him. The world will be taken by surprise when at last he returns.

3. How shall we await his return?

A large part of the world does not seem to realize that the Master of men is to come again. They can hardly be said to be waiting for him in any true sense. But of those who really live in the expectation of the return of Jesus, there are some who dream and look to the heavens. The greater their expectation of his return, the less they seem to care for the things which are going on around us. They would draw their minds off from the earth altogether and deem the world as unworthy of the thoughts of those who were expecting the King. But there is another attitude. If the Great Teacher is to call for the recitation of the lesson of life to know whether we are ready for the new tasks of the coming life, shall I not do well to learn my lesson thoroughly while he lingers? The Master came to redeem the world, and he has sent us forth to do our part in saving men. Moreover, he has stationed us where he would have us, and he expects every one of us to do our duty. You cannot better please your Lord than by being found faithful when he comes. Our lesson speaks of the return of Jesus as the dawn of the day, and bids us put on the armor of light. If you are making ready for the return of the Christ, walk in the light, and put on the armor of light. If there is anything evil in your life, you wish to hide it. Men who steal or kill prefer the dark. If you do anything which you feel is wrong, you want to hide it from those you care for. But the things which are right and good you are willing to bring forth into the light. From the very disposition of every life, you may readily [illegible] what is meant when it speaks of [illegible] light. If you are striving [illegible] the return of the Christ [illegible] everything [illegible] and [illegible] things of [illegible] which are lovely [illegible] only think [illegible] If you [illegible] your [illegible] will [illegible] all fear.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY [illegible] ANT GROVE [illegible]

[illegible] session held on [illegible]

First—That we deeply regret to lose Rev. O. P. Armour, who has been our pastor for four years.

Second—That we feel that much good work has been accomplished [illegible] his efforts.

Third—That we express the wish that [illegible] blessings may go with him in his future good work.

Fourth—That we tender our most hearty thanks to him for the interest he has shown in our young people.

Fifth—That a copy of these resolutions be tendered to Brother Armour, a copy published in the county paper, and a copy sent to the secretary of [illegible] Epworth League to be [illegible].

PARLIAMENTARY USAGE.

Parliamentary Usage of the General Conference Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by Rev. J. [illegible] Harrison, President of San Antonio [illegible] College. Published by Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn.

The purpose of this little book of sixty-four pages is to set before the [illegible] method of conducting the business of the General Conference and to serve likewise as a guide in the lower Conferences. The author invites criticism. We frankly confess that we are not competent to do that, never since we were a mere boy having made a study of parliamentary matters. Others whom we suppose to be competent to judge, as well as critics, have commended Dr. Harrison's book very highly. We have seen a number of brethren in our law-making body get seriously bewildered and delay business, and we venture to say that if they will study this little book and mind what it says, they will not get so badly confused next time they sit in a General Conference. Yet we have seen expert parliamentarians lock horns and fight.

HELPED HER SISTER

Young girls, at the critical age, often require the help that Cardui will give.

Cardui acts gently and safely, in a way that will mean much for health in future years.

Cardui has been found to relieve or prevent female pains, such as headache, backache, sideache, etc., and to act effectively on such symptoms as fitful temper, nervousness, tired feeling, and other symptoms that are common to young women.

Mrs. Mary Hudson, of [illegible], Miss., writes: "My young sister, while staying with me and going to school, was in terrible misery. I got her to take a few doses of Cardui and it helped her at once.

"I have taken Cardui myself and believe I would have been under the clay, if it had not been for that wonderful medicine. I was in a rack of pain, in my back and low down, but the first dose of Cardui helped me, and now I am in better health than in three years."

Try Cardui. It is a purely vegetable, gently medicinal, extract, especially recommended for female troubles. Sold by all druggists.

NOTICE.

Louisiana Preachers: We call your attention to the Conference resolution requiring you to make out your reports and file with the Auditing Board before the opening session of the Conference. Brother Mayo has notified you that some member of the Board would be present to receive these reports. It is important that you comply with this request. If you cannot reach the seat of Conference before the first day, you can easily mail your reports, so that they will be on hand.

All figures must be made in even dollars, as we have no room to run the column for cents in the Minutes, and if you fail to make the report in even dollars it places the Statistical Secretary, or Editor of the Minutes, under the necessity of changing your figures, and the footings may not tally. We remind you again to MAKE ALL FIGURES IN EVEN DOLLARS.

In making out your report on Church Membership, let the column for "Members reported last year" correspond with the figures in the last issue of the Minutes for "Present total membership," unless your stub-report shows the Minutes to be in error.

Bring a copy of the Minutes to Conference with you, as I will have but very few extra copies with me. My supply is almost exhausted. Sincerely ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Editor of the Minutes.

LESSON FOR NOV. 29, 1908.

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY.

Isaiah xxviii, 1-13.

Golden Text: "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection."—I Cor. ix, 27.

For those who follow the chronological order in the study of Sunday School lessons, as they have been selected, it is stated that at the time to-day's Scripture lesson was written there had come a division of the kingdom of God's people. Jealousy among the ten tribes toward Judah finally caused a separation. In the time of Isaiah, Judah was the stronger and most powerful. Remember that "the scepter shall not depart from Judah * * * until Shiloh come." Isaiah saw that the great wealth and prosperity of this people were leading them away from the old paths marked out by the patriarchs and ancient prophets. From greater heights than Zion and Moriah the grand old man of God sounded the alarm, arousing the people to a danger more disastrous than an army of Goliaths of Gath. If this danger was so threatening in those days of olden time, how much more need is there for men of modern times to pay earnest heed to the warning that the prophet gave, not to his own generation alone, but to all people of every age and time. In the changed times that have effected the mind of man, education, refinement and culture being more generously diffused, the evil spoken of by the sacred writer has adapted itself to the changed conditions.

If yielding to temptation in olden times was a "woe to the crown of pride," what is it now, in our day, if men in exalted positions indulge in a so-called pleasure whose glorious beauty "is a fading flower?" Bacchanalian revelry has made way for the select banquet that is described as a flow of reason and a feast of soul. Yet the evil is just as far-reaching; for satan will be there first, ready to suggest "spiritual wickedness in high places." It is his own diabolical object in using man's social tendency to effect his destruction. This most powerful weapon against human happiness has a most potent opposing force, alluded to by the prophet in the words: "Behold, the Lord hath a mighty and strong one, which is a tempest of hail and destroying storm;" and also spoken of by John the Apostle when he said: "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world."

The drunkards of Ephraim had made their sin respectable, even assuming an aspect of "glorious beauty." They must have feared exceedingly when Isaiah told them "the crown of pride * * * shall be trodden underfoot." The prophet is bitter in denunciation and fearful in prediction of God's wrath; yet there is a tone of sadness in his words, as he deplores the sin of intemperance becoming a national evil. Those that should have been shepherds leading the sheep, the priest and the prophet, had made themselves unworthy through strong drink: "They err in vision, they stumble in judgment," as it is sometimes the case in our day. Men that indulge in this sin, whether openly or secretly, do not last long; and, however [illegible] they may be, [illegible] of [illegible] is soon [illegible] they disappear [illegible] works [illegible]. The respectable drunkard is the hardest to advise [illegible] his respectability is as a surrounding wall, keeping out all good counsel and keeping in all evil tendency.

What a mighty power has Satan in strong drink! It is simply wonderful: in the very beginning of its influence it is alluring and enticing—the victim blinded follows the influence that will at last fasten on him fetters of steel. Evil has the appearance of good, so that reproof is regarded as persecution.

The man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, and whose desire is to serve God, is an especial recipient of God's goodness, for God knows man's weakness, and that he can do nothing without divine help; so there is a place within the soul where the Spirit dwells, and from this dwelling place there comes a flow of fruit such as love, joy, peace, long-suffering. The man that careth not in whose counsel he walks, following an influence that is selfishness itself, is not naturally depraved sufficiently for the work the devil wants him to do; he cannot do this work of himself. So, to spur him on, he is invigorated first, then stimulated, then maddened, for out of him also must come fruit, such as envy, malice, wrath, hatred and murder. The devil uses this natural weapon in opposing the spiritual upbuilding of mankind. Was not this the reasoning of the apostle as he writes: "Be not drunken with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit?"

Whole pages are written and read of the direful effect of drink, the debauching power of the saloon element. We have only to look about us to see that a remedy is urgently needed. Jesus our Lord came to earth to save man, and when he went back home he left to all who love him a commission, that man must take up the work where he left off, and save his fellow-man. So then, it is not even a Sabbath day's journey to find our work. Our brother that needs our counsel and guidance may be now working in our factory or store; shall we allow ourselves to get too much business to attend to, or shall the different social condition prevent us in obeying the farewell request of him we profess to love. Caste is an enemy to Christian work, being the cold-storage department of the Church. Do not think that aversion to the lowly in life can be concealed. Ask the masses for the answer to the problem: How can the Church reach them?

The Master has shown how the work must be done among the common people. First, his discourses were such as to cause them to hear him gladly. Then he went among them as a man and [illegible], [illegible] the pious ones [illegible] with [illegible] him, saying, "He has gone to be the guest of a man that is a sinner."

Until we learn and practice the principle taught us above, we are [illegible] the very beginning of discipleship. No man can teach, or have influence for a virtue he does not possess. In meeting and having counsel with the poor, lost victim, in his own sphere, compromises us in our Christian position, then the position is not Christian, and the poor victim has fallen in with the wrong man.

O brother, let us lay aside our excuses, and make a brother of him who has fallen far down, even below the notice of his companions in sin. When we make up our minds to do this we will find those we want to help looking this way, that way, and every way but to God for the aid we want to give them. May God forgive us for thinking ourselves any better than the lowest of them for whom Christ died.

CRAWFORD CIRCUIT.

We are winding up our quadrennium, commencing our last round on Sunday, the 8th. The four years have been pleasantly spent with a loyal people, in a country sparsely settled with whites, but an elegant, high toned people, broad minded, in the main lovers of God and his Church, as a rule carefully raising their children, who are coming into the Church quite young. All are kind to the pastor and his family, remembering them in many substantial ways; liberal in their support both to the pastor and the various institutions of the Church; meeting all the assessments laid upon them; working in harmony; no castes; all walking the same social level, and given to much hospitality. While we have tried to faithfully serve this people, much more more ought to have been accomplished than has. There is always more room for doing good. Our Fourth Quarterly Meeting was good, our presiding elder, Brother Lipscomb, being at his best.

We will part with this people regretfully, [illegible] in the limitations [illegible] that our [illegible] than [illegible] ministers [illegible]. We shall always [illegible] this people with a great deal of pleasure, and pray that we [illegible] in God's mansion house above. D. W. BABB.

Fifty Cents a Month

A small bottle of Scott's Emulsion costing fifty cents will last a baby a month—a few drops in its bottle each time it is fed. That's a small outlay for so large a return of health and comfort. Babies that are given quickly respond to its helpful action. It seems to contain just the elements of nourishment a baby needs most.

BOLTON CHARGE.

We are rejoiced to say that great arc lights are placed here and there along the streets of Bolton to light up our little town, to fill with fear those who love darkness more than light, and to make glad those who love light more than darkness. We have now good water works and good lights, and hence we can live better. We have a stirring mayor in the person of Brother J. H. Williams. He is one mayor elected by the people without being a candidate. When elected he said: "What shall I do?" I said: "Serve the people, for they desire you." Things are changing up for the better since he became mayor, as one may discover by the announcement that we have electric lights.

The ladies have added another room to our parsonage and painted it up so one who knew it before would hardly know it now. With Sister John L. Gaddis and Sister J. H. Williams in the lead here, some of our ladies are hustlers when they undertake anything.

With Bro. J. L. Geddis in charge of the Sunday School and Bros. John Jones and Brancie Adams, leaders of our prayer meeting, things move, even when the pastor is absent. All the collections are paid in full, except a small deficit on the pastor's salary, which will be paid in full soon. This charge has gone from $800 for the preacher-in-charge to $1,000, and, besides, Brother John L. Gaddis has furnished me with a horse and buggy and fed the horse for four years. He does not take pleasure rides on Sunday, either. He and Dr. George S. Hunter are always ready to meet any shortage in finances. Besides the horse and buggy and horse-feed, Bolton pays to all the collections $800 this year, and the rest by Raymond, Clinton and Brownsville.

This is my last year, and it saddens us to know that we must leave these appreciative people. We love them, and they love us. They loved us from the beginning. When we came here, with eight in family, it was quite unpleasant for them to see us in a small, uncomfortable parsonage, and a salary only large enough for two in family. They thought us worthy of as good living as any other of our preachers, whether he had, like us, eight in the family, or only two. We are closing up very well, as our report shows, and although we have been unable to keep our record on infant baptisms as formerly, yet we are glad to say we shall be able to report 100 baptized during our four years here. This sounds like quite a shortage from the year we reported 121 baptized in one year.

BUENA VISTA CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Perhaps a few words from our charge would be of interest to the brethren. We came here the 20th of December last, a perfect stranger in the land. We found the charge well organized, and in fine working order. With the exception of the much-needed parsonage repairs, we found the work, which consists of three nice village churches and one cover, in the hills, as delightful as one could wish. The parsonage conditions can easily be accounted for when we take into consideration the fact that our worthy predecessor the two previous years was junior bachelor preacher of the Conference.

But Buena Vista lost by far more than her much-beloved pastor by the change in the person of Miss Clyde Williams, one of her most charming and best accomplished young ladies, who became Mrs. Lockhart, of the Pontotoc parsonage. The marriage ceremony was performed at the Presbyterian Church at 7:30 o'clock Dec. 21, Rev. L. D. Barr officiating. Brother Lockhart was held in high esteem by the people of this charge, and we bespeak for him and his bride a bright future.

By the help of the good brethren we have succeeded in pretty thoroughly overhauling the parsonage, putting in new matting, recanvasing, papering and painting, building new yard, garden and lot, expending in all nearly $100.

By the help of the elect women and some faithful men, we have put in a new pulpit, with nice chancel, treated the inside to two coats of paint, and done other repair work to the amount of about $100, at Ebenezer Church.

We hope to get Pleasant Grove Church moved before the winter rains begin. We have had fine revivals at all the churches, being assisted at Buena Vista by Rev. T. E. Smith of Meridian Male College, who preached to the delight of our people. At Pleasant Grove I was assisted by Rev. W. M. Campbell, of Schlater Charge, with good results; at Ebenezer by Rev. W. L. Graves, of Houston Station, whose preaching was very effective. At Macedonia by Rev. W. G. Carlisle, of Houlka Circuit. As usual, with such a grade of preaching as Brother Carlisle does, great results followed. In this meeting, which our people say was the greatest ever held, there we witnessed more than seventy-five conversions.

We have raised a club of twenty-five subscriptions to the Advocate, and doing other things as best we could. The finances of the charge are in good shape. This has indeed been a delightful year's work. With best wishes for you, Doctor, and the Advocate and its many readers, I am fraternally,

MILLARD A. BURNS, P. C.

FROM MAYERSVILLE, MISS.

Editor Christian Advocate: Rev. Osmond Lewis, our pastor, assisted by his brother, the Rev. John Lewis, who is stationed at Cleveland, Miss., has just closed a protracted meeting at this place, which was appreciated and enjoyed by the entire community and innumerable blessings were received by many.

Brother John Lewis inaugurated a "new departure" here—a prayer meeting at 8:30 a.m., and you should have seen the intense interest manifested. My wife had me up at dawn of day and such a bustle and hurry to get off to prayer meeting! The people here were surprised to see the old Methodists getting a move on themselves; and, their curiosity being excited, outsiders came out to see what was going on; and by that means Bro. John Lewis, with his earnest appeals in the pulpit and the magnetism and brotherly love that fills his soul for his fellow-man, built up a good feeling in the community and an earnest desire on the part of a number of our [illegible]

Our [illegible] longer, Br. [illegible]

ST. HELENA CHARGE.

Resolutions adopted by the Fourth Quarterly Conference, St. Helena Charge, Baton Rouge East District, M. E. Church, South, held at Greensburg, La., Nov. 9, 1908.

Whereas, under the laws governing our Church, it will not be possible for the Bishop to send back for another year our beloved presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker, he having now served out his fourth year on this district, therefore be it

Resolved, by the Fourth Quarterly Conference St. Helena Charge, Baton Rouge District, M. E. Church, South, in regular session assembled at Greensburg, La., that his administration of the affairs of this district has been with marked ability and much zeal, and while we part with him with much sorrow and regret, we commend him to the good people to whom he may be sent by the Bishop at the approaching Conference as one in whom they may fully confide and who will measure up to their most sanguine expectations as a consecrated minister and Christian gentleman.

W. T. HOLLAND,
For Conference.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

Ho for Conference.

The Colporter, with the other preachers, is rounding up for Conference. He is much engaged with the [illegible] of the year's work. The volume of business done exceeds [illegible] for which gratitude is given to God and thanks to all brethren and friends who have helped in the work. Prompt response to [illegible] reminders and requests are specially appreciated. May the few remaining ones come soon. There is [illegible] hope that the report can be made at the proper time. Collections in full, Bishop!

More books were sold during the Conferences last year than ever before, the Mississippi Conference leading by a few dollars. How shall it [illegible] this year at Water Valley and Yazoo City? May the [illegible] be greater than last year! [illegible] Conference will lead?

WORDS OF CHRIST PRINTED IN RED. PROPHETIC TYPES AND PROPHECIES REFERRING TO CHRIST PRINTED IN RED.

Next in importance to the Words of Christ themselves, which deserve to be printed in red, are the words of the Old Prophets and Law Givers of the Old Testament, in which they plainly foretell and foreshadow the coming of Christ and His Death and Resurrection. It is difficult for the ordinary reader to select these passages. Learned scholars and critics have done this for us. Besides the Prophecies referring to Christ are those passages which in another way, but with equal force, foretell His coming. These are called types or symbols.

In the Reference Colums, References to portions of the Old Testament quoted or referred to by Jesus are printed in red. All these features of the Old Testament are new, and to be found only in the "International" Red Letter Bible.

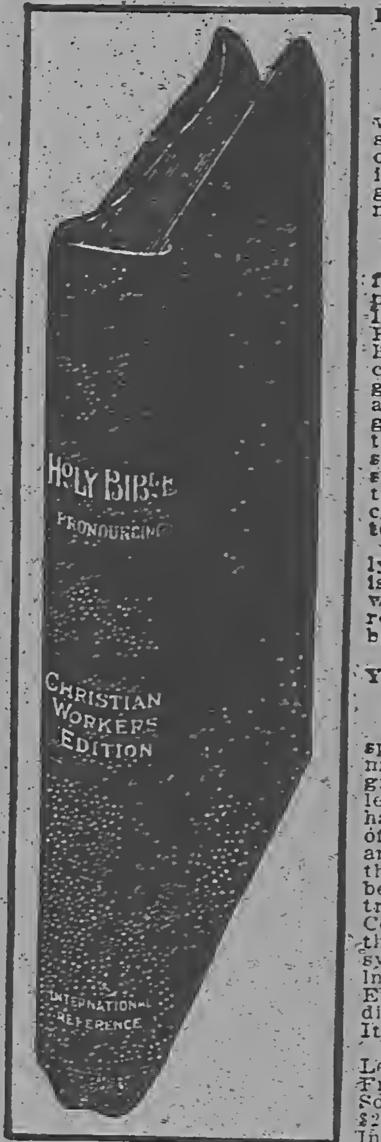
Christian Worker's Bible

$5.00 VALUE FOR $2.50 POSTAGE 25c ADDITIONAL.



INDEXED AND MARKED IN RED BY THE BEST METHODS OF BIBLE MARKING ON ALL SUBJECTS CONNECTED WITH THE THEME OF SALVATION.

To enable any person to turn rapidly to verses on these subjects; and to read in consecutive order all passages relating to any one of the topics chosen; to give Bible Readings at a moment's notice; or to tell at a glance the subjects of any verse or passage marked.

NEVER BEFORE HAS THE BIBLE BEEN MADE SO ATTRACTIVE.

The Christian Worker's Bible makes it easy for the ordinary reader to understand the plan of Salvation and to explain it to others. It is plainly marked to show How the Divine Plan of Salvation runs through the whole Bible. This is not generally recognized because the general reader fails to see the golden truth, which is often concealed among a mass of facts, or literary figures, like the golden ore in the rocks and earth. But, in this Bible, one cannot miss it; for every passage has been keyed, in a way easy to understand, and plainly marked in red ink, so that the eye of the most casual reader will be caught and his attention attracted to the vital teaching.

Marked from Genesis to Revelation, so plainly, that one may sit down with a friend, who is not a Christian, and show him, by the words of the Bible, that God loves him and is ready to save him; and just how he can easily become a true Christian.

THE BIBLE FOR THE MASSES. YOU WANT THIS BIBLE NO MATTER HOW MANY OTHERS YOU MAY HAVE. NO OTHER BIBLE TAKES ITS PLACE.

The Christian Worker's Bible is not for a special class of people; It fills the requirements of every class of Scripture readers, giving pleasure and enjoyment both to the learned and unlearned. It is a most helpful hand-book for daily reading. It has hundreds of uses little dreamed of, until you have examined the book for yourself. It is believed that no form in which the Scripture has ever been published makes the reading of it so attractive to both old and young, nor are any Commentaries, voluminous and extensive as they may be, to be compared with this simple system of marking and indexing, in explaining and making easy the way of Salvation. Every page is helpful and leads to further discovery of the greatest truths in God's Word. It is so simple, a child can understand it.

Glances at the World.

It requires much money to conduct a presidential campaign—at least, very large sums are spent. Whether spent legitimately or not, is another question. Of this we are not prepared to speak, but we risk nothing in saying that much is needlessly thrown away. Under existing laws, political managers are required to show the amount of money received by them, and where it comes from. In the recent campaign the Democrats made public their receipts before the election, and the Republicans afterward. Both parties complied with the law. Democrats to the number of 77,000 contributed a total of $620,644.77; Republicans to the number of 12,330 contributed a total of $1,655,518.27, or nearly three times as much as the Democrats. To all appearances, Mr. Bryan and his friends worked as hard and as constantly as Mr. Taft, and really seemed to be quite as numerous. The question in many minds is: Why did the Republican campaign cost so much more than the Democratic? Every inquirer will have to answer the question for himself. It will never be known where much of the money went.

A dispatch from Frankfort, Ky., to the New York World of Nov. 19 says: "In a pit built on the judge's rostrum in the Courthouse in this city there will be several cock fights in the first week in December for the purpose of determining the best game cock in Kentucky. This is a new departure in judging cocks at a poultry exhibition, for heretofore it has been beauty, size and style that have won the blue ribbon, but this year the best and gamest 'scrapper' will be rewarded. The fights will be conducted in the presence of all comers, men, women and children, and they will have an opportunity to see, many of them for the first time in their lives, the pastime. It is a felony to fight cocks in Kentucky, so that when the county officials are among the spectators the cocks will spar with muffs, but when the county officials are not on duty there may be something doing in the oldest Courthouse in Kentucky." We wonder if the noble Kentuckians are going back to barbarism? We hope for the sake of the honor and religion of Kentucky men and women the above statement is not true. We do not believe it is true.

The rights of women, especially of wives, if not constantly increasing, are being more generally recognized and respected. And husbands are being taught that their wives have rights that they must acknowledge. A man a few weeks since, according to the daily papers, charged his wife with "going through his pockets" while he was asleep. Whether she was in search of money for household expenses, or hunting for papers which no good husband has a right to carry about, the charge did not specify. When the case was duly presented to the honorable court, the woman was promptly discharged, his honor deciding without hesitancy, that "a wife has a perfect right to go through her husband's pockets." Good and timid women may take courage; so far as the law is concerned. They will be upheld in their search. But the women must bear in mind that though the honorable judge, in the case recorded, decided that a wife has the right to go through her husband's pockets while he is asleep, he did not decide that she has a right to take out and appropriate to her own use everything she finds. That phase of the subject it seems was not considered. So, after all, the good women had better be a little cautious.

A piece of news, somewhat startling, though refreshing, comes to the public. It is to the effect that Mr. Taft, the President-elect, is in open opposition to Mr. Cannon for the speakership of the next House of Representatives. Mr. Cannon was re-elected to Congress by a majority larger than four years ago, and of course will run for Speaker of the House again. He will have strong backing, and will probably succeed. Mr. Taft however, who has in mind certain policies of a reform character, it is said, will oppose Mr. Cannon, because Mr. Cannon has heretofore stood in the way of such measures, and has effectually blocked all legislation looking in a reform direction. The principal one, in the estimation of Republicans, is the revision of the tariff. On this Mr. Cannon has been classed as a "stand-patter"—firm, even to stubbornness, in his opposition. It may be that Mr. Taft's opposition will either operate to defeat the Speaker, or cause him to modify his views and change his conduct. A later dispatch tells us that Mr. Cannon has come out declaring for revision. If this is true, it gives hope that he will also change his attitude toward proposed temperance legislation which he has persistently held back for a long time. There can be no doubt that public sentiment is against Mr. Cannon. Four or five of his principal helpers were retired by the people in the last election. Possibly Mr. Cannon will take heed.

The Picayune of Nov. 24, quoting from a gentleman of intelligence, a former member of the Legislature, who has traveled extensively through Louisiana, advises its readers that prohibition is a live issue in the State, especially in the northern portion. This gentleman says: "Rock-rib prohibition is the greatest issue in this State to-day. The next Governor of this State will be elected on a statutory prohibition platform. It will sweep the State in another three years. You can hear little else all through the north and western portion of the State. In my opinion, there will be just two planks in the next winning platform in Louisiana: First, State-wide prohibition; second, economics in the administration of the State Government. It is rather early to figure on candidates, but many people are already talking. I believe north Louisiana will get the next Governor. There was prohibition talk in the last State campaign, but the tide is now reaching its full force, and I believe it will sweep everything before it, from the Arkansas line to the gulf; and this will be a time when there will be no exception for New Orleans. It's an old custom in the Legislature in the writing of a bill to almost automatically write: 'The Parish of Orleans excepted,' but not so in the prohibition fight three years hence. New Orleans must face the issue. I do not believe the Governor will come from New Orleans." Let us hope that this gentleman is a true prophet.

More attention is just now being given to the cause of lawlessness than usual. In a strong sermon by Bishop Hoss at McKendree, Nashville, he attributed lawlessness to three things—the law's delay, the failure to adequately punish criminals, and the too free use of the pardoning power of governors. This sermon was delivered after the killing of Captain Rankin by the Reelfoot night-riders, and before the murder of Senator Carmack. He reiterated, in part, in a letter read at the memorial services held in honor of the martyred patriot. And last week Judge McCall, in the United States Court at Memphis, in alluding to these two evil deeds as striking illustrations of the lawless spirit, said to the Federal Jury: "I am inclined to think that we find this state of affairs existing because our citizenship has taken so little interest in the enforcement of our criminal laws. Who among us can believe that, if the perpetrators of either of these offenses had felt that the severe penalty of the law as applied to the real facts in each case would surely be inflicted by the Court upon them without delay, that either crime would have been committed? Both of these offenses are wholly without the jurisdiction of this Court, yet as a citizen of Tennessee, charged with the grave responsibility of administering the law in one of the courts of our dual government, I feel that I may properly refer to these most recent and regrettable occurrences in order to impress upon you, gentlemen of the jury, the importance of teaching the citizenship of this country the belated lesson that all criminal statutes, whether State or Federal, whether of high or low degree, should be rigidly enforced." How to remedy this state of things, let God-fearing judges and lawyers say. They have the power.

THE MINUTES—REPORTS BY CHURCHES.

BY REV. W. A. [illegible]

The year has ended and the preachers are gathering to the judgment seat. Some come with smiles and eagerness, some with doubtful look. "How are you, Brother A.? Are your collections in full?" "Full and running over," replies the happy man, ready for the "Well done, good and faithful servant." The Conference is called to order and the Bishop, in a few loving words, greets the brethren and hopes that we shall be able to make a good showing, meaning the collections. At length the books are fully opened and the names are called. A presiding elder reports larger collections than ever before, and the other presiding elders meditate and reflect. "How can I figure my district up to that?" Brother Jones' name is called. "Nothing against Brother Jones." "Collections all in full, Bishop." "Character passes." Smith's name is called. Smith goes into detail—built one church, repaired the parsonage, paid off an old debt, had forty conversions. "What about the collections, Brother Smith." "They are not full, Bishop." "Sorry for that," says the Bishop. "That will do. Tom Brown. Anything against Tom Brown?" and Smith sits down with a sense of failure, and the brethren who have failed feel sorry for Smith, and the brethren who have reported "full" feel sorry for Smith, and Smith feels sorry for himself and mentally resolves that next year he will begin early and hang on late and report full, if he does nothing else. This is the process, step by step, and who will say that one important step has been omitted? That omitted step is the weak spot in Methodism. The local Church is ignored. Pause, readers; pause pastor, elder, Bishop, and look at that fact. The local, individual Church is ignored. Three-fourths of our local churches have individuality. Outside of the station the only personality is the circuit. The circuit pays—the circuit falls behind—the circuit is reported to Conference—the circuit goes into the Minutes. The Church that pays gets no credit if the circuit fails.—J. S. S., in St. Louis Advocate.

The South Carolina Conference has for a number of years recognized the importance of the local churches forming a pastoral charge being represented in the annual reports. Accordingly the Minutes, by a standing order of the Conference, when published, show an itemized report from each individual Church. It pays in several ways. There is a wholesome stimulus experienced by each Church on the circuit, and results show an increase of contributions and a manifest advance in other directions. The simple fact that "we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ" carries with it an incentive to higher living, we everyone acknowledge. Moreover, there is a just satisfaction in knowing that the good we each may do will be duly recognized. Then, too, it does good to turn on the light. The presence of the light discourages deeds of darkness. There is a well-defined political economy to the effect that it should always be easy for everyone to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong. The light is good and should reach even unto the uttermost part of each pastoral charge. Every Methodist home should have in it a copy of the Minutes of the Annual Conference each recurring year. The investment would be wise from an educational standpoint. This yearly exhibit encourages confidence in the contributors. There are but two practical difficulties in the way of thus bringing out the individuality of the churches, namely the increased cost of the publication, and insufferable laziness of the preacher-in-charge, who, rather than take the pains and time to make out accurately the exhibit, leaves his circuit to be placarded in the Minutes as "irregularly reported." The tabulated work is difficult for the printer and hence calls for more remuneration than ordinary composition. Notwithstanding the additional expense, the best interest of the Church requires and the result warrants the expenditure. Furthermore, in South Carolina the individual churches pay for publication and it is right that they should have recognition therein. The writer believes that it would be helpful for each presiding elder to have a few thousand copies of tabulated reports from his district printed for gratuitous distribution in the bounds of his work. This could be done at trifling cost if the order is placed with the publisher of the Minutes before the type is distributed.

SMALLER DISTRICTS.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER, D.D.

In common with many other readers, I am delighted to read your editorial of last week (Nov. 26) anent some views previously expressed by Brother Alford.

Forty-eight years' experience in the itinerant service has furnished a store of observation from which I think one could speak advisedly, especially since about one-fourth—or, at least, a large proportion—of that time has been spent in district work.

For the last thirty years, or longer—up to eight or ten years ago—it has been the custom in the most of the Louisiana Conference districts for the pastor to collect the salary of the presiding elder. When the districts had only twelve or fourteen charges in them, this money was much more easily raised than when there were eighteen or twenty, or more, charges. Sometimes churches refuse to pay anything for the presiding elder, for the reason that he has rendered no service, or that he came on the morning train and left in the afternoon. This may not be Methodist polity, but it is a fact among Methodist people.

If I were in the presiding elder business, I would prefer a district having not more than twelve charges; or, if over fourteen, not less than forty. The time has come when the business of religious enterprises must be conducted on business lines. The people have found that the business of a Quarterly Conference is transacted just as well in the absence of a presiding elder as when he is present, and very naturally ask: "Why pay for what we do not need?"

To enlarge the districts would make the office of presiding elder purely a business affair, and would minimize the expense to the people, and, at the same time, greatly increase the means for building, furnishing and maintaining district parsonages. But to reduce the districts to such an extent as to give each charge a two days' service every three months brings the quarterly meetings into the realm of religious work, in which the Church would enter with a zeal worthy of emulation.

In the Louisiana Conference there are seven districts, the average salary of which is $1253.85 (omitting fractions), and only three pastoral charges in the Conference which average a greater sum, viz., $2000, and only seven which pay over $1,200; while the general average of all pastors is a few cents more than $670.

Experience has taught us that since the facilities for travel have been so greatly improved, the work of a presiding elder, or the expense of his travel, is but little, if any, greater than the labor and expense of a large circuit.

If there were ten districts in the Louisiana Conference, the average salary of the presiding elder, assessed on the basis now used, would be $1,400, which, plus the reduced traveling expenses, would easily equal $1,500, as districts are now arranged. There are only six pastoral charges which pay salaries in excess of that amount.

Thus, by adding three districts to the number now existing, the salaries of three men would be raised from $250 to $500 above their present salaries, with no additional tax on the people. True, the salaries of seven men might be reduced; but these seven men would still be left on a good living salary. There are, comparatively, few business men whose salaries are in excess of $1,200 to $1,500.

The salaries of Methodist preachers are ridiculously unequal. There are four in the Louisiana Conference whose average salary is $51, and seventeen whose salaries are less than $300 per annum! There are five "college men" whose average salaries are a few cents short of $525. At least two of these men are not only "college boys," but are classics. The reduction of the size of the districts, enabling the presiding elders to give more time and attention to this part of the work, would, if they were worthy of their offices, largely remedy this hardship.

This salary side of the question should not be a governing thought in arranging the districts for the greatest good to the Church, but is an "appurtenance thereto belonging," and cannot be overlooked.

Having been an exhorter, local preacher, missionary in rural districts and in the Confederate Army, a circuit rider, a station preacher and presiding elder; and having, in a sort of critical way, observed the workings of Methodism through a series of more than fifty years—whether my speech be of little or no weight—I feel I have a right to speak.

Since writing the above lines, looking over my "P. E. Records" for several years, I find the largest salary ever received by me was on a district having thirteen pastoral charges, where I had time to hold protracted meetings in the country churches en route to and from the places where the quarterly meetings were held.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH IN AMERICA.

BY REV. W. T. WOODWARD.

"A Biblically Organized Church" is the heading of an article appearing in last week's Baptist Chronicle, of Alexandria, La., written by Rev. J. Benjamin Lawrence, of New Orleans. He attempts to prove that no Church is a "true" Church unless it can go back to the twelve with an unbroken chain."

He takes to task the Southwestern Presbyterian for saying: "Suppose a Bible was to float from a wrecked ship to a heathen island, inhabited by men who had never heard the gospel. Suppose that the people should, by some means be able to read it; having done so, should accept Christ, repent of their sins, resolve to lead a new life, and determine to use all the means of grace to develop and maintain their Christian life. Suppose to accomplish these ends, and to follow the suggestions of that Bible, they bound themselves together to worship, and testify, and to spread the faith amongst themselves, or to islands near them, and choose out of their own number men who shall rule and minister according to the Word—would this be a true Church of Christ? Would these officers be duly authorized to administer its affairs and to set apart other officers and to send ministers to these adjacent islands? Or would they have to wait, if need be, a century until in some manner a ship could bring them from some other land a Bishop whose ordination was in line of supposed actual, tactual, historical episcopacy? Such is not inconceivable. Is it likely that God would make outward touch so essential to the propagation of the faith and the validity of the ordinances of his house? We opine that the church organized on that island, and having God's Word for its guide and authority, would be as regular and true a church as any in England or America."

Brother Lawrence breaks off to the water as soon as he gets the question, and the first pass he makes is at infant baptism. He asks the question: "Can Protestants prove to Baptists that the baptism of infants is good and useful? No: they cannot, because, according to Protestant principles, such baptism is useless." This question and answer he takes from the Roman Catholic Catechism on Baptism.

I answer the above in this way: Convince a Baptist against his will, he's of the same opinion still. No man can show another anything that he has made up his mind not to see.

"And so I conclude that if the Bible were to drift down to a people who had never heard of it before, and they were to organize a church according to its teaching, they would never think of baptizing a helpless babe, who could not believe, and so away would go the Presbyterian Church."

"2. In the second place, when it comes to the act of baptism, this new church, formed according to the teaching of the Bible, would depart from the practice of Presbyterians. If there was a river in that island, they would take those believing ones down to that river, and then, like Philip and the eunuch, they would both go down into the water, both the baptizer and the one to be baptized; they would both come up out of the water."

Dr. S. S. Keener last year traveled through Palestine and wrote very explicitly on the above points in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE that no one could be immersed in that Philip and eunuch basin. Dr. J. M. Moore is just back from a trip all over the old country, and he writes in the Nashville Advocate that it is not possible to immerse one in this place."

Brother Lawrence continues to tell us "the word Christ used would settle all disputes on the question of baptism." "They would find in that Book these words: 'Keo,' to pour; 'rantizi,' to sprinkle, and 'baptizo,' to dip. They would find baptism referred to 125 times in the New Testament, and in every instance 'baptizo' is used. From this they would conclude that if Christ had wanted his people to sprinkle or pour, the words used would have been 'keo' and 'rantizi,' instead of 'baptizo.' There would be evident to them that Christ commanded immersion. Such is the decision of the Greek Church. The Greeks, who have always spoken the language in which the New Testament was written, have always immersed, and laugh at the idea of sprinkling or pouring. And so, away would go the Presbyterian Church, if a church were organized on the Bible basis."

"3. In the third place the polity of the Church would be different. If there should happen to be more than one church organized in that island, or any number of churches, and that they were modeled after the New Testament, they would still be free and independent bodies. Presbyterianism is better than Episcopacy, but it has no more Scripture for its existence than has Episcopacy. Both these forms of church government imply that local congregations have to enter into the composition of what is called the Church. There is in the New Testament (and it would be unscriptural to go to the Old Testament for the principles by which to govern a Christian Church) no foundation for such a church organization. Archbishop Whately, a dignitary of the Church of England, referring to the New Testament Church, says: 'They were each a distinct, independent community on earth, united by the common principles on which they were founded, and by their mutual agreement, affection, and respect, but not having any one recognized head on earth, or acknowledging any sovereignty of one of these societies over others.' The New Testament represents each church as a sovereignty of one of the societies over others. . . . If these island people were to organize on New Testament principles, away would go the system of Presbyterianism."

I want my readers to notice closely the following statements:

"But now, coming to the point of ordinations raised by the Southwestern. The Southwestern asks the question, if these officers would be truly authorized to administer the affairs in the Church, or would they have to wait a hundred years for some chance ship to bring them the proper credentials? They would not have to wait for this supposed ship to receive power to preach the Gospel and to save people. This they could do, whether ordained or not, but in order to be a true church of Christ, with the right divine to administer the ordinances, they must be regularly established. Nothing is more clear than this in the New Testament. The authority to baptize is not vested in the individual believer, but in the Church, who alone can ordain men for this purpose; and this ordination, to be regular, must be by a council of Bishops or pastors, who are themselves ordained, and this line of ordination must reach back to the ordination of the twelve by Christ on the mountain-top." . . . "And so this congregation of Christians on the island could never be a church until the line of connection was made with the New Testament Church."

All the above is quoted in full so as the reader can form an intelligent conception of the position that Brother Lawrence takes. His last position, taken to prove the church organized on the island by those people is not a true church, is the very argument that unchurches himself and all his Baptist brethren. I want to ask Brother J. B. Lawrence: Who baptized Roger Williams? And then tell me who baptized Ezekiel Holliman? When he answers the above questions, I want him to tell me by what authority either of these men baptized. Williams and Holliman were the founders of the Baptist Church in America, and not John the Baptist, nor any of his disciples. Let him read Benedict's History of the Baptists, page 450; Dr. Cramp's History of the Baptists, p. 461:

Williams was a man of good heart, but of unsteady mind. Within a year he withdrew from the Baptists, because their baptism did not come from the apostles. He found no one in England or America authorized to baptize, and so he lived and died out of the Church, waiting for a new succession. And the Baptist historians themselves are in doubt as to how this baptism was performed—whether by dipping or affusion. Armitage's History, p. 660.

VARIETY AND UNITY.

BY REV. A. H. WILLIAMS.

"One star differeth from another star in glory," says the Word, and "we being many are one body in Christ."

1. People differ, so also do churches. Variety everywhere prevails. In the vegetable kingdom many kinds are found. This same fact applies to the minerals, and to the races of humanity, and also to the smallest system of planets as well as to the largest and most complicated; and "So also is the resurrection," says the teacher of the Gentiles. The mansions of heaven even may be wanting in similarity, since very unlike must be the attainments and rewards of the occupants.

But of God's charity it is affirmed: "This is the grace must live and sing—when faith and hope shall cease." And thus must perpetuate the unity of heaven forever.

Even now exists the unity of the Christian Church, as was true in apostolic times. "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," and being many are one body, and the many must have recognition and weight of meaning just the same as the word one.

2. It may be unfortunate to have been created a blade of grass rather than a tall oak or magnificent rosebush; a snowbird instead of an eagle, or to "occupy," as a small church, rather than as a greater or more powerful; but "shall the thing formed say unto him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?" And the glory of the heavens is possible because of prevailing differences, as is also the captivating nature of the earth, God's footstool.

It is allowable to emulate the virtues and high standards of really noble and successful people, but never could it be wise to compromise an excellence or to lower a proper ideal in order to secure uniformity or to disarm opposition.

"Be ye therefore perfect," said the Savior, but in connection with this injunction he proceeded to record an object lesson in steadfast attentiveness to carry out the purpose of his advent into the world. The five-talent man must attract envy and criticism and even antagonism, but much given indicates also much required. Vigilance therefore, and earnest efforts are important for him just the same as for the man of smallest gifts and fewest opportunities. The same God that made the largest luminary created also the smallest and will see to it that each alike has a place in which to shine.

"He spake and it was done," but he never speaks without a purpose, and the fact of creation carries with it the idea of protection, so that when God makes a Christian or a Church, great or ordinary, the place is ready and the work divinely appointed, and the heavens may pass away, but the pledge of his omnipotent care and leadership must abide until the work of the kingdom is completed in every section of the world.

3. The seeds of sin and of degeneracy have been sown among the nations of humanity. Many false religions and adherents, and Satan, if possible, would propagate heresy and erroneous standards of piety, even among the best and most efficient of Christian churches, and so rule everywhere as to blot out the righteousness which exalteth nations. The religion of Christ as exemplified and taught by his Church is the panacea for human ills.

Mr. Taft has well said: "No nation can be great without religion, and to promote religion we must have the Church." And said the divine Christ, "upon this rock will I build my Church," and St. Paul affirmed, "this is he that was in the Church in the wilderness;" and again, "they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ." (1st. Cor. x, 4.) The Christ of the Church is the hope of the world.

4. The Christian churches may well combine to possess the world for Christ. The greatest power for good, however, may not be secured by blotting out distinctions and compromising identity. Plants do not flourish alike in a given location, and the tropical animal must perish at the snow of the north; and it is no discredit to a given denomination that it does not prosper just the same in any section of the world. The Savior himself was unpopular at Capernaum and withdrew at the last from Jerusalem.

"The open door" is to be noted and conditions considered in proceeding to plant the Church and to promote the cause of Christ. "All things to all men" may apply among the churches as well as to the ministry of the world. The Socialistic idea, to parcel out and to reduce all alike to a given, just-the-same-for-each, could hardly apply among churches nor prevail among a people of independence.

Jupiter must "shine on" even though the "Dog Star" make wry faces and complain of "autonomy." "Help us to help each other, Lord," is good religion and for practice, on proper occasions; but competition even among churches awakens industry and develops skill in the divine art of doing good.

"Hold that fast that thou hast, that no man take thy crown," was the admonition to the Church at Philadelphia of the Revelations.

5. Fraternity is beautiful, and a surplus of churches has in instances produced the need of union. But the "grain of mustard-seed," said the Savior, "groweth up," and "shooteth out branches." "So much so that the fowls of the air (or nations of mankind) lodge in the branches thereof." Such was the prophecy, and such was true of the Methodist movement. The "grain of mustard seed" was planted in the conversion of Mr. Wesley, and the "groweth up" appeared in the great revivals which swept the Old World and the New until in 1784, at the city of Baltimore, Md., the movement became to be a tree, or Church, and later "put forth branches," and the thrifty growth of the great Methodist (North), Southern Methodist, British Wesleyan and Methodist Church in Canada, with sundry others, even unto the Japanese Methodist Church, has verified the Savior's prophecy, and indicated God's method of propagating his Church. Other and great churches have originated in small beginnings, and as per the mustard seed plan, have grown and put forth branches; and the fact that some single departments of the kingdom of Christ should pose in some cases as the whole and only Church, does not destroy the truth of the parable nor prevent its fulfillment in the history of the Christian movements of the world.

COFFEE TALKS.

No. 1.

Seasoning.

You would not eat unseasoned food, would you? It takes salt to give zest to what is eaten. And so coffee, too, may be seasoned, all its good qualities and flavor brought out. The Dutch of Holland had the secret of seasoning coffee for more than a hundred years. The French and the French-speaking people of New Orleans now have it. That is why French coffee and New Orleans coffee are famous the world over. That is why is so rich, refreshing and satisfying. It is a coffee of the highest grade with just enough of the French seasoning to make it perfect. When you once taste it, the other kind will be about as satisfactory to you as unsalted food.

The "tree" was first, then the branches; and we, being many, are one body in Christ.

6. To resolve the created systems of the universe into original "Star dust," and to send out an immense planet, glowing with intensest light, to fill a place in the void of space, would be to defeat the plans of God and to forever spoil the beauty of creation. Likewise to convert the churches, very many in number, into one great organization, emitting the light of one system of truth, singing alike the songs of Zion, and working by methods just the same to extend the kingdom of Christ, would be to mar the power and beauty of the movement and to retard the progress of the world's salvation.

THE DAWSON MEETING AND THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Replying to your request for an account of the Dawson meeting, let me say that his coming here has done good in many ways. Many good people have long felt that there ought to be a way to conduct a meeting in a city without sensational methods. It should not be necessary to be offensive in order to be effective. It ought also to be possible to present the gospel from the standpoint of modern scholarship, and of the accepted results of recent research and thought. There are those who suppose that modern biblical scholarship is without evangelistic fervor or power and therefore is subversive of the old-time religion. Such a feeling tends to unsettle faith among those who are sympathetic with scientific methods and to discount philosophy and science among those who suppose them antagonistic to religion. Both errors need to be corrected. There ought also to be a non-technical way of presenting the great truths of religion without the use of stale formula that have lost their fullest meaning to those who live in the present-day conceptions and speak a present-day language. All these things are done most admirably by Dr. Dawson. Thoroughly modern in spirit, conversant with the thought of these times, without sensationalism, he speaks to the men of to-day in terms they cannot fail to understand, telling over again the old, old story in language, simple and beautiful, chaste and elegant. He puts the gospel in its most attractive form. There is poetry in all he says.

His stay here was all too short. The first week was spent in preliminary work. The people did not wake up to what he was doing till the second week. Sane methods are generally slow. When we came to the close he was beginning to get an adequate hearing, and the third week, no doubt, would have brought telling results. He had begun to speak to the city. He toned up our people and gave them a better appreciation of things spiritually. Service was the key-note of his plea to Christians, and quite a number pledged themselves to do more than heretofore.

The most apparent result was an increase in the number of volunteers for our social settlement work on Laurel Street. It has long been my idea that a family church like Rayne Memorial should have a centre of activities far afield from their own community and life. The Church is a force to be delivered upon society rather than a field to be worked. In order to carry out this idea my people rented last spring a house, the best in the neighborhood of the Lane Mills, as a center of social effort. Boys' clubs, girls' clubs, mothers' clubs, night schools, sewing schools, cooking schools, friendly visiting, the elder brother work, in which a prominent business man takes a brother's interest in a boy who is without touch with the great outside world, a boy without a chance, and opens the world to him—all these things will be enterprised in our Church house this winter. Many have volunteered for these services, and every effort will be made to make Rayne a social force among people we cannot touch by ordinary methods of Church work. All this was greatly helped by Dr. Dawson's ministry here. Not a few people caught new visions of life and service.

As to the Italian work. Last spring I wrote to Dr. Nelson that we ought to begin work among the Italians, and if he would furnish and support a man I would do my best to put Rayne Memorial behind the work and direct it. [illegible] laying plans for a year or two hence; but Dr. Nelson transferred Mr. Zito from Tampa here the very next week and we opened work. I thought it would take a year or two to get into touch with the Italians and wrote Dr. Nelson that he must be ready for long efforts before we accomplished anything. To our astonishment Brother Zito got a hearing at once. Rev. Mr. Russo, who has been here forty years working for the Presbyterians, came to his help and spared no pains to push him to the front. Brother Townsley was indefatigable in his efforts to open his field to the new-comer. We furnished rooms and started him the best we could. When he had been here a few weeks he asked me if he might begin a night school. I told him to use every available means to get into touch with his people. In a little while he had gathered sixty men in a night school; opened a Sunday School; gathered a fair congregation of the best Italians in an evangelistic service every Sunday, secured a number of catechumens, now seventeen, and organized a Marconi Club, whose purpose is to study the great men of Italy from the twelfth century on, and especially the religion preached by Zito. The extent of his touch with his people is indicated by the fact that recently he had a sort of festive occasion at his rooms, attended by over two hundred. His work is the most marvelous I have ever been associated with.

When it was demonstrated that the field was white, we all wanted a larger work undertaken in that part of the city and the Board of Missions and the Woman's Home Mission Board began to plan better things. They have a Commission at work now. Miss Bennett, Mrs. McDonald and Dr. Nelson have been here this week. In conjunction with a local Committee they are planning to open a larger Italian Mission, to put the two deaconesses now here into a house across Canal Street, and Zito in a separate apartment of the same house; place there a general superintendent, offer free clinics, provide a dispensary, arrange an adequate evangelistic hall, open sewing schools, settlement work and such other activities as may seem wise among both foreigners and Americans, take hold of the immigrant problem, and, in every possible way answer the call of the people there for service along educational, social and religious lines. It is hoped to build up a great mission station of commanding power. A suitable place has not yet been found and the details have not yet been worked out. It is the beginning of better things for New Orleans Methodism.

The following from the Times-Democrat, Nov. 25, will be of interest:

"Rev. Dr. John R. Nelson, Miss Belle H. Bennett and Mrs. Robert McDonald, leaders of the Home Mission cause of the Southern Methodist Church, met yesterday afternoon with the City Mission Board of that Church in the Ladie's parlor of the First Methodist Church. They talked over, for several hours, the plans for establishing a strong mission in the city below Canal Street, which will include features of work which will not intrench upon any other line in the city. Part of it will be a seamen's rest room, another part a clinic and dispensary, which will be under the direct supervision of the deaconess-nurse, Miss Duncan, who has just arrived. The mission will have a superintendent and his wife at the head of it, and the two deaconesses employed by the Board will live there.

"There was some talk yesterday of giving up the Mary Werlein Mission, 1026 Tchoupitoulas Street, but after discussion it was decided that the City Mission Board would continue its work there in the future as it has done in the past, provided it was agreeable to the Annual Conference. Mrs. Meekins will be retained as the special [illegible] worker.

"In regard to continuing the old mission in Tchoupitoulas Street, the City Mission Board adopted a resolution yesterday pledging its co-operation with the General Board in whatever [illegible] undertake in this city.

"Toward the close of the meeting Miss Daisy Duncan, the deaconess-nurse, who has been engaged to come to New Orleans especially in connection with the proposed new mission, told of her month's study in New York in the hospitals and clinics there, where she took a post-graduate course in practical clinics and nursing. Miss Duncan said that she had some special plans for New Orleans which she would submit to the Board later. The question was asked if the deaconess-nurse would be permitted to visit the sick of the entire Church in New Orleans, to which Miss Bennett replied that she would have enough to do in the special district in which she would work."

A MOTHER IN ISRAEL HAS FALLEN.

Mrs. Martha P. Foster, mother of Senator M. J. Foster (ex-Governor), died in Franklin, La., last Sunday morning after a lingering illness of some months' duration. She was eighty years old and had been for fifty-four years a member of the Methodist Church. Despite her years, she was one of the most active members up to the time of her last sickness. A life like hers is a crown of glory to any Church, and those who remain should feel that the day of her death is not the day of loss, but the crowning day, when another faithful one enters into her reward.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled anywhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department; unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian Influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

In January of this year the Ladie's Aid Society of the Main Street Methodist Church, at Laurel, Miss., by a unanimous vote, decided to become merged into a Woman's Home Mission Society, and were organized, bringing with them a membership roll numbering 57. In the spring, eight members were lost (removed from the city), but twelve new ones were gained, the roll now having sixty-one. There are sixteen subscribers to Our Homes. Since organization the members have made 279 visits to the sick and strangers; have given 118 garments to the poor, and 23 meals. Our dues sent to Conference Treasurer have amounted to $30.40; money given to poor, $18.90. In our local department the total collections were $218.37; disbursements, $205.27; cash on hand, $13.10.

One debt paid by the members through this department was a debt of over $150 which has been owing to the Board of Church Extension for years. This was a loan made by them to aid the building of the Laurel parsonage. To raise this money an alphabetical contest was entered into, the members being formed into two bands, known as the A. B. C. Band and the X. Y. Z. Band. The Church membership roll was divided in half, alphabetically, and given to the two bands of workers, and subscriptions were solicited. A strict rule of the contest was that no one except members of the Main Street Church should be asked for a subscription. Over $100 was the result. Over $25 was raised by the various members, each earning money in her own home, and bringing it, with an original poem, describing how it was earned, to the meeting.

The poems were a delightful feature of the programme each month.

The members are deeply interested in the great cause of Home Missions, and are reading and becoming informed about all the departments of the work. New names are added to the roll at every meeting.

MRS. MARGARET E. DORSEY.

A SHORT SKETCH OF A NOBLE LIFE.

The Word of God tells us that the path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more until the perfect day, and, again, the memory of the just is blessed. He has illustrated these verses numberless times in the noble and self-sacrificing lives of His followers; and, though dead, still speak with an ever-increasing and widening influence, the limits of which can only be measured when time shall be no more. Among these saints is the subject of this sketch. Time and space would fail me to speak singly of her many virtues as a close disciple of her Lord and Master. Her motive and purpose in life was, that each and every one of her acts might reflect the goodness and mercy of him whom she early in youth enthroned in her heart as the Lord of lords.

Mrs. Dorsey could, like St. Paul, if either had so desired, have boasted of most worthy ancestry, she being a descendant of DuBose, of Huguenot fame, who, for his religion, was exiled from his native France. And her grandfather, John G. Richardson, was Colonel of a Mississippi Regiment which saw severe service under General Jackson in the battle of New Orleans. But such matters gave her little concern. She was content that she was of gentle birth, her great concern being to follow close in the footsteps of him who said, "Let your light so shine, that others seeing your good works may glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Mrs. Dorsey's maiden name was Bowman. She was the daughter of Ira and Mary E. Bowman, and was born Nov. 30, 1835, in Centerville, Miss., and shortly after moved with her parents to Clinton, La., and a few years later with them moved to their plantation at Oak Dale, a beautiful home on the banks of the Tensas River in Tensas Parish, La. This grand old home, with its numberless and wide-spreading live oaks, beautifully festooned with their rich drapings of moss, was the abode of warm hearts, and the frequent scenes of true Southern hospitality. Here in this happy home Mrs. Dorsey grew from infancy into lovely womanhood under the benign and gentle influence of religious parents, and also grew into a trusting and beautiful Christian life. When asked by persons when she was converted, her reply would always be: she never knew the time, for she had always been "taught to pray and trust in God," and so by faith in her Savior she early in life ripened into those ideal Christian graces that adorned her long and useful life.

In this beautiful home on the Tensas, her heart and hand were won by Dr. John Holmes Dorsey, a successful practitioner of medicine, and it was here they plighted their vows of betrothal, and after their marriage, with the blessings of her parents on them both, they moved to and began their married life in Morehouse Parish, La., where she soon after received her certificate of Church membership from the Tensas Methodist Chapel and placed it in the Methodist Church near her home, and here she put in full force earnest, self-denying Christian work, and thereby won and retained the sincere love, admiration and affection of not only the members of her Church, but of the entire community, for a period of more than forty-nine years.

In the fall of 1906 Mrs. Dorsey sought relief from a malignant attack of rheumatism by going to Hot Springs, Ark., but not improving, and thinking a change of climate might bring the coveted relief, she went to her niece, Mrs. Lizzie A. Gibson, in Webster Groves, Mo., where she met with a warm welcome not only from her, but also from her husband's family, where every care was bestowed upon her and her every want was lovingly administered to. Here, let me say that Mrs. Gibson was the only daughter of Mrs. Fannie Alexander, of blessed memory, who died, leaving her three children in Mrs. Dorsey's care. No mother ever cared or loved her own children with more dutiful and tender affection than did Mrs. Dorsey bestow upon these motherless children, and no children ever returned truer and sweeter affection to a loved parent than did these children to their aunt, and it was touching in the extreme to see how this love flowed in upon her in her last moments from her niece and from her nephew, Dr. Robert Alexander. It was another proof of the scripture of "Scatter thy bread upon the waters and thou shalt find it after many days."

While everything was done that could have been done, all was of no avail, and she rapidly sank to her end, Nov. 23, 1906, quietly, calmly and resignedly to her Master's will, with many and touching expressions of her eternal hope being anchored in the love and confidence of her Savior, and without one murmur. Away from the loved land of her birth—away from her Southern home to which she was so strongly attached—away from her grandchildren and daughter-in-law, all of whom she loved in verity and truth, and in her latest breath commending them to the love, care and guardianship of her Heavenly Father and Elder Brother, upon whom she relied with sweet and trusting confidence, thus she passed into her eternal home, where God shall wipe away all tears from her eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away.

ADVICE TO A YOUNG MAN.

Remeber, son, that the world is older than you are, by several years; that for thousands of years it has been so full of smarter and better young men than yourself, that their feet stick out of the dormer-windows; that when they died the old globe went whirling on, and not one man in ten million went to the funeral, or even heard of the death.

Be as smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can, without blowing the packing out of your cylinder-head; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world, but don't dazzle people with it, and don't imagine a thing is so, just because you say it is. Don't be too sorry for your father because he knows so much less than you do; remember the reply of Doctor Wayland to the student of Brown University who said it was an easy enough thing to make proverbs such as Solomon wrote. "Make a few," tersely replied the old man. We never heard that the young man made any—not more than two, or three, anyhow.

The world has great need of young men; but no greater need than the young men have of it. Your clothes fit you better than your father's fit him; they cost more money, they are more stylish, your mustache is neater, the cut of your hair is better, and you are prettier, oh, far prettier than "pa." But, young man, the old gentleman gets the bigger salary and his homely, scrambling signature on the business end of a check will bring more money out of the bank in five minutes than you could get out with a ream of paper and a copper-plate signature in six months.

Young men are useful, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic successfully without them. But are they novelties, son. Oh, no, nothing of the kind. They have been here before. Do not be so modest as to shut yourself clear out, but don't be so fresh you will have to be put away in the cool to keep from spoiling.

Don't be afraid that your merit will not be discovered. People all over the world are hunting for you; if you are worth finding they will find you. A diamond isn't so easily found as a quartz pebble, but people search for it all the more intently.—Bob Burdette.

"OUT OF THE MOUTH OF BABES."

"At your work again, like the faithful man you are," and the minister laid a kindly hand on Dr. Mitchell's shoulder, as the latter left his carriage with his medicine-case in his hand.

"It is my duty, Mr. Armstrong," the Doctor answered, summoning a brave smile. Then a wave of pain swept his face as he added: "I have saved, or helped to save, many a child's life, but I could not save my own child."

"Yes," responded the minister, "the comparison is not perfect, of course, but you know there was One of whom it was said, 'He saved others, himself he could not save.' He knows."

"Thank you. The words are good for me. He knows and the mockery was true. He could not, because he would not. Otherwise He could never have borne our griefs and carried our sorrows."

"How is the wife bearing up?" the minister asked, and was sorry a minute after, because the cloud came once more into the doctor's eyes.

"Not as well as I could wish," he replied, with a certain reserve; "but perhaps time will better that." He forced a brave smile again, saying: "However, my patients need cheer, and their physicians must not draw too much on their sympathies. Good morning."

The minister went on his way with a feeling of reverential admiration for this man. The day before he had buried Dr. Mitchell's little daughter, her father's favorite child—if such a man could show favoritism—and to-day, resolutely [illegible] his grief one side, the doctor [illegible] [illegible]ing his daily round.

There was little in his home to [illegible] courage. His wife [illegible] [illegible] reproached him for [illegible] every-day threads of life. [illegible] world-work its healing [illegible] slow in accomplishing [illegible] [illegible] went on. Mrs. Mitchell [illegible] cheerfulness, and [illegible] resent any approach [illegible]. She never went into [illegible] and refused to see those who called. [illegible] three other children—a boy and two girls, [illegible] having been next to the youngest. [illegible] very dull for them. If they played in the [illegible] they were liable to hear the mother's "Hush!" and they tip-toed about. Dr. Mitchell did not [illegible] wish Edna to fade out of their memory. He longed to speak of her, and have the children think of her, not as dead, but as living in a happy home, and not forgetting them. Yet if her name was on any lip, Mrs. Mitchell's eyes at once overflowed, and perhaps she left the table, as if unable to bear any mention of the dear little daughter.

Gloom settled on the house. Dr. Mitchell almost despaired of any brightness coming; but the heavenly Father had a way prepared to meet this earthly father's needs.

One summer afternoon Mrs. Mitchell lay resting in her darkened room. She always drew the shutters together now, but as the day was warm the window was left open to its full extent. The children, heedless of the fact, happened to be talking just outside. She was about to send them away when a sentence arrested her, and involuntarily she listened.

"Fathers is fathers," the boy Richard was saying stoutly, if with little regard to grammar, "as much as mothers is mothers. Father cares just exactly as much as mother does about Edna, but men must work and go out, and"—he hesitated, "and pay the bills. And father keeps a lot of folks from feeling bad, 'cause he cures 'em. I heard a man say," the boy was evidently struggling with his emotions, yet there was a proud ring in his voice: "I did hear a man say that Dr. Mitchell was a lots better doctor since he lost his little girl, 'cause he knew what 'twas to lose, and he felt for folks."

Then Anna's voice was heard: "Do you s'pose, Dickie, that mother really thinks Edna is up in heaven with Jesus? 'Cause I think 'twould make her glad sometimes. How I do wish we could play and have good times as we used to. I think it would be real nice to play just as if Edna was here—just pretend, you know, and talk to her. I shouldn't wonder a bit if Jesus would let her look on and listen. He's so nice to little children. Maybe we can some day, if mother ever forgives God."

The mother listened, spellbound. She could not have torn herself away. And what a revelation was in the children's words! How true [illegible] the brunt. [illegible] grief. Finally the world go to [illegible] hopeless [illegible] believe that Edna was [illegible] safe and happy in the heavenly fold, and could [illegible] however much she [illegible] dear, sweet presence. "Forgive [illegible]." That cut to the quick. The [illegible] child had [illegible] sorest spot, [illegible] she realized that the hardest part of any [illegible] at war with itself about it. Then [illegible] she fought out the battle of her re[illegible] and after a severe struggle [illegible] with resignation in her face.

[illegible] she called her husband in as soon [illegible] she heard his step. It was his due to receive her first word of the new peace which filled her being. "I have been so selfish, Mark, so abominably selfish!" and she told him all the children's sayings. "The sorrow was yours as much as mine, and I acted as if you had no share in it. I've made everything so hard for you all."

The strong man quivered with the keen joy of this change. He took his wife in his arms. "It is so good to have your true self back again," he whispered. "We can bear our bereavement so long as we bear it together."

Not much was said to the children directly, but when tea-time came Mrs. Mitchell appeared at the table with a bright face.

"Mother is much better now, my dears, and does not need to keep quite any longer. After tea we will have that pretty march Edna used to like so well, and mother will play it for you."

It was bravely done, and her husband's glance repaid her. Not once had the piano been opened since Edna's illness began.

That night, as the mother took Elizabeth in her arms for a long-omitted rock-a-by, the little one reached up and stroked her cheek.

"Did 'ou fordive Dod, mudder?" she asked.

"Yes, darling," drawing the cuddling form closer.

"'Lidabeth so glad, mudder," the child said, sleepily.—Helen A. Hawley in Zion's Herald.

UNEDUCATED YOUNG PREACHERS.

Dr. J. L. Cunninggim, Director of the Correspondence School at Nashville, with a view to obtaining information as to the early educational advantages of the 1155 young preachers in our Church, addressed a letter of inquiry to each one. By young preachers is meant those who are pursuing the Conference Course of Study. He received 992 replies. Presuming that those who answered fairly represent the whole number, he says:

"The facts are these: Sixteen report no educational advantages whatever, 206 as having had only a common school education, 412 as having attended some form of preparatory school, 81 as having had as much as one year at college, 66 two years at college, 45 three years at college, and 166 as being college graduates. In theological training 42 have had only one year, 20 have had two years, and 33 as much as three years. According to these facts, only about 36 per cent of the young preachers pursuing the Conference Course have had any college education whatever, and less than 17 per cent are college graduates; 9 1-2 per cent have received some special training in theology, and less than 3 1-2 per cent are graduates. In this day of widespread enlightenment these facts give the Church no cause for self-gratulation."

Looked at from the standpoint of the educator, whether literary or theological, the figures given by Dr. Cunninggim are discouraging. Judged by the number of preachers our colleges and universities are giving the Church, they are doing a poor business. But their efficiency is not to be determined by the number of preachers they educate. They give to the world thousands of other men well fitted for fields of usefulness. Nor are we to judge the efficiency of our preachers by the amount of education they obtain at college. Other things being equal, the better education a preacher has, the better is he prepared to study and expound the Scriptures. But the "other things" are not always found in the highly educated preacher. Hence education alone cannot be relied on as evidence of efficiency.

There are many highly educated men who amount to but little in practical life—they are wholly inefficient, principally because they are destitute of common sense. More than once have we seen preachers who had nothing to recommend them except a technical education. A philosopher of this order, standing high in literary circles, quietly sitting in his study, was suddenly called out by the alarm of fire. Leisurely walking into the yard he looked up at the blazing shingles near the chimney and quietly said: "I do not understand the philosophy of that." That was too much for his practical wife, and she replied, "Philosophy! You get a bucket of water and help put that fire out." How many educated men are talking, Sunday after Sunday, about the philosophy of religion, the conclusions of science, and other non-essential things, while many of their brethren not so learned, are crying danger to a lost world, and snatching sinners as brands from the burning.

Not every learned preacher has the good sense to leave his technical knowledge in the study and give his congregation the pure Word of God. One of the finest scholars in our Church, is a man beyond middle life, and up to date in the learning of the schools. He reads philosophy, studies criticism, masters the sciences—uses all these as helps in his work as a preacher, and when he goes into the pulpit he recognizes his responsibility to God and preaches the gospel. In his hands it is a power—all because he is a man of wisdom as well as of great learning.

But while we appreciate our preachers who are wise enough to put their education to good use, holding on to "the form of sound words," we would not depreciate the sixty-four per cent of the rank and file of our coming men who never had the advantage of college training. The only thing we regret in this matter, save the fact that they are no better prepared for their work, is that Dr. Cunninggim, while trying to find out their early educational advantages, did not at the same time determine their efficiency as soul savers. We dare say the showing would not only comfort these uneducated men, but justify the action of the churches that authorized and sent them out to preach.

We would not justify any man in denying himself the benefits of a liberal education, if it is made possible—though some men ruin themselves by getting too much learning, at the same time we venture to say that any young man of consecration and ambition, starting out without a college diploma need not despair. One who masters the four-years' course of study has a good foundation on which to build. If in connection with this he pursues a literary course—and keeps up his studies after the course is finished, he will in a few years be a scholar. A diploma is desirable, but it is not essential. Many men to-day have diplomas, but nothing else. They are not infallible evidences of smartness or integrity. This idea was suddenly thrust into our head when a boy. Reading one day that an Episcopal Bishop was a graduate of one of our Methodist colleges, we thought it wonderful, and straightway informed an old preacher who was acquainted with the Bishop. His reply was "that does not make him smart." From that day to this, we have looked for something else than a man's diploma to determine his general qualifications.

We point with great satisfaction to the thousands of Methodist preachers of past generations. Not because as a class they were not college-trained, but because, in spite of the lack of such training they triumphed over their difficulties and made many of them, fine scholars, and hundreds of them great preachers. What they did then, men, like handicapped, can do to-day. True, times are more exacting and work will be harder. And the unlettered man will be discriminated against: but by patience and perseverance, and a high aim, he will overcome at last. Let every young man therefore, no matter how uneven the start he may have made, take heart and hope. There is always room at the top, and always room for one more.

THE CHURCH AND THE BIBLE.

It is a fad among certain thoughtful men to say that the Bible proceeded from the Church and not the Church from the Bible. The ground for this statement is very evident: the Church had a tangible existence at least from the day of Pentecost, while the earliest writings of the New Testament were not made until at least fifteen years later. It was sixty years after Pentecost before the writing of the last book of the New Testament. The Church had a wonderful history before the sacred books were all written. It was not until long after, that the whole Church agreed on the present books of the Canon. At first it seems like a plausible and justifiable thing to say then that the Bible proceeded from the Church, and not the Church from the Bible.

Perhaps in the strictest sense, neither one is true. When the Master was among men, he gave the best energies of his ministry to training twelve men, one of whom fell by the way. Many of his miracles and parables gain a larger significance when they are studied in the light of their effect upon the lives of these men, who were to carry on the work when the Christ was gone. Before he left them, he promised that the Holy Ghost should bring all things to their remembrance. Moreover, he said there were many things which they were not yet able to bear, but that the Holy Spirit should take of the things of Christ, and show unto them. He was to guide into all truth. It was under the direct teaching of these men, and the one added to their number, Paul, the Apostle, that the foundations for the Christian Church were laid upon the chief corner-stone, Christ Jesus. Paul again and again claimed to be inspired in his messages, and that he received the gospel by revelation, and not by the hands of men. In the light of these facts, would it not be better to say that the Church was founded upon certain great truths and facts, that were committed to faithful men: that the truth was incarnate in these men before it began its larger life in the Church?

But the Church, as an organization, certainly did not write the New Testament. They held no conventions for that purpose and appointed no committees. The same inspired men who laid the foundations put into writings the sacred messages committed to their care. By their own hands, or by companions under their immediate oversight, every one of the books of the New Testament were written. These men claimed to have a message from God, and spoke it to those within their reach, and wrote it for the rest of the Church, and those who should come after. As this message was written by independent witnesses, and to different churches, at first no Church had but its own writings. As the years passed, these books were interchanged, and gradually collected into the one book. The part which the Church did play in the creation of the New Testament was to recognize the books which contained the fundamental truths upon which the Church had been built, and which had passed from person to person, and been confirmed in their hearts by the witness of the Holy Spirit. Gradually the Church recognized more and more clearly all the books which contained the Canon or rule by which the Church was to try the truth which it professed to have.

Would it not be better to say that the Church and the Bible are correllate forces in the kingdom of God? The visible Church of Christ is a company of faithful people in which the pure word of God is preached, and the sacraments duly ministered according to Christ's ordinance, and in which the Holy Ghost dwells. The Bible is the inspired message of God to men, delivered through holy men of old, by which the Church is to try the Spirit which dwells within it, and determine whether its message be of God or not. The Church has recognized and stamped its approval upon the sacred Canon, but the Bible did not proceed out of the Church as an organization, nor did the Church proceed out of the Bible as a completed and written book.

At some later day we will have more to say on this subject in regard to the Old Testament.

THE UNPLEASANTNESS AT BILOXI.

Recently, Rev. W. A. Roper, pastor of the Baptist Church at Biloxi, Miss., published some statements derogatory to the Roman Catholic Church in general, and especially to the Roman Catholics of that community. The statements were bitterly resented, and were publicly retracted by Rev. Mr. Roper, we understand, under duress. A man who goes into print should study carefully the wisdom, the truth and the language of his statements. He should also determine whether he is willing to meet the possible consequences of his words. The only reason that the ADVOCATE refers to this matter is that it has been published to the world that Rev. W. A. Roper is the pastor of the First Methodist Church in Biloxi. Our people have had nothing to do with the controversy and, so far as we can learn, there is a very kindly feeling between the Methodists and Catholics in that city. Brothers Harbin and Guice have just closed a very successful meeting there, in which there seemed to be the bese of feeling between all the denominations.

PERSONALS.

Rev. John H. Rodgers writes that he is delighted with his new charge, Ardmore, Okla.

Dr. S. A. Steel was granted a location at his own request by the late session of the Northwest Texas Conference.

Bro. Curtis, of Coldwater, Miss., reported everything in full a month ago. He has an excess on all claims.

Rev. H. J. Maddox, of Waynesboro, has been in twelve meetings and had something like one hundred conversions and sanctifications.

The young and popular pastor of Olive Branch, Miss., Rev. K. P. Foust, has "rounded out" well. He carries good reports to Conference.

Rev. C. P. Moss reported everything in full from Batesville sometime ago. He has a small, but heroic membership that rally to his support.

Brother R. M. Evans is indeed a busy pastor. In many respects he has had the best year of his ministry. He expects to pay everything in full.

Rev. W. R. Williams is in sight on the "homestretch." The people of Coehrum Circuit appreciate his strength as a preacher and are not slow in expressing it.

Rev. S. A. Brown, of Byhalia, Miss., has had a most prosperous year. His finances are in full and his people are anxious for him to be returned for the fourth year.

Rev. N. G. Augustus has been at Como but one year, but he has long since convinced his people that he is the peer of any preacher in the Conference. His finances are in full.

We have a note from Rev. J. A. Bowen stating that he has been returned to the Holmes Street Church, in Huntsville, Ala., and that he is highly pleased with his return.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, Hernando, Miss has paid all claims in full and his people are clamorous for his return. Their wishes have been expressed in a large petition signed by all denominations.

Rev. E. E. Langford is said to have everything in full for Conference. We are told the people of Tyro Circuit are not satisfied with his work and want him to try it over another year.

Rev. C. McDonald contemplates asking for the superannuate relation this fall. May his days on the "Honor Roll" of the Church be full of sunshine for himself and be a benediction to the Church.

We continue to receive letters lamenting the loss of "Gilderoy." The last one comes from Rev. Conrad Knudsen, of Hyampon, Cal., grieving that one of our most interesting writers has passed away.

We have been informed that Rev. L. B. Hankins, of Eureka, Miss., is now in a hospital, in Memphis, Tenn. We pray for his speedy recovery and that he soon may be able to take his place in the ranks.

Rev. W. V. Shearer, pastor-evangelist of the Sardis District, leads in number of accessions. The spiritual condition of the Charge is shown by their interest in the benevolences. He will bring up full reports.

Senatobia, Miss., makes the best report that it has ever made, but the people are in a sad state of mind. This is Brother Murrah's fourth year and they entertain doubts as to their getting another that will fill his place.

A preacher up in Mississippi tells us that "many ladies speak good words about the ADVOCATE," and compliment the editor by saying that "Uncle Johnnie is at least handsomer than Dr. Black." That is hard on Dr. Black.

We had the pleasure last week of meeting in our office Rev. J. P. Haney and Brother W. T. Holland, both of Greensburg, La. We greatly enjoyed their company and hope they will come again. They will always find a welcome.

This is the third and best year for Brother J. M. Huggins on the Wall Hill Circuit. His reports are said to be the best made from that charge in many years, notwithstanding his heavy loss in membership by the people moving to town.

We learn from the Western Methodist that Rev. J. P. McDonald has transferred from the Louisiana Conference to the Arkansas Conference, and that Rev. W. H. Ledbetter and Rev. Elton Wilson have been transferred to the Louisiana Conference.

The new Church at Sardis is going right up. Dr. H. T. Gaines had a busy year, but has succeeded at last in having the new Church enterprise that has been in mind for several years materialize. He has had a good revival and a number of accessions to the Church.

Rev. R. S. Walton, who for four months past supplied the church at Hammond, is closing the year in great favor with the people. He is a good preacher, looks carefully and faithfully after all the Church's interests, and the people greatly desire to retain him as their pastor.

We learn that the health of Rev. W. M. Ihisen has shown considerable improvement. In sixteen months he has failed to meet only one appointment. He has one of the most delightful charges in the Denver Conference, Aztec, New Mexico.

Rev. H. H. Griffin writes: "I have been taken from Atkins and placed in charge of Altus-Denning, Arkansas Confereuce. I have a great work. Please remember me to my brethren in the Mississippi Conference. We had a good year at Atkins Station (Arkansas Conference): 91 received into the Church; all collections overpaid. I go now to a larger field. Pray for me.

The Lafayette Advertiser states that Rev. C. C. Miller has completed a good year's work at Lafayette, La., and that there is a very general desire for his return. There has been added thirty to the membership of the Church, and the Sunday School has grown correspondingly. The church has raised nine hundred dollars for the support of the pastor, and eight hundred dollars for benevolent purposes.

The Carrollton Avenue Auxiliary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is observing the Week of Prayer this week. The services are held each evening at 7:30 o'clock in Carrollton Methodist Church, this city. On Thursday evening Dr. J. E. Wray will address the meeting. As Dr. Wray will be transferred from this city next week, this occasion offers an excellent opportunity to hear him. All interested in the work of the Society are invited to attend these meetings.

Rev. C. N. Guice made a pleasant call at this office. He reported a good meeting at Biloxi, Miss. He brought with him another addition to the club of subscribers which has been growing so rapidly. This makes the club received from Brothers Harbin and Guice the largest which we have received this year. We appreciate their good work for the paper, as well as that of many other friends who have not secured quite so many subscriptions.

J. R. Goodan, of Mexico City, Mexico, writes that the bill entitled the Anti-Foreign mining law will have no further consideration, as the Minister Fomento, the member who had charge of and advocated the passage of the law, has resigned from the Cabinet on account of the pronounced opposition expressed by President Diaz against the measure. The policy of the Mexican government is to encourage the investment of foreign capital and to welcome the people of other countries to Mexican soil, Americans being particularly desired.

On last Thursday Rev. J. E. Wray, D. D., preached the Union Thanksgiving sermon at Rayne Memorial Church for the Methodists of New Orleans. At the same hour the Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists of that part of the city known as Carrollton joined in a Thanksgiving service, the sermon being preached by Rev. Mr. Brengle, of the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church. In adition to the Union services, many of the Methodist Churches held special services of their own at night. Among these were Carrollton Avenue, Second Church, McDonoghville and Algiers.

Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, of Mayersville, Miss., has been laid up with a sprained foot. He has had fine revivals, and will report full collections.

Our dear friend and brother, Rev. J. T. Murrah, of Senatobia, Miss., a member of the ADVOCATE Publishing Committee, will have the prayers and sympathy of a multitude of friends on account of the great sorrow that has come to his home. His son, Wadsworth, was accidentally killed by the discharge of a shotgun in the hands of his most intimate friend, Hubert Taylor, on Nov. 27. May the good God comfort the hearts of the stricken parents, who are almost prostrated by this sudden blow.

Mrs. WILLIE E. HILTON, daughter of F. A. and J. L. Christian, was born April 21, [illegible]; was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of eleven years under the preaching of Rev. J. B. Williams, and lived a consistent member until death. She was married to Brother Whitman Hilton, who also is a member of the M. E. Church, South, Dec. 25, 1905. To this happy union was born one son, little Leon, the first infant we ever baptized. Departed this life Nov. 12, 1908, after five weeks of patient suffering with typhoid fever. She leaves a husband, father, mother, and brothers and sisters and friends to mourn their loss. Despite the zealous and faithful effort of her medical attendant and loving care of her husband and friends, who were ready with willing hands to attend to her every want, she passed away. A good woman is gone; there is a darkened home; a vacant chair. We mourn, but not as those who have no hope, for we will meet again. May God abundantly bless the bereaved husband and loved ones in their lonely hours, is the prayer of their true friend and pastor,

R. H. BAMBURG.

Mrs. MARY ANN GRANBERRY (nee Warner) was born May 24, 1829, and died Sept. 28, 1908. She was married to Geo. R. Granberry Oct. 7, 1847. To them were born six children, two of whom are dead. During Brother Granberry's life they lived twenty miles west of Wesson, in Copiah County, Miss., near Pleasant Valley Church, in which they held their membership and worshiped. After her husband's death, which occured eleven years ago, Sister Granberry continued to live at the old homestead with her youngest son, J. B. Granberry, until his death, six years ago. Since then she has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. J. P. Rembert, in Wesson, Miss. During her last months she was very feeble, caused by old age, but was always cheerful and bright. She was a very patient, gentle, sweet-spirited Christian. She always had a kind word for everyone and was never heard to speak uncharitably. Her pleasant face, gentle smile and kind words were a benediction to all who were associated with her. Her funeral was conducted by the writer and her body laid to rest by the side of her husband's in the Wesson Cemetery. A good woman has gone to her reward.

ROSA MOORE, daughter of John and Henrietta Moore, was born in Scott County, Miss., June 24, 1870. She was reared in Morton and was married there to Mr. W. P. Moore Nov. [illegible], 1895, and died at Lula, Miss., Nov. [illegible], 1908. Her husband was the railroad depot agent at Lula for many years. The remains were brought back to Morton, the old home where her mother and sister live, for burial. The funeral services were at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. G. J. Taylor, by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the pastor, and the writer. A large number of kindred and friends were present. The burial was just thirteen years from the day she stood as a beautiful bride at the hymenial altar. She spent three years at the I. I. and C. at Columbus, Miss., and then two years at East Mississippi Female College, graduating there during the presidency of Prof. Saunders. She taught music for some time at Montrose and other places. She joined the Methodist Church at Morton when quite a small girl and was always consistent and a good worker in the Church. The last illness was short, but she was ready at the Master's summons to change worlds. We thank God for her beautiful Christian life and for the happiness she contributed to her affectionate husband, mother, sister, and to so many friends. Her spirit was bright and cheerful here and will be far more so in the better world.

Mrs. MARY MOORE was born in the year 1839 in Amite County, Miss., and died in Port Gibson, Miss., Nov. 16, 1908. Leadford Garner and Minerva Quin were her father and mother, by whom she had one brother and one sister who died young. Her father died, and her mother was married to General W. F. Cain. They moved from the farm to Liberty, Miss., where they resided for some time and Mary was educated in the school there. They removed from Liberty to a large farm in Tangipahoa, about five miles west of Magnolia in Pike County. By the second marriage of her mother Mary had one sister and one brother, Annie and Isaiah Cain, who are living near Opelousas, La. She was married in Calhoun County in 1861 to Mr. T. G. Moore and one child was born to them, Mrs. Carrie Jeffers. Her husband removed from the old farm to Magnolia with his family where he died in May, 1898. They were all members of the Methodist Church in Magnolia and greatly beloved by many of the people. Sister Mary was specially dear to the writer as a Christian neighbor and friend, and I sincere-

Best of all he was a model Christian. REVIVAL AT PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I rejoice to report that our Church at Purvis has recently been blessed with a gracious, soul-cheering revival. A class of fifteen was received into the Church last Sunday, Nov. 15, fourteen on profession and one by restoration, all but one being children and young people. I have never known a more beautiful or more inspiring occasion than the hour when these young converts assumed the vows of the Church. There were many conversions and reclamations and in this meeting the membership of the Church received a great spiritual uplift. A number of persons testified, and several prayed in public for the first time.

Several weeks ago a Young Men's Prayer Meeting was organized, which gives promise of much good.

Brother E. W. Lipscomb, of Hattiesburg, was with us the first two days, his preaching being greatly enjoyed by all.

Brother H. M. Ellis, our splendidly equipped and zealous Conference Missionary Evangelist, was with us for eight days, and rendered most efficient service, his sermons being deeply impressive, heart-searching and persuasive.

The work done was of such a solid character that we have no fears as to whether the results will abide. The Lord was with us in great power, and to him we render heart-felt thanks.

Yours fraternally,

M. M. BLACK.

La Gripppe

Is a nerve-wrecking disease. It affects the whole nervous system. When the heart, lungs or stomach is weak it is sure to leave it in a bad condition. These after-effects are really more serious that the disease. Dr. Miles' Nervine should always be taken to strengthen and build up the nervous system.

"I had a long spell of the grip which weakened my stomach and brought on extreme nervousness. I was miserable for months. I bought a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine and a box of the Nerve and Liver Pills and I hadn't taken one bottle before I began to feel better. My stomach grew stronger and my bowels finally got back to their normal condition." MRS. G. O. THORNBERG, North Baltimore, Ohio.

LESSON FOR DEC. 6, 1908.

Subject: "Solomon Chooses Wisdom." I Kings iii, 4-15.

Golden Text: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Proverbs ix, 10.

At the beginning of Solomon's reign there are two instances highly worthy of mention, as their influence on the mind of the student is [illegible] sires that were necessary in [illegible] a reform. David, the prophet, the priest and king, had been called from earth to take his place among the kings and priests of God.

Solomon inherited the kingdom, the throne and scepter were precious in the sight of God, for were not the subjects his own, his very own chosen ones of the world? Was there not to come out of this people a light to lighten the gentiles and the glory of his people? Yet there was a more glorious legacy personally beneficial to Solomon, and that was the blessing bequeathed by King David, viz., the promise of God, "I will be his father and he shall be my son."

Never did king begin his rule with fairer promise. Solomon remembered his Creator in the days of his youth. His obedience to and reverence for his father was sublime. His love for his mother called forth a gallantry that has never been surpassed, not even "when knighthood was in flower." It is pleasant to recall this same sweet attention to the mother as we have seen it among the youth of our own fair Southland. The prettiest picture in the whole life of Solomon was the scene when his mother came into his presence as he sat on his throne; the young king arose to meet her, bowing himself before her; then, giving her a seat at his right hand. It is not strange that so many beautiful precepts were written by one who so highly respected his mother. No man can be entirely bad that never neglects her that gave him birth.

The darkest part in David's dying charge to his son and heir was the reference to the punishment of three men, Adonijah, Joab and Shimei. The presence and unrestrained actions of these men had been a menace to the peace of David's reign, and it is wonderful to note that David well knew this, and yet never spoke of it. God allows wicked men to fill up their cup before they are called to judgment; yet the door of mercy is always open to the most depraved. It was not long before Joab was sent into eternity to again face Abner, Absalom and Amasa, whom he most cruelly put to death. Soon Adonijah was before the bar of God to answer for rebellion against the Lord's anointed. Then Shimei, who cursed and threw stones at his king, had to learn for himself that which David knew: "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." These trouble-makers removed, Solomon could begin the actual establishment of his kingdom.

Looking out on the great task before him, the duty of proving himself the acceptable ruler of so great a people, the young king felt his helplessness, his need of strength and support. So his thoughts turned to the God of Israel, and he determined to draw very close to him who had promised to be to him a father. He went to Gibeon to sacrifice there, not in Jerusalem, the scene of recent strife and [illegible], but in Gibeon, where all around him would speak to his longing soul of Moses, the servant of God, and the wonderful way in which Jehovah had led his people and judged them. [illegible] it was a time of [illegible] the king, filled with intense desire, must have [illegible] a holy visionary stage, for it was in a dream that God came to his earthly child to answer the longing of his soul: "Ask what I shall give thee," said the kind Heavenly Father. The God was there just beside his pleading son. Yes, and he is just by our side when we come into our sacred seasons of prayer and ask him for blessings to be in accord with his will.

Solomon talked with God as he would have talked with his own father David. Blessed be the truth we have learned from having had a loving earthly father, which is meant to show us how much we are loved by the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ and our Heavenly Father. Solomon asked for what he thought was a great big blessing, and it was: "An understanding heart," a fitness for the duty that lay before him. God was pleased with the young king's prayer, and the answer was exceeding abundantly above all that was asked or even thought of. Solomon's prayer was a model one—a prayer of entire setting aside of self. His intense desire was that he should be fitted for service. No selfish prayer is ever heard. It is possible to be entirely selfish in prayer. Do you not remember the times you have stopped your petitions, and asked God to forgive you for not praying for others first?

God was pleased that the suppliant had not asked for many things that others would have requested under the same conditions. It is well to pray for only those blessings which, in the using, we can ask God's direction. Do we desire a description of God's answer to Solomon's prayer? We have only to open the book of Proverbs and read of a wisdom that has never been equaled. So filled with this great gift was the writer that no flower of speech or flow of thought was sublime enough to convey its real significance. "Say to wisdom, Thou art my sister." "He that getteth wisdom loveth his own soul."

There is another wisdom, yet not another, but a wisdom that makes us wise unto salvation—a wisdom that is from above, first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." (James iii, 17.) All this wisdom, all wisdom has a beginning: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," and if we seek him, and have a perfect love to cast out all the fear, save the fear of displeasing—that will mark the time of the beginning of wisdom. It is ours for the asking: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." (James i, 5.)

To the practical enquirer, the Word of God is an open book, appearing the same to-day as a thousand years ago: teaching the same wisdom that never changes in its meaning; showing how the earnest searcher after the truth will be given a wisdom, not only in spiritual things but in the affairs of everyday life; leaving every day a little more of what it was that Jesus meant when he said: "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear."

TERRIBLE CRAMPS

"My wife," writes Joe Moorhead, of Archibald, Okla., "had been troubled with cramps, every month, from the time she first came to womanhood. She would be in bed from four to seven days at a time.

"She tried doctor's remedies, but they did her no good, so, after many years of suffering, I gave her CARDUI, as you directed. After she had taken one bottle, she was not bothered any more with cramps, and now she has a fine boy baby.

"We recommend Cardui to all women who suffer from female troubles."

Cardui, as you know, is a popular medicine with women. It is popular because it has been found to relieve their pains, bring roses to pale cheeks, strength to weak bodies and nerves.

Its specific action is on the cause of most female ills, and thus, it is a medicine especially for women, with a record of over 50 years of success, in the treatment of troubles peculiar to women.

Try Cardui.

Do You Hear Well?

The Stolz Electrophone—A New, Scientific and Practical Invention for Those Who Are Deaf or Partially Deaf—May Now be Tested in Your Own Home.

Deaf or partially deaf people may now make a month's trial of the Stolz Electrophone at home. This is unusually important news for the deaf, for by this plan the final selection of the one completely satisfactory hearing aid is made easy and inexpensive for everyone.

This new invention (U. S. Patent No. 763,575) renders unnecessary such clumsy, unsightly and frequently harmful devices as trumpets, horns, tubes, ear drums, fans, etc. It is a tiny electric telephone that fits on the ear, and which, the instant it is applied, magnifies the sound waves in such manner as to cause an astonishing increase in the clearness of all sounds. It overcomes the buzzing and roaring ear noises, and also so constantly and electrically exercises the vital parts of the ear that, usually, the natural, unaided hearing itself is gradually restored.

TOPIC FOR DEC. 6, 1908.

THE LIFE OF ASSURANCE.

(Rom. viii. 14-17, 38, 39; Eph. i. 13, 14.)

We are plainly taught that eternity is dependent upon the issues of this life. The destiny of two souls may vary as far apart as heaven and hell. The soul may make an everlasting shipwreck, or it may safely reach the harbor where no storms shall ever come. Your life may wander away from God, ever seeing less and less of his his goodness and glory, or it may come to dwell in the very presence of the Most High. The choice that determines the final result is made here. You obtain acceptance with God in this life, if at all. Then the all important question is, What is your present relation to God, and what is your future to be?

2. The Bible tends to produce doubt and fear in its first reading.

The fearful denunciations of sin in the Bible tend to produce fear in every heart. The more carefully a man studies the life of the Christ, and the pattern he set for us, the more will he feel the utter inadequacy of his own life. Sin will be manifest, and the wages of sin is death. God is of too pure eyes to look upon sin. Those of you who have cried out in fear under the conviction of the Holy Spirit, know what the consciousness of sin means.

3. There can he no great lives nor effective service in bondage to such a fear.

Some one has wisely said that you cannot develop a great life in an atmosphere of fear. Storms and frost will not develop a high order of plant life unless there he also sunshine. A discouraged man does but little, and if the future holds nothing but fears and darkness, there will be no incentive to earnest effort. When men hope, they strive. The world is full of the shipwrecks of discouraged men and women who have stopped trying because there seemed to he no hope. If the religious life was one of uncertainty, the more intensely religious a man hecame the greater would he his fears. This is admirahle illustrated in the earlier years of the ministry of John Wesley. He was terribly in earnest, but his life was not effective in reaching the lives of others until that day when "his heart was strangely warmed." From that time on men fell before his ministry as they fall before the fire of musketry, and great numbers were won to God, and world-wide movements were set on foot.

4. The life of assurance is the privilege of every one.

The Father, who calls us to repentance and trust in Christ, has also sent his Spirit to hear witness with our hearts that we are the children of God. We have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, hut we have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father Mark you, the Greek word transferred here, has the tender, familiar feeling in it that our home word of "papa." It was the word that the children of the household used to the father. Into your heart may come the definite consciousness that you are a child of God, and that for Christ's sake, your sins have been forgiven. The assurance of which we speak is not some well defined experience that may he identified by fixed lines. It is rather the touch of the personal Christ through the medium of the Holy Spirit upon the personality of an individual soul. You meet no two persons in exactly the same way, there are no two lives that exactly conform. To childhood's hours and to years of old age; to the man, cultured in all the refinements of the highest civilization, and to men of simple life in the wilds of barbarism, there has come a consciousness in the soul of sins forgiven, and peace with God. Henceforth the life has gone on growing in strength, and taking on the image of the Master. You know whom you have believed.

5. The life of assurance is the life of power.

When, in your heart there dwells this assurance, you have heart and courage to undertake all things for the King; the work is his, and it is his to command. If he causes you to suffer for a season, it is all right, for you have treasure with your Lord, and you know that when the task is done there is rest with him. You are willing to toil where you see no definite result, because you are certain he will not use his servant in vain, and that after a time, in his own way, he will bring to pass the purposes of his kingdom. There is so much of joy in your own heart that you want others to have the same joy, and men about you discern the light of Christ in you, and desire the same light. The spirit brings to your heart an earnest, or first fruits of your inheritance, and the abiding home becomes more of a reality as the days pass. To an uncertain abode, you invite men with hesitation, but to the home you are certain of, you urge men with confidence, and they accept your invitation as real.

White Slave Trade

By EDWIN W. SIMS, U. S. District Attorney in Chicago. An account of the White Slave traffic of to-day by the official who has already obtained the conviction of many hundreds of the miserable creatures engaged in this "business," and who, Mr. Sims says, "having reduced the art of ruining young girls to a national and international system." Every woman and girl in America will be benefited by reading this article by the great federal attorney who is doing such a good work to rid our land of a Traffic which would, by contrast, make the Congo slave traders of the old days appear like Samaritans."

Why Girls Go Astray

This is the subject of a second article in one of the free issues of the WOMAN'S WORLD, by the Honorable Edwin W. Sims, written as was the first "White Slave Article," strictly from the viewpoint of the lawyer, who finds himself called upon, as an officer of the law, to deal with this delicate and difficult subject.

By JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON, Author of "A Little Brother to the Rich," the greatest book sensation of the year. Mr. Patterson is an insider, and this article is a startling exposure of the follies and sins of the fashionable rich. Mr. Patterson says that we have in this country among these rich society people a practical Court; that society women relegate all functions of usefulness, except one—the bearing of children—and they are not inclined to discharge this function as they ought.

The Sins of Society

"The Christian Science Faith," by Mrs. Clara Louise Burnham, author of "Jewel," "Jewel Story Book," "The Open Shutters," etc.

"The Most Interesting Thing in the World" by George Ade, George Barr McCutcheon, Forrest Crissey and William Hodge.

"Love Making in Foreign Lands," by Frank L. Pixley, author of King Dodo," "The Burgomaster," "Prince of Pilsen," etc.

"The Old Homes and the New," by Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, former Vice-President of the United States.

"The Sins of His Fathers," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, author of "A Little Traitor to the South," "Richard, The Brazen," etc.—a powerful story dealing with "The Sins of the Fathers visited unto the third and fourth generations.

"My Beauty and Health Secrets," by Miss Bella Carson, first prize winner in the Chicago Tribune's $10,000.00 Beauty Contest; also in World Contest. Miss Carson tells the secret of how she has the appearance of a girl of sixteen, whereas she is thirty.

"The Arkansas Traveler Stories," by Opie Read; author and originator of "The Arkansas Traveler."

"The Journal of Julie," the confidential and personal experience of a young country girl winning her way in a great city.

"The Wild Rose Letters," being the heart secrets between Elaine, Countess of Wycherly, and Rose Mary of Strawberry Point (Ia.). Its sentiment is as sweet and delicious as wild honey.

WM. H. LEE, Supt.

Chicago Tribune Says Editorially.

The revelations made by U. S. District Attorney Sims in the WOMAN'S WORLD should be given as wide a currency as possible.

As Mr. Sims says, thousands of girls from the country are entrapped each year, and he points out the pitiful fact that the parents of a great majority of these unfortunates are unaware of their fate.

What is greatly needed as a supplement to vigorous prosecution of offenders is a campaign of education. Clergymen should take up this evil and instruct parents in their congregations as to the reality and extent of the danger. In small towns there is virtually no knowledge of this evil and how it manifests itself, and there is far too little even in cities.

The problem is enormous, but it can be solved largely by educational means. The responsibility for a broad and systematic campaign of enlightenment rests with the religious and social agencies now existent in every community—the churches, the women's clubs, the civic leagues, and associations. The press also should give a reputable publicity and exert its influence directly and in educational lines to the end that the public may know the gravity of the evil and its conditions.

Louisiana Preachers: We call your attention to the Conference resolution requiring you to make out your reports and file with the Auditing Board before the opening session of the Conference. Brother Mayo has notified you that some member of the Board would be present to receive these reports. It is important that you comply with this request. If you cannot reach the seat of Conference before the first day, you can easily mail your reports, so that they will be on hand.

All figures must be made in even dollars, as we have no room to run the column for cents in the Minutes, and if you fail to make the report in even dollars it places the Statistical Secretary, or Editor of the Minutes, under the necessity of changing your figures, and the footings may not tally. We remind you again to MAKE ALL FIGURES IN EVEN DOLLARS.

In making out your report on Church Membership, let the column for "Members reported last year" correspond with the figures in the last issue of the Minutes for "Present total membership," unless your stub-report shows the Minutes to be in error.

Bring a copy of the Minutes to Conference with you, as I will have but very few extra copies with me. My supply is almost exhausted. Sincerely, ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Editor of the Minutes.

NO RELIEF.

I am not too old yet to see to read the Advocate, and as long as I can I want to take it. I think your editorials are fine, and when it comes I look at the Glances at the World first. Some of the Brethren have given the holiness people some rough talk; but I cannot give it up, now I have only a little while longer to stay here. The dear old Bible is too strong on the holiness doctrine, so I cannot give it up. You please me in the way you shoot it into the liquor crowd. God bless you; go it! I pray God to spare you a long time to fight his battles.

Conference is near at hand, and I do hope they won't send us a tobacco-chewing and smoking preacher. The good sisters are so disgusted, they say it will not do any good to petition the Conference; that somebody has to buy tobacco for them to chew and smoke, so they can spit on their walls and andirons, and ruin our sills and doorsteps. Nasty, filthy human beings—God convict them of their sin. May God bless Brother P. O. Lowrey for his article on "Tobacco and the Church." If I was a tobacco-using preacher, I would be ashamed of my filthy mouth.

God bless the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

TISHOMINGO, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: As this finds the Conference year drawing to a close, I will send in a brief report of our work. This finishes the second and last year on this charge, as I expect to enter school after Conference. We have had a great year in many respects. We have had some great revivals in the Church, and we have one new preacher from this charge who will come for admission to the North Mississippi Conference this year. We are rounding up everything and we expect to bring a full report to Conference. Our people are a worthy people, especially the young folks. On Saturday before our meeting began at Tishomingo the good people of Salem, and some of Paradise, remembered us with quite a lot of nice things. We have learned to love them dearly and shall continue to pray God's richest blessing on them in the years to come.

FROM BLUE SPRINGS CIRCUIT, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: The Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Blue Springs Circuit was held Nov. 16. This was one of the most pleasant meetings of the kind we have ever attended. Most all of the officials were in their places on time and had good reports to make. There has been a good revival in every church on the charge owing to the efforts of Rev. O. C. Anderson. Brother Jaco, our wise and consecrated presiding elder, is much loved by all. He is certainly bringing things to pass. His motto is: "At it, all at it, always at it." Of course such a man is not tired of his job. Give us presiding elders and pastors of this kind in every charge and we will take the world for Christ in this generation. Much love to you and your readers.

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, the Virginia Annual Conference, at its session in Petersburg, Va., November, 1907, appointed a committee to confer with the Randolph-Macon Trustees, and to request that the Conference be given a voice in the selection of trustees, either by nomination or by direct election, and

Whereas, the said committee has reported that it did confer with the said Board of Trustees, and did present the request of the Virginia Conference to said board at its annual meeting in June, 1908, and that the said Randolph-Macon board made reply to said committee declaring that it had neither the legal nor moral right under the charter to grant the request of the Virginia Conference, and

Whereas the said Board of Trustees, at its session in June, 1908, furthermore declared that Randolph-Macon College was founded through the efforts of Methodist people, and has since the organization been fostered and built up chiefly through the active efforts and contributions of Methodist people; and

Whereas, in the year 1870, a committee of the majority of said Randolph-Macon Board of Trustees made official declaration to the Legislature of Virginia that "the creator of the College was the Virginia Conference," and that "the College is in moral law and justice the property of the Conference;" therefore, be it Resolved:

First—That we hereby express our unqualified agreement with the official declaration of a committee of the majority of the Board of Trustees, made to the Legislature of Virginia in 1870, that "the creator of the College was the Virginia Conference," and that "the College is in moral law and justice the property of the Conference."

Second—That, in view of the said declaration of the said Board of Trustees, that it has neither the legal nor the moral right, under its charter, to comply with the request of the Virginia Conference, made in November, 1907, we hereby respectfully, but earnestly, request the said Board of Trustees to unite with the Virginia Annual Conference, through its Committee, to be hereafter provided for, in an application to the Corporation Commission of the commonwealth of Virginia to amend the charter of Randolph-Macon College in the following particulars: (1.) To amend the charter by the insertion of a trust clause, similar to that which the Discipline of our Church provides for holding other Church property, so that the property held by the Randolph-Macon Board shall be bound to the M. E. Church, South, as closely as the laws of the State of Virginia will permit. (2.) To amend the charter by the insertion of a provision that, before taking the oath of office, all trustees shall be confirmed, nominated or elected directly by the respective Conferences which they may represent on the Board of Trustees, in accordance with such regulations as may be agreed upon by the present Board of Trustees.

Third—That, in the event the joint application of the Board of Trustees and of the Virginia Annual Conference to the Corporation Commission for the aforesaid amendments to the charter shall be denied by the said Corporation Commission, then the said Randolph-Macon Board of Trustees is requested to pass a resolution calling upon each Conference represented in the Board of Trustees, whenever a vacancy shall occur in its representation in said Board, to nominate three persons, from which persons so nominated by the respective Conferences the said Board of Trustees agrees to fill all vacancies that may occur in the membership of said Board.

Fourth—That, in the event the said Randolph-Macon Board of Trustees shall decide that it cannot join with the Conference in an application to the Corporation Commission for the above mentioned changes in the charter, then, and not until then, the Board of Trustees is requested to submit the matter of the rightfulness of these suggested charter amendments to a commission of five persons, said persons to be selected from among the clerical or lay members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, residing without the bounds of the Virginia and Baltimore Conferences, two to be selected by the Board of Trustees and two by the Committee appointed by the Conference, the fifth member of the Commission to be selected by the other four members, chosen as indicated above, it being mutually agreed by the Board of Trustees and by the Conference that the findings of said Commission shall be accepted by both parties.

Fifth—That a committee of seven members, consisting of four preachers and three laymen, none of whom shall be members of the Randolph-Macon Board of Trustees, or connected in any official way with any of the institutions under the care of the Randolph-Macon Board, be selected by the Conference by ballot, and the said committee so selected be and is hereby instructed to communicate promptly with said Randolph-Macon Board of Trustees, and to present to the said Board the above preamble and resolutions, and to take such action as may be necessary to carry into effect the wishes of the Conference, as indicated above; and the said committee is instructed to request the Board of Trustees of Randolph-Macon College to meet in special session at as early a date as possible after Jan. 1, 1909, in order to confer with the committee hereby constituted by the Virginia Annual Conference. In the event that a vacancy shall arise in the committee, the remaining members of the committee are hereby empowered to fill said vacancy.

Sixth—That the above action is taken with a high appreciation of the work which has been done by the Randolph-Macon Board of Trustees, and with no intention of reflecting in any way upon the motives of the said Board; but, in view of all the facts, the Conference is obliged to meet its own responsibility and to safeguard the interests of the Church which have been committed to its care, and this it must do in accordance with its judgment as to what is for the best interest of the educational work of the Church.

FROM FERNWOOD, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Since my last report we have held a fine revival at Fernwood. Rev. D. E. Kelly, of Bogue Chitto, did the preaching which resulted in a large number of accessions and conversions. Some claim that this meeting was better than the meeting last year, and at which time we had more than fifty accessions. This makes Brother Kelly's third revival in the last three years. The new Church was completed in time for the revival. The Church is beautiful and complete, and cost three thousand five hundred dollars.

Our fourth Quarterly Conference was held at Fernwood. Brother Thompson, our presiding elder, was with us and preached two sermons that could be styled as first-class sermons for a Quarterly Conference occasion. From the first visit he has grown on my people and they are all anxious for his return. He seems to think that an important element in being a good elder is to keep his own counsels. If he has given positive assurance to any-one that they would be returned for another year, I do not know it.

G. D. ANDERS.

DR. SAWYER DEDICATES CHURCH.

Dr. Sawyer dedicated the new church at Campti, La., on Sunday last. He reports that Brother Staples will be able to report the missionary collections in full, and for all purposes the church will raise over $3,000 this year. Sister Reveill of Shreveport organized an auxiliary of the Woman's Home Mission Society, and expects shortly to organize a juvenile society for the same church.

Dr. Sawyer, as Conference Missionary Secretary for the Louisiana Conference, has during the year raised in cash and subscriptions a few dollars less than $4000.

LAKE, MISS.

We had a protracted meeting at Lake, Nov. 8 to 13. Evangelists Harbin and Guice were the helpers. It was good from the first to the close. There were fifteen new members received, four by certificate, and three applicants to be yet received. There were probably fifty persons either converted or reclaimed, and we count thirteen family altars erected. These brethren are good help. They work to get sinners saved; to get persons to join the church of their choice; to get people to kneel in prayer; to subscribe for the Advocate, and to honor and stand by their pastor.

It is difficult for me to tell which my people most admired, the earnest preaching of Harbin, or the singing of Guice. His solos are wonderful.

Kindly, C. McDONALD.

FROM TYRO, MISS.

Mr. Editor: The year is closing up well on Tyro Charge. There have been about twenty-five additions to the membership by vows, and quite a number by certificate. The congregations have been large at all the churches throughout the year. All of the Conference assessments were paid in full by Nov. 5, with a slight excess on two of the funds. Nearly $300 has been raised during the year for repairing and furnishing churches and parsonage.

Having got my regular assessments out of the way, I am devoting my efforts for the month of November to raising money for the Orphans' Home, and, so far, the results have been very gratifying.

Congratulating you, and expressing my own gratification on your re-election to the editorship,

Yours fraternally,

E. E. LANGFORD.

Adopted by the Enterprise and Stonewall (Miss.) Charge.

Whereas Brother H. A. Gatlin, having served us as pastor for four years, and the law of the Church forbids his remaining longer, and whereas there exists a strong bond of love in the hearts of the people composing the churches for him, of the churches he has served so well and acceptably; therefore, be it Resolved:

First — That we, the Stewards of the churches composing the Enterprise and Stonewall Charge, at this our Fourth Quarterly Conference, and by this written instrument of resolutions, express our sincere regret that the time has arrived when he will no longer be in our midst, but will shortly be transferred to other fields of labor.

Second — That we lose in Brother Gatlin one of the best, most efficient, and acceptable pastors this Charge has had, as well as one of the best loved. That we recognize in him, as being fully capable of filling acceptably a much better charge than he leaves behind him. That, because of his faithfulness to God and Church, and devotion to duty and his work, to which he has been called, and also because of his intellectuality, which is constantly being re-enforced by long, careful and persistent study, we are convinced of his fitness for a much better work.

Third—That we commend Brother Gatlin to the people wherever he goes as a faithful, fearless and highly efficient man of God; and if it were possible for us to select his next appointment, we would select for him one of Mississippi's pulpits.

Fourth—That a copy of this be spread upon the Minutes, a copy be given to Brother Gatlin and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed by: Wm. M. Estes, Secretary; N. C. Moore, W. G. Oneil, Fred Kamper, T. J. Doris, E. S. Estes, J. W. Zackery, S. O. Moore, M. L. Parks, B. T. Speed.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Quarterly Conference, Pittsboro Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, assembled at Calhoun City, Miss., Nov. 21, 1908:

Whereas Brother J. H. Mitchell is serving his fourth year as presiding elder of this (Aberdeen) District, and under the government of our Church he cannot be returned; and whereas this is the Fourth Quarterly Conference for Pittsboro Circuit; therefore, be it Resolved:

First—It is with deep regret that we have to give him up as our beloved presiding elder.

Second—That we fully realize that it will be difficult for another to give the universal satisfaction and command the love and confidence of all the people to that degree that Brother Mitchell is held.

Third—That we wish to assure him that our prayers and best wishes go with him wherever he may be sent, and that his faithful efforts may be productive of great good to the people among whom he may labor.

Fourth—That we sincerely hope he will be sent to an easier field than ours has been, and that the people who are so fortunate as to receive his untiring efforts for good will stand nobly by him, and that he will be as great a benediction to them as he has been to us.

Fifth—That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Conference, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Many are the uses to which paper is put these days—some of the uses are odd. In some places paper blocks are being made to pave the streets, but the blocks are too costly for general use. In Australia an ingenious engineer constructed a small yacht, 20 feet long, out of sheets of a daily paper. Each plank used required 2,500 leaves. Great pressure was necessary to procure the proper solidity. How the pressure was obtained, the story does not tell. In Greece the wine manufacturers are using paper, instead of wood, to make their barrels. They cost less than wood. But "the oddest use to which paper has been put is that which has resulted in the manufacture in Germany of artificial teeth. These paper teeth are manufactured from the same variety of pulp which enters so largely into the composition of many novelties in the paper line. Paper teeth are said to afford satisfaction, not only retaining their color well, but being less liable to chip than ordinary false teeth." We have been using paper buckets, wash basins and trays and other paper things for a long time. What we will have next we are not prophets enough to say.

Congress convened December 7, and everything is astir in Washington. Exciting matters are under consideration. There is much talk of a "Panama scandal." Somehow it has got abroad that the $40,000,000 paid by our Government to the French for their interest in the Panama Canal did not all go into the hands of Frenchmen, but that Americans got a big "rake-off." An investigation is demanded. Mr. Roosevelt denies the allegations. The President's message was about the longest on record, and he stirred things. He used strong language concerning "Secret Service Men," and his language has been resented. Certain Congressmen are full of wrath and want "an investigation." Mr. Roosevelt will be ready with the "vouchers" when called before a committee. Mr. Foraker has called up the "Brownsville affair," and offered an amendment to his pending bill for the re-instatement of the dismissed negro soldiers who shot up the town two years ago. The President sent a short message to Congress on the subject, and it is to be hoped the matter will be settled. He still insists that the negroes are guilty, but is willing to re-instate such as can prove their innocence. But, as we understand, they must prove that they not only took no part in the shooting, but also knew nothing about the purpose to shoot up the town. There are other big things before Congress that we will speak of later on.

The comic supplement, which has so long disgraced the daily papers, being a poor attempt at wit, and equally poor display of artistic taste, has had its day, and is passing. The Boston Herald, which used it for some time, has discarded it, and says: "We discard it as we would throw aside any mechanism that had reached the end of its usefulness, or any 'feature' that had ceased to fulfill the purpose of attraction. Comic supplements have ceased to be comic. They have become as vulgar in design as they are tawdry in color. There is no longer any semblance of art in them, and if there are any ideals they are low and descending lower. Many protests come from the public against a continuance of the comic supplements. Parents and teachers object to them. Most discerning persons throw them aside without inspection, experience having taught them that there is no hope for improvement in these gaudy sheets. The supplements no longer amuse an intelligent public; they serve mainly to depress persons of taste, and distort such growing taste as may struggle for the light in others. The colored comic supplement is the clown of the newspaper establishment. The Herald believes that a great newspaper no longer needs a clown."

Racetrack gambling seems to be doomed. The gamblers, both in New York and in New Orleans, have been headed off in all directions, save as to the betting between individuals, and that has not excitement enough in it to give life to the sport. In New York, the conclusion is that if racing is kept up it will be by wealthy men, who are able to bear the expenses for the sake of the sport, and not for the money to be made in it. Those who have heretofore followed it for the sake of the money made out of the ignorant and unsuspecting, and those who hoped to be "lucky," find their occupation gone. In New Orleans the winter season opened as usual, but it is reported that on the first day less than five hundred persons attended, and, as policemen were on hand to see that the law was not violated, there was no betting, and but little life. In less than a week the racing was declared off. The chief promoter tries to hold his association together, and his followers, by telling them that the present sentiment against racing is "a fad," and will soon pass away; then the "sport of kings" will be resumed as usual. How little do such men, who breathe only a secular atmosphere, know the convictions of men who occupy a higher plane of life! They seem to be persuaded that other men are altogether such as themselves.

It is currently reported that at least half a dozen Roman Catholic cardinals have sent Mr. Taft dispatches, congratulating him on his election to the Presidency. We do not suppose that half a dozen would cover the number. How many archbishops and other princes of the Church have congratulated Mr. Taft, nobody knows. Alluding to these dispatches, the Detroit News-Tribune is led to say: "Forthwith the conclusion is drawn that the Vatican designs an agitation or intrigue for the restoration of diplomatic relations with the Washington Government. The conclusion is more obvious than probable, for, in spite of the facility with which the average mind reaches it from the sudden outbreak of politeness on the part of their eminences, a slight consideration makes it extremely unlikely. The members of the sacred college and his holiness are pretty fully informed of the temper of the American people on this subject, and must know that any approach toward such a consummation would be the signal for a renewal in the United States of the anti-papal passions which led to the abandonment of the American legation to Rome more than forty years ago. They also know as well as anyone in America how vigorously the Catholic Church has grown in the United States since that time without any regular diplomatic relations between Washington and the Vatican, and they must understand that the restoration of such relations would only result in friction which their absence entirely prevents. Besides, the recent events have shown that when the two governments have any real business to do with each other there is no trouble whatever in finding a way to do it without the employment of permanent legations. If there were ever any sound reasons for abandoning our legation at Rome, when Pius IX was a temporal sovereign over a considerable portion of Italy, those reasons are certainly all the stronger against its re-establishment, now that the temporality is confined to the palace gardens of the Vatican, a space about as big as two wards of the city of Detroit."

The last Legislature of Louisiana enacted a law forbidding the sale of liquor within 300 feet of a church or school. The Attorney-General of the State has been asked for an interpretation of the law, and has given it. His opinion is that the measurement must be in a "straight line," not around a corner. The opinion threw many saloon-keepers in New Orleans into consternation, because their saloons, measured in a straight line, come within the 300-yard limit, and if the attorney's opinion stands, they must move or go out of business. But the City Attorney has come to their relief and told them, in an opinion given to the Mayor, that the measurement must be, not on a straight line, but on the front of the street. Besides, he has given it as his opinion that the law was not intended to disturb saloons already existing, but referred only to those hereafter to be established. Of course, the saloon men will follow the opinion of the City Attorney, rather than the State's Attorney. Naturally, there will be a contest to be settled by the courts. The saloon-keepers of the State, especially of New Orleans, accepted the liquor bill as it passed the Legislature, although it was stringent in its regulations, because they saw it was this or prohibition, and they preferred any measure to prohibition. Now that the law is to go into effect soon, they are kicking against it. We see in the papers some very severe criticisms of the New Orleans liquor men. The press and the pulpit should not be too hard on them. Censure, it seems to us, if it falls anywhere just now, should fall on the City Attorney, who has added to the excitement by expressing, as we understand, in his official capacity, an opinion on a State law directly contrary to the opinion of the State's Attorney. It looks like an attempt to block the way of a State law in the interests of saloons that are in the neighborhood of churches and schools. This is exceedingly unfortunate, and is likely to create considerable litigation. The saloon men will evade the law, if possible.

THE HUMAN CONCEPT OF GOD.

BY REV. S. J. DAVIES.

The loftiest reach of human attainment, in the vast realm of life and being, can only approximate divine perfection. There must ever remain a marked line of division between the human and the divine. The modern idea of a humanistic God is contrary to revelation, contrary to faith, consciousness, and ultimately destructive of true reverence and worship. No matter how perfect a human deity may be, he is still on the same plane of being with all else that is human, and cannot be revered or adored as God.

If humanity does not imply imperfections, and a consequent need of extraneous help to reach a plane of righteousness, then there is no need, on its part, of prayer and means of grace.

Furthermore, this conception of God does away altogether with the idea of Christ's humiliation during the season of his incarnation and shatters to atoms this most tender and beautiful picture of his condescension and love. If he was human before his advent, why was he born of a woman? why did he walk the plane of human life? and why subject to all the dread torture of the garden, the cross and the gloom of death?

The idea of his humanity is to bear the human race up to God, but never to bring God in his essential being down to the level of the human. In this sense must it ever remain that "the glory of the terrestrial is one and the glory of the celestial another."

HOW TO BEGIN THE CONFERENCE YEAR.

Two suggestions claim attention: First, the spirit in which we should begin the work of the Conference year; secondly, the plans and methods we should employ.

The main thing is that first mentioned—the spirit in which we should begin the work of the year. Of course, we all understand that we should begin as we hope to continue this work. It is easier to keep out of a rut than to get out. The plans and the methods will adjust themselves aright where the spirit of the workers is right. This is said on the assumption that the preacher is truly called of God and has special adaptability in his work.

You aspire, my brethren, to the apostolic success which proves that you are in the true apostolic succession. Claim now, at the beginning of this Conference year, the fulfillment of that promise of our Lord: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." The emphasis is on the present tense: "Lo, I am with you alway." Do you realize this Presence with us in this preachers' meeting this morning? If so, the language of each heart will be that of the apostle: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me;" that is, we can do all things that our Lord would have us to do. By the leadings of his providence and of the Holy Spirit, we will know what "all things" mean to each one of us individually. The sense of "power" is felt by the servant of God who feels that touch. To "do all things through Christ" means that in the pulpit you shall have liberty in the delivery of the message of your Lord. It means that spiritual perception which knows and chooses the word in season; the word best adapted to bring the people who hear you to the saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. It means that at all times in your association with one another as preachers, and with all other persons, your religion shall be uppermost. That is to say, you are to act at all times and in all places in the spirit of the apostolic injunction: "Do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." This injunction covers the whole ground.

As to methods, let us remember that we shall have to watch and pray, if we would put our religion first and keep it first. There are many other matters which will claim and absorb a pastor's time, if he is not on his guard. There are so many earthly wants which clamor for recognition; there are so many acquaintances whose tastes and habits tend to give a non-religious tone to ordinary social intercourse, that we need the "wisdom which is from above" to give us social tact as well as pulpit power. Let me suggest in connection with this allusion to pulpit power that pulpit common sense is a good thing to begin with, and to continue during the Conference year. This means, my dear brethren, that it will be well for us not to make our prayers and our sermons too long. This is a mistake frequently made. The remedy for praying too long is earnestness. A man who wants one thing very truly does not ask for everything at once. The remedy for preaching too long is common sense in a glow—and this includes thorough preparation.

Let us seek to "do good as we have opportunity," according to the command of our Lord. We cannot plan for opportunities, except to a limited extent. But every day in the year we can bear in mind that we are laborers in the cause of Christ. Opportunities come to the man who is tuned for them. Men who are alive unto God do not merely recognize opportunities—they make them. Sometimes our well-meant endeavors will be repelled. But we will not lose the promised blessing; our "peace" shall return unto us in all cases where it is rejected by those to whom we would give it in the name of the Lord. And surely, my brethren, it would be better for us to be repelled by the rudeness or stung by the criticisms of unresponsive persons than to suffer the rebukes of our own consciences.

Let us begin the Conference year with a purpose in our hearts to pray more than we have done heretofore. To each one of us, as pastors and teachers, our Lord says: "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." This is the condition of pulpit power, my brethren. Let us have room for prayer in our methods. Let us pray more for one another, and criticise one another less. After you have made one earnest prayer for a brother out of the depths of your heart, you will feel closer to him ever afterwards—and somehow he will get closer to you.

Methodism means systematic work—everything in its proper place, everybody in his proper sphere of service. Methodism recognizes the tremendous power of organized Christianity. But personal communion with God is the one essential condition of all Christianity in earnest. A rule is suggested for your pastoral visiting: Go where your Master would go and go in his spirit. Go first to those who need you most—that is, to the poor, the sick, the sorrowing, and the lost. Going to these with his message on your lips and his love in your hearts, you will meet the pitying Christ, and get his blessing for yourselves, and be made channels of blessing to them.

Let us "not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some" has been. By brotherly counsel, united prayer, and closer fellowship, let us help one another during this Conference year. It will be worth while for us to begin and continue the work of the Conference year by a renewal of our vows, by service which is more abundant, and a fellowship among ourselves more like that which we hope to enjoy where, in the words of our ascended chief pastor and brother, Coke Smith, "the life will be fuller and the light will be clearer." There we will have what the apostle calls "the power of an endless life." Power, power, power! This worn and weakened frame thrills at the word. It will be "sown in weakness," but it will be raised in power—that is, power to start with up yonder, and to increase forever—the "power of an endless life." Glory to God for that word.—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald, in Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

REMINISCENTIAL.

As time moves on the old superannuate, denied a place at the forefront, must be content to fight over alone the conflicts of the past. Those who read the ADVOCATE have learned that my new home postoffice address is Long Beach, Miss.

Again I am within the bounds of the Sea Shore District, Mississippi Conference. Nov. 12, while at the woodpile sawing and splitting stove-wood, Pastor W. T. Griffin surprised me by a personal visit—and message—"Hurry up. Brother Burton wants you to come to his Pass Christian home this day to eat dinner! I will be here at 11 o'clock to carry you in my buggy!" "Why, what is going on there, a meeting?" "No; it is the annual dinner that the presiding elder gives to all the District preachers within easy access to his home." I poked at the woodpile no longer. As I thought of the early days of my itinerancy along the white barren sands of this coast section, when my material resources of supply depended largely upon my skill as a fisherman, I surely would try to be ready to sample that dinner. Brother Griffin, the boy friend of my youthful ministry, and now pastor in charge of wife and I, kept his promise. It was cold enough for me to wear an overcoat outside, but soon thawed on entrance to the house by the warmth and geniality of Hook, Morse, Jones, B. F. Lewis, Neal, Griffin, and the host and hostess, Mr. Burton and wife, gave me a cordial welcome, and I at once fell into a reverie of things past and present when disturbed by tidings that the hour for dinner had come. At table I resumed the revery as I surveyed the company assembled. Rev. [illegible] Mrs. Sedgwick, niece of Mr. Burton, Sisters Neal and Griffin, besides ministers, outnumbered. Then the bounteous display of eatables, and the chief factor, a huge turkey gobbler, browned to a turn.

My thoughts were this wise: "What hath God wrought!" In 1885 I was sent as pastor to Ocean Springs station—with wife and two children. The Stewards said the utmost amount that could be raised was $12.50 per month. No missionary appropriation and no parsonage. I at once rented a furnished house at $12.50 per month, and started to live by faith, when Bishop [illegible] canceled the appointment and transferred me to Cadiz Street Church, New Orleans—revoking the transfer before the next session of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, in 1886. Again my name was called as preacher in charge of Ocean Springs circuit—everything on the coast between Ocean Springs and the Louisiana line (more territory and not much more salary). I located at Biloxi, rented a home, and got out my castnet and fishing lines. My first appointment, at Handsboro, brought me a surprise—Mr. P. K. Mayers, editor of the Handsboro Democrat, kept the latch-string out for Methodist preachers, though not a church member. At his home, while at breakfast, he interviewed me extensively, trying to size me up as to whether or not I could measure up to the possible hardships that were sure to come.

Changing the congenial topic of conversation, he turned and suddenly propounded a question that he thought would shake my faith: "Did you bring your castnet with you?" My instant reply was, "Yes!"

He felt confounded, and maintained profound silence until I inquired: "Why have you asked me that question?" In a genial way, he related that my predecessor, when asked that question, answered in the negative, and inquired "what it was, and its use to a preacher." He was told that on the coast we raised no hogs—the smokehouse must be filled with mullet-fish, caught in a cast-net, and when a supply became exhausted we must go to the Bay and capture more. "If you stay on the coast, you must procure a cast-net;" the preacher believed the message, and left next day for home.

I laughed, and turned on my host by saying: "You can't bluff me off. I not only have a cast-net, but this morning caught near one hundred trout—fish-car is nearly full. If you need any fish, send up to Biloxi and help yourself."

His reply was: "You will do to stay on the coast."

Up to about '83 or '84 we could get no place to preach in at Pass Christian, and at the Bay St. Louis some ten or fifteen persons would attend a monthly appointment at the "Protestant Chapel."

I thought of these things, and contemplated the fact of station preachers at Ocean Springs, Biloxi, two at Gulfport, one at Longbeach, Pass Christian and Bay St. Louis each—seven station preachers and one presiding elder, where in the early '80s I was the pastor in charge. Yet, in 1908, I was in Pass Christian, eating a sumptuous repast with its pastor in charge at the home of the presiding elder of the Seashore District Conference. I felt like shouting, as my eyes were fixed upon this band of consecrated young men, a few possibly babies, or in the A, B, C class at school, when I became identified with Methodism on the coast of Mississippi at Longbeach, Pass Christian and Bay St. Louis. I owe a debt of gratitude to Rev. Henry Ware, local preacher. He made it possible to obtain a permanent foothold at these points. ROBT. B. DOWNER.

AT EVENING-TIME IT SHALL BE LIGHT.

BY MRS. E. M. LIPSCOMB.

At evening-time it shall be light,
Oh, blessed thought—oh, hope so bright!
It matters not how tired my feet,
Rest comes with this promise sweet.

At morning-time the sky is blue
And flowers sparkle with the dew;
The world is full of joy and gladness
And life has no care or sadness.

The sun grows hot at life's noon-tide,
Our loved ones fall on every side;
Our toil is hard, our hands are weary
And oft the days are dark and dreary.

But soon the cooling breezes blow
And evening's sunset radiant glow
Spreads o'er the earth a rosy hue
That makes my heart its hope renew.

At evening-time it shall be light
Tho' death's dark shadow seems to blight
Our noblest aims and plans so dear—
In heaven 'tis always bright and clear.

For in that joyous, happy land
All mysteries we shall understand
In the light of God's eternal day
When all the mists have rolled away.

A GREAT OPENING IN OLD BARACOA.

Rev. W. G. Fletcher, one of the superintendents of our Cuban Mission, sends me the following letter with reference to a great opening in old Baracoa, where Christopher Columbus first landed in the Island:

Baracoa, Cuba, Dec. 1, 1908.

My Dear Bishop: I have long desired to open work in Baracoa for these good reasons: (1) The population of the town and township is 27,000. (2) The field lies contiguous to our work in the Mayari and Sagua Valleys. (3) We have been asked repeatedly and urgently to come.

Naturally I was glad to preach the Gospel first in this town, the landing-place of Columbus in Cuba. It is pretty certain that this is the first place he touched after San Salvador.

Romanism has as near no hold here as is possible. During my seven years' work in Cuba, in which I have travelled more than any other missionary in the Island, I have never seen such an opportunity as is offered us here.

I came here last week with Brother Riera, and he and I went to preaching in the old-fashioned Methodist way—both preaching at each service. The reception of the Gospel has been absolutely marvelous. Hundreds of people, besides those who can get room in the chapel, crowd about the house, and listen attentively to the sermons and exhortations. The crowds grow daily.

There is an interest manifested here which I have not seen before anywhere in Cuba. The town is stirred. Everybody is talking about the new religion. A hundred and seventy-five candidates have been received. The list was headed by the president of the Board of Education. The number grows daily.

Last night there were people here from villages ten miles away, asking that we go out and preach. The entire supply of New Testaments which we had (100 copies) was sold at once, and we have wired for more.

If we do what we ought to do here we must [illegible] a Church, of course. One can be built for $2000. Of this I have $500 in hand already, with several hundred more in sight. In fact, if I had $1000, I could take care of this place.

There are several companies of Americans and Swedes operating here whom I am working to advantage.

O that I had $1000 in sight! The Church at Sagua de Tanamo is being finished. The carpenters could commence at once here, and by Conference have the building almost completed.

It will nearly break my heart not to arrange for this work to go ahead in a building of our own suited for religious services. You know what I mean when I urge the necessity of establishing ourselves in our own plant in a Cuban town.

By putting out some money for quarters in Cardenas we are further advanced after one years' work than a sister denomination which has worked there about ten years, and has spent far more money in rents than we have expended for our building, and still has no building.

I go from here to Sagua de Tanamo to dedicate the new Church, and receive a class of fifty members.

I do not ask you to add this Baracoa burden to those which have been coming so heavily upon you recently. I merely tell you about it that you may know the conditions in the territory under your Episcopal care.

To get this Baracoa work started, I used a little fund of $90, which I have been saving in amounts of a few dollars, sometimes a few cents, against sickness in my family. I am now penniless, but full of joy over the results of my investment in the work in this old town. Would to God that I had more money and another life to give to this field! Yours affectionately,

W. G. FLETCHER.

How can I refuse to try to get the $1000 for this great work? I lay the case before the Church. It is all I can do. Somehow I feel that dear, unselfish Fletcher's ringing letter will bring me the money he asks for. It ought to bring it. Who will help build this Church in old Baracoa? Perhaps we may call it Columbus Chapel.

Some weeks ago, I made appeal for the Church at Sagua de Tanamo. The money came, and, as appears from the foregoing letter, the house will be dedicated and a large class of members received by Brother Fletcher within the next few days.

Despite unsettled conditions in Cuba, both commercially and politically, our work in that interesting field goes forward grandly. The Methodists are now about one-third of all the Protestants on the Island. Great is our responsibility and opportunity. W. A. CANDLER.

SARDIS DISTRICT.

The recent Conference gave the Sardis District a "shaking up." Thirteen of the nineteen charges had a change in preachers. But the people and preachers are adjusting themselves to the new conditions and entering heartily upon the new year's work. Some of the pastors are already planning for revival services and advances in other lines of Church work.

Brother Bailey arrived at his new charge, Arkabutla, in time to hold the regular prayer service the week the Conference adjourned. The people are much pleased with his preaching and are expecting a great year.

Brother Pope had a royal reception at Senatobia and the prospects are most promising.

The people of Como have been busy since Conference overhauling the parsonage and making ready for Brother Brown. Both preacher and people are pleased.

Brother O. W. Bradley remained at Hernando till the Sunday after the Conference and preached his farewell sermon. Brother Wendell arrived at his post in due time and has made an excellent start.

The people of Batesville have been highly pleased with their pastor, Brother Moss, and so expressed themselves just before Conference. But since that time they have made a violent attack upon the parsonage. We have heard that Moss stood his ground and could not be scared. As a matter of information, will say that the attacking parties used hams, sugar, coffee, rice etc., which will explain his remarkable bravery.

The people of Sardis have received Brother Murrah with open arms, and the present indications are that a great year in the history of Sardis Methodism will be experienced. *

SEASONING.

You would not eat unseasoned food, would you? It takes salt to give zest to what is eaten. And so coffee, too, may be seasoned, all its good qualities and flavor brought out. The Dutch of Holland had the secret of seasoning coffee for more than a hundred years. The French and the French-speaking people of New Orleans now have it. That is why French coffee and New Orleans coffee are famous the world over. That is why is so rich, refreshing and satisfying. It is a coffee of the highest grade with just enough of the French seasoning to make it perfect. When you once taste it, the other kind will be about as satisfactory to you as unsalted food.

A PRETTY OCCURRENCE.

Thanksgiving Day was marked in Scranton, Miss., by an occurrence that brought joy to at least one true heart and afforded an opportunity for a deserved tribute. As in most other Mississippi towns, the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist congregations united in a service of thanksgiving. In this instance it was held in the Methodist Church, Rev. C. L. Wilson, pastor of the Baptist Church, being the speaker of the occasion. At the close of the service and just preceding the benediction, Mr. R. P. Linfield, superintendent of the city schools, came forward to the altar, and addressing Brother T. B. Cottrell, the Methodist pastor, called to memory the fact that a thief recently entered the parsonage and carried away the preacher's watch. "I am deputized to tell you," said the speaker, "that you stand convicted before our people of a similar offense, for you have broken into our lives and stolen our hearts away from us." Disclaiming any intention of demanding a return of this valuable property, Prof. Linfield stated that the friends of the beloved pastor wished to replace that of which he had been deprived. He, therefore, in the name of Brother Cottrell's friends of all denominations, presented him with a beautiful gold watch, the gift being intended for the dual purpose of filling a vacancy in the preacher's vest-pocket and expressing to him the love of his many friends. In the list of donors are people in nearly every congregation in our town, some of the other pastors contributing liberally.

Brother Cottrell responded most heartily, ex[illegible] that [illegible] an incident that will always be a bright spot in the history of this Church. METHODIST.

CLINTON'S NEW CHURCH.

Our new brick church at Clinton, La., cost, from foundation to steeple, including seating, a little over $6000. The Rev. W. H. Coleman, under whose pastorate the work was begun, preached the first sermon in it at the invitation of the present pastor, F. M. Freeman. At this service, the congregation unanimously chose to name the Church "The Mary Winans Wall Memorial," in honor of one who had loved and worked for Methodist Christianity for three quarters of a century.

In the old building, this writer had listened as a child to such preachers as Uncles Barnabas, Pepkin, Thos. Clinton, Jas. A. Godfrey and W. B. Hines, who were "strong in the Lord." Then there was Rev. Henry T. Lewis, whom wit and humor, have made him immortal as the author of "The Harp of a Thousand Strings." All these have crossed over to the other side, but their works do follow them.

In the long ago, we can see two boys going to their first Sunday School in the old church on the corner. Both of them became good and faithful ministers of the gospel and are known and loved throughout connectional Methodism. Drs. C. W. Carter and Boatner Chapman are "our boys," and we are proud of them.

Now, Doctor, I am not going to mention all our pastors, but I am going to say we have generally had good ones; good in mental ability; and good because filled with the Spirit of Christ; but I shall mention three living ex-pastors whose work and labor of love here are to me as dear as any of the remembrances of my life: Revs. W. B. Lewis, T. B. Holloman, of the Mississippi Conference, and W. H. Coleman, now of Homer, La.

Our pastor, Rev. F. M. Freeman, has been preaching good sermons and has endeared himself to the community. Yours truly,

ISAAC D. WALL.

FROM DR. SAWYER.

At the late session of my Conference, having been granted on my motion a supernumerary relation, I desire to spend the coming year in evangelistic work. I am ready to hold meetings in my own and neighboring Conferences for those pastors who may desire my services. Brethren, write me at 2421 Chestnut St., New Orleans, La. Write promptly,

JOHN T. SAWYER.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Our Training School at Montrose confidently expects your efficient aid in securing students. An appeal for patronage from you as pastor, publicly or privately made, will doubtless have due influence. You are hereby urgently requested to do so on your first round of appointments. We need now names and addresses of young people on the charge you served in 1908, who might be induced to attend during the half-session beginning Jan. 1, 1909.

Moreover, won't you please, at your earliest convenience, furnish name and address of every parent having children who, in your judgment, ought to enter their Training School here next fall? They shall have, through your kindness herein, our literature and frequent personal correspondence touching the Christian duty of educating their young people in religious institutions of learning—more especially this of ours. And do not overlook the deserving country youth. If you do not grant this request, some of your people will wonder why you do not. They read this ADVOCATE. Your co-laborer,

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts, unequaled nowhere else in the State.

Second—The Health Conditions; we rarely require the service of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled corps of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France, and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—See Descriptive Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that sustained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is fuller and better adapted than that of most girls schools of the South.

Eighth—Strong Christian influence dominating all instruction.

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates, who take high stand in the educational world, than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

ECCLESIASTES IN THE METRE OF OMAR.

Ecclesiastes is among the least read of the books of the Bible. Certainly it is not very widely understood. Many find in it only a pessimistic wail, ending at the tomb in a fevid outburst of gorgeous imagery, and yielding, at the last, a grudging resignation to the will of God. Any book that can assist the ordinary reader to a more sympathetic understanding of Ecclesiastes is a worthy addition to religious literature.

An interesting and rather unique attempt is that of William Byron Forbush in a book of 105 pages, published in 1906 by Houghton Mifflin & Co., under the title, "Ecclesiastes in the Meter of Omar." The title is not strikingly accurate. It is well known that the metre of Fitzgerald's translation of the Robaiyat is not that of Omar Khayyam, but an invention of the English poet. And it is this metrical form that Mr. Forbush uses. Other translators of the Rubaiyat use other forms. Were the title written exactly it might run, "Ecclesiates in the Metre of Fitzgerald's Translation of Omar." This would be exceedingly awkward, to be sure. When one considers how completely, in the popular mind, Fitzgerald's translation of Omar has displaced every other, Mr. Forbush's title is doubtless sufficiently accurate.

The author's plan is simple enough. He takes up the search of the writer of Ecclesiastes after the Supreme Good and follows him through his various quests. (Ecc. 1:12-2:26.) He versifies the general thoughts on time, eternity, the world, life, man, woman, and God. (Ecc. 3:1-11:9.) Metrical arrangements of the solemn prologue (Ess. 1:11.) and the sublime epilogue (Ecc. 11:9-12:7.) appear in place at the beginning and end of the work. Except in the second section Mr. Forbush's verses follow closely the order of Ecclesiastes. Here he assembles under selected topics the scattered heart-cries of the Sacred philosopher. As an interpretation by this exactness of form the work is strengthened; as a poem it is weakened. The Muse scorns to wing her way in geometric configurations, but chooses rather to soar and sink, to hover circling or hurl herself headlong with sublime disdain for the ordered niceness of her progress. And the more the holy fumes intoxicate, the wilder, freer, and less sympathetic is her flight.

Now Mr. Forbush as a versifier is painfully neat, and never falls so far under the Delphic influence as to lose control of himself. Some of his verses glow mildly. They never amount to flame. He borrows widely, for his reading is wide, his memory good, and he isn't writing an original poem. But he mars his whole performance by a footnote in which he writes of a line, itself not striking: "My impression is that I have borrowed this line; but I cannot recall its source." He would better have waited very quietly until his jaded muse revived a bit and made another.

As a poet Mr. Forbush is not dangerous to his subject. And this fits him the better for the task to which he is addressed. His work is not to produce a poem by Forbush, but an interpretation of Ecclesiastes. Fitzgerald is a poet. His heart crackles into flame at every wind from Parnassus; wherefore, the Rubaiyat is but the basis of a splendid English poem, and one is never certain where the Persian leaves off, and the English bard begins.

Ecclestiastes is part of an important though meagre fragment of world-literature. Every nation has produced those who asked its questions, felt its pain, and knew its deep despair. Men who were "too wise to be wholly poets, and yet too surely poets to be implacably wise." The solution in each case is characteristic of the race that produced the questioner. The English Byron, the German Goethe, the Persian Omar, Heine, type of the modern Jew, these each think, feel, ask and doubt as does the ancient Hebrew Seer. Byron finds a bitter answer in his own misanthropy. Heine treats the whole business with fantastic contempt, and dismisses it with a shrug of the shoulders, and the bottomless blasphemy, "God will forgive, it is His trade." Omar's solution has been too often quoted, and too well known for comment.

"A book of verses underneath a bough,
"A loaf of bread, a jug of wine, and thou
"Beside me singing in the wilderness,
"That wilderness were Paradise enow."

Life, its joys, wine, woman, song—a brave heart and a merry laugh, death, eternity and God will take care of themselves,—

"Ah take the cash and let the credit go."

The value of every interpretation of Ecclesiastes centres in its exposition of the solution. Mr. Forbush finds it for himself in the joy of introspection in a mind that "secretes heaven as the shell the pearl." (He makes much of the expression "secretes heaven.") The endless quest, carried forward nobly and bravely, by a stainless heart, is its own proper reward. The joys plucked along the toilsome way are so much in excess whereat to "rejoice and be glad all the days of your life." This for the uplifted and enlightened mind. For the common herd Mr. Forbush's Ecclesiastes has but the stinging sneer, "eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow you die."

In this Mr. Forbush errs, but he errs on the road to the goal. Ecclesiastes goes his way, but it goes farther and deeper. A God-inspired heart struggles with the problems that in Byronic bitterness, the grotesque profanity of a Heine, or the good natured world-wiseness of Omar, humanity has resigned to the future and to fate. The answer is somehow, God. An answer that lies not in what Ecclesiastes says to one, but in what it makes one say to oneself. For its words are gloomy, but they shed light, and its song is lonely and sad, but it awakens in the heart a strain of peace and hope.

And this deep looking into God, in an isolated moment of inspiration that is beside his purpose, Mr. Forbush arrives at. The sweeping thought expressed by Alexander McLaren in the matchless words of his sermon on the Gospel. "The true glory of the Divine nature is its tenderness. Not in the awful attributes that separate that inconceivable Nature from us, not in the eternity of his existence, nor in the infinitude of his Being, not in the omnipotence of His unwearied arm, nor in fire-eyed omniscience is the true glory of God. These pompous 'attributes' are but the fringes of the brightness, the living white heart of which is love. * * *." This Mr. Forbush transcribes from one of the deepest and the only prophetic passages in Ecclesiastes, in these splendid quatrains:

"If Moses-like before the face divine
On Sanai tops my knees do not incline,
One flicker from that generous light may fall
To cause my patient, puzzled face to shine.
"That light which with its plaintive sunset grace
Through triple-tinted veil of Holy Place
Jehovah gave on Nebo's slope to light
The grimness of the ten commandment face."

Mr. Forbush's effort justifies its existence. As an interpretation of Ecclesiastes, it deserves high rank. The student of the Bible seeking deeper insight into one of its most difficult books will not do ill to read "Ecclesiastes in the Metre of Omar."

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

The following report was made of the Port Gibson Female College to the late session of the Mississippi Conference:

To the Mississippi Annual Conference: Dear Brethren—The sixty-seventh session of the Port Gibson Female College closed May 18, 1908. The attendance of the session was a little thinned out in the Spring on account of an epidemic of measles in the College, but altogether it was a splendid session, both from the standpoint of attendance and work accomplished. There was no graduating class at commencement on account of the fact that the standard of study has been raised.

We have entered auspiciously upon the sixty-eighth session of the school, with an enrollment to date of one hundred and twelve students; seventy-six of whom are in the boarding department. We have witnessed the gradual development of the student body in number and general appearance, and the faculty testify to a gratifying development in intellectual attainments and capacity. There is a Senior Class during the present session of five promising young ladies.

During the sixty-seventh session improvements upon the property amounting to over $300 were made, and over $1200 worth of equipments and furnishings were added. For the session already begun, $700 worth of improvements on the buildings have been made, and over $400 has been expended in equipments and furnishing. The chief recent improvements made have been the re-roofing of the main building and the addition of another shower bath apartment. All of these items of expense have been borne by the president of the institution out of the current income from the board and tuition fees. Separate and apart from this has been the purchase of the College Annex, a residence property purchased by the Trustees, to be used as a dormitory until the present brick dormitory can be enlarged, at which time the expectation is to sell this annex building as a residence and turn the proceeds into an addition to the brick dormitory. The president of the College has borne the expense of furnishing the Annex, but the purchase and improvement of the Annex has been managed by the Trustees as a separate business. The purchase price of the Annex Building was $2500, of which $625 has been paid. Improvements have been made upon the building at an expense of $288.45. This purchase was made by the Trustees in expectation of receiving from the Conference an appropriation of $500 for the next Conference year.

The president of the school believes that the faculty, consisting of eleven teachers, besides matron, physician and laundryman, is the best since he has been connected with the institution. An effort is being made to give special attention to health. And the religious feature has been made prominent. The religious effort of the students is chiefly through the College Epworth League, which has been thoroughly organized and which holds weekly devotional meetings besides engaging in other activities. The College has its own Sunday School, which is doing good work. And there are daily prayer meetings and weekly classes in Bible Studies. Several students have already connected themselves with our own and other churches since the session opened.

LESSONS OF THE CHRISTMAS-TIDE.

BY REV. T. C. WEIR.

The announcement of the angel was a message from heaven to the affrighted shepherds, quieting their fears, and telling of the most wonderful event since the creation of the world. "Fear not, for behold, I bring your good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ, the Lord." "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men." When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy, they celebrated the wisdom and power of God in the finished work of creation. They rejoiced and shouted over the birth of a new world. And now again, after several thousand years, the angelic host is heard, shouting for joy over the birth of God's incarnate Son, the Creator and Redeemer of the world. This was a time of greater moment than the former, inasmuch as, while "it was great to speak a world from naught, it was greater to redeem."

The Christmas-tide is a blessed season; a time of the home-coming of long absent loved ones, and glad reunion; of happy greetings—of giving of gifts and of great joy. What is the significance, the meaning of these manifestations of gladness and good will? Looking beneath the surface of things characteristic of the Christmas-tide, we find something of its real significance—the true Christmas spirit.

It is a reminder of the nativity of Christ; that nineteen hundred and eight years ago he came in human form—a babe—to set up a kingdom of peace on earth, and good will toward men. It is a reminder of God's great Christmas-gift to the world. Little children in the stately mansion, the cottage, and the humble home, leap from their warm beds on the crisp December morning, shouting to each other, to parents and to all whom they meet, the glad cry: "Christmas-gift," "Christmas-gift." They expect only some personal gift or token, and yet, though unconsciously to themselves, thousands of children's voices thus re-announce the angelic message: "Unto you is born this day a Savior."

And in the Christmas-tide, with its expressions of kindly feeling, good will, and gladness that greet us everywhere, we find an illustration of the real nature of our Lord's kingdom, as one of peace on earth, and good will toward men.

A benign influence seems to pervade the air. The social and moral atmosphere is vibrant with a thrilling joy, and luminous with an unwonted light, which is not all of earth. The benevolent affections have full play. There is joy in receiving, but greater joy in the giving of gifts.

At such a time, God's smile rests upon the world. In his smile, we may "forget that we in sorrow ever met." In his smile, we may "overlook the turned down pages in life's book." In his smile, we may "remain just this side of grief and pain."

At such a time, catching the true Christmas spirit, it seems to us, as if heaven stoops low and comes nearer to the earth, and earth seems lifted up and nearer to heaven; as if a wave of heavenly atmosphere swept over our world; as if breezes genial, from celestial climes, laden with the odors of paradise, fanned the earth; as if through some rift there shown down to us some of the glory from the upper-world, making our old world brighter, better and happier.

The Christmas-tide is a prophesy of the triumph of our blessed Lord's kingdom over all the earth. From the time when the angelic host sang and shouted for joy at his advent upon earth; when the humble shepherds saw the babe lying in the manger and went away rejoicing; from the time when the star shone and the wise men brought their gifts and worshiped the Infant King, his kingdom has extended its borders and evidenced its sway, spreading with increasing power. And on this glad natal day, multiplied millions worship at his feet, and proclaim him King of Peace and Lord of all. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

THE SABBATH MEALS.

The word Sabbath is comparatively little used at present, and popularly the Lord's Day is called Sunday. Therefore, in writing the caption of this bit of talk I hesitated between the two forms. Hallowed associations of childhood and a hundred sweet traditions make me prefer the name, Sabbath. It carries to me a suggestion of, "Welcome, sweet day of rest," whereas, for reasons easily apprehended, Sunday has grown half-secular, what with Sunday railway trains carrying crowds of pleasure-seekers here and there and Monday morning reports of the hurrying thousands who thronged to the seashore or the fields on the previous day. Doubtless we cannot expect to bring into our modern ways and modern conditions the precise observance of the Sabbath that once set it apart and kept it sacred to spiritual rest and refreshment, and doubtless there is much excuse for the worn-out and busy toilers who hasten into the open from the cramped space of their tenement homes. Yet these are very far from composing the whole number of people who have fallen into the habit of omiting church services on the Lord's Day and devoting it entirely to outings of one or another kind and to various forms of amusement. A large proportion of the young people who play golf and tennis or take long rides in motor cars on Sunday afternoon have nothing to prevent their enjoying these diversions on Saturday, and as for week-end parties in beautiful country houses, in the majority of instances they can offer no apology for the Sabbath desecration that has become one of their marked features.

However, it was of the ordinary Sunday meals that I thought when I began to write. Looking over a letter received some little time ago from a friend who is entitled to the distinction of a social queen in a wide circle, I find that she has made it her custom for years so to order Sunday that it is a day of rest to her household staff. "I have the plainest dinner of the week," she writes, "on Sunday, with dessert prepared on Saturday, and on Sunday afternoon and evening I leave my servants free and we get our simple supper ourselves." Surely this is a good example worth following. All housekeepers have not this lady's number of efficient and well-trained domestics, and very likely those who read the Corner are often thankful if they have one moderately capable maid-of-all-work, while many ladies do the work the week through with their own hands. In this country of ours the lady who does her own work is as much a factor in society as she who has under her supervision, cook, housemaid and parlormaid, laundress and waitress, with butler, coachman and footman. Whether there are many servants or none at all does not materially affect the question of the Sunday meals. In numerous homes it is only on the Sabbath that the husband and father can be with his family at a noon-day meal. Often his hours are so long, from early morning to late evening that his little children do not see him at either end of the day during the week. The Sabbath-Day adds to its other blessings an opportunity for a weary man to get close to his wife and children in the sweet intimacy of a day that is free from outside cares. The meals ought, I think, to have about them, for such men and their children, an air of festival. This may be managed without undue elaboration and without too much Sunday work, if there be judicious arrangement beforehand and if some portion of the meals are made ready on Saturday. The ordinary Saturday baking may include cakes and pies or dainty puddings. Most salads are none the worse for prepared the day before their use. Lettuce can be kept perfectly fresh by wrapping it in a damp towel and placing it in the ice box. Mayonnaise or French dressing can be prepared on Saturday. If there is an objection to cold meats, it is really very little trouble to put a roast in the oven on Sunday morning and two simple vegetables may be cooked without involving much labor.

Many housekeepers are now using a fireless stove, a useful invention worth looking into by those who would minimize Sunday toil.

In the home of a clerical friend the children have always found the Sunday dinner their own special treat. Their father and mother have given each child from Sunday to Sunday a little missionary journey illustrated by the father with stories and anecdotes and founded on the products on the table. Thus there might be fruits from a tropical country, tea from China, coffee from Java, spice from Ceylon, and the child who most successfully told something of the country that had furnished the food was rewarded with a story. The idea could only be worked out by somebody who had missionary lore at his finger's ends, and it is mentioned merely as a hint that the day, with little trouble, may be made to children the brightest one in all the week.—Aunt Marjorie, in Christian Intelligencer.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

The Christmas spirit is the spirit of the Gospel message: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." At this glad season that spirit should inspire the heart of every human being to whom the news of the Savior's birth is known. Hearts should swell with gratitude to God, and every tongue join in the praise to the Lord of all. The feelings of the heart should find expression, not only in good will, ing but in deeds of kindness to all who are in suffering or want. It is not enough to remember friends and members of ones own household—that is well, but the poor should share the bounty of those in better circumstances. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." There is no better time to test that saying of the Master than at Christmas, when so many hundreds of our fellow-beings are far less fortunate than ourselves. May the present season be the happiest ever experienced in our lives. And in return for the goodness of God let us remember him and do good.

A MISREAD SCRIPTURE.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Possibly no passage of the Word of God is oftener misread than this, a part of the message delivered to "the angel of the church in Smyrna." Nine persons out of ten read into it a meaning never intended. They say, "Be thou faithful until death," whereas the message is, "Be thou faithful unto death." The concordance points to no parallel, nor does any marginal reference in any book at hand. The nearest to a parallel passage is what our Lord said to comfort persecuted disciples: "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

Let the reader bear in mind that when the Spirit said to the church in Smyrna, "Be thou faithful unto death," he had in mind persecuted Christians, "in prison" and in "tribulation," some of whom would certainly suffer death for the faith. Under such circumstances they needed comfort and encouragement. In the midst of suffering and death, violent in form, staring them in the face, what could be more assuring than to be told that a crown of life awaits them. Without such assurance, life would have been a burden and death a terror. With it they could cheerfully accept any fortune or meet any fate.

It is an easy matter for a Christian, under favorable conditions, to profess Christ and remain faithful until death. Among us to-day, we not only have peace and exemption from all forms of violent persecution, but every facility for the cultivation and enjoyment of our religion. Religion is everywhere popular, and receives not only the sanction and encouragement of public sentiment, but the protection of the strong arm of the law. Nowhere on earth, where Protestantism is strong enough to curb prejudice, are men persecuted for conscience sake, to say nothing of being saved from the rack and from the stake. Such has been the progress of enlightened Christianity. The fathers of the early church were not so fortunate, nor were all good men in the middle ages. "They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented (of whom the world was not worthy); they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth." They were faithful unto death. Happy are we that we have no like afflictions! Ours is a glorious day!

THE CRITICS ARE RIGHT.

Our readers are aware that the Rev. R. J. Campbell, successor of Dr. Parker, of City Temple, London, is the leader of the "New Theology." Mr. Campbell is personally a very lovable man as well as a very brilliant preacher. He not only attracts large congregations, but has drawn to himself a number of scholars, who are leaders with him in the "New Theology." We now learn through the Christian Intelligencer that the "movement" has "received a setback." Some of the leaders have withdrawn from further association with Mr. Campbell, "on account of recent irrational developments." What those developments are the Intelligencer does not say. We are left to infer that, if they are "irrational," they are such as place Mr. Campbell outside the circle of Christian believers. The criticisms of strong men of orthodox persuasion had the proper effect on some of Mr. Campbell's aides. One of them, the chief scholar of the the movement, says: "With a regret far deeper than would ordinarily accompany a confession of having been mistaken, I have to admit to-day that it is the critics who were right. The doctrinal development of Mr. Campbell himself within the past year or so has proceeded by leaps and bounds along lines which have only too fully justified those hostile predictions and criticisms. Let those New Theologians, if any, who may endorse these teachings come forward and say so; for my part, I utterly repudiate them as subversive of all that I understand by Christianity—I might go further and say, of all that I understand by religion." Of course, the critics are right. Not the "higher critics," but the critics of the New Theology. How could it be otherwise?

We understand how a man who denies revelation, and per consequence the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and gives himself wholly over to reason, can consistently decline to accept the plan of salvation, and the basis on which that plan is founded, but how he can pretend even to preach the gospel we do not understand. Mr. Campbell, we believe, does not deny in toto the truth and authority of the Bible, but he does reject what we understand to be the vital principles of Christianity. In his preaching there has been some "irrational developments."

Let us hope that the reaction against the New Theology will bring all his followers back to their senses, and Mr. Campbell himself again to orthodoxy, the preaching of which attracted attention, and made him the successor of London's strongest preacher.

POSITIVE PREACHING.

If the man who uses his pulpit "to exploit problems of criticism or to tell, even by way of exposition, the forms or the grounds of doubt," contributes to his "failure as a preacher," as the Southwestern Presbyterian suggests, what must be the effect of his preaching, if in plain language he tells his hearers that he does not believe the Bible "from lid to lid"? Whether he specifies the particular things he does not believe makes no difference. If he is a man of learning, and possesses the confidence and affection of his congregation, the effect will be a great shock to all—some will be shaken in their faith in the Word of God, and some will be shaken in their faith in the integrity of the man as a Christian. In either case his power as a soul-saver will be weakened, if not destroyed.

If a preacher really believes the vital doctrines of the Gospel, the inspiration of holy Scriptures, the divinity of our Lord, his atonement for sin, his resurrection from the dead, and in the Holy Ghost, it seems to us that it would be impossible for him to deny any statement found in the Book. When doubts are entertained as to the truth of these vital things, it is easy enough to deny and doubt anything else.

We can see how the faith of an honest man can undergo change and force him to leave one communion and go into another, or to abandon the ministry altogether, but how one can change his faith, or lose it, and still hold his place in the church whose doctrines he no longer believes or preaches, we cannot understand.

If there be among our readers those who, after a critical study of the Scriptures, have come to the conclusion that certain parts of the Bible are not inspired, or are contrary to the facts of science, and have not been affected or weakened in their faith in the vital doctrines of evangelical Christianity as believed and taught by Methodists, we hope they will not feel offended if we venture to suggest that the purpose for which they are in the ministry can be effected only by preaching the positive doctrines of grace. Souls can never be saved by half-hearted preaching. Men can never be led to Christ by denying the Word, or insinuating that it is not in everything infallible. "Positive preaching is the only kind that will tell."

DR. JOHN T. SAWYER.

At the recent session of the Louisiana Conference Dr. John T. Sawyer asked for the supernumerary relation, and it was granted him. In this relation he was appointed to First Church, New Orleans, and as but a fraction of his time will be required in that church, he will be open to engagements to assist brethren in revival services. Dr. Sawyer, as his friends know, is not only a great evangelical preacher, but a successful one. Dr. Sawyer needs no letter of introduction to the preachers of Louisiana, and they will, we dare say, avail themselves of his services. To the preachers of Mississippi we recommend him, believing that he will be of great assistance to them in their meetings. He may be reached by addressing a letter to him in care of this office.

PERSONAL.

Rev. C. H. Ellis, appointed to Decatur, Miss., preached in his new charge the first Sunday after Conference. He anticipates a great year.

The address of Rev. R. S. Isbell is changed from Mooringsport, La., to Grayson, La. Correspondents will address him accordingly until further notice.

Rev. E. C. Sullivan and family moved cheerfully from Brownfield to Belmont, Miss., and enter hopefully upon the new field of labor. May they have a happy and fruitful year!

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, financial agent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, has moved from Franklin to Ruston, La. Correspondents are requested to address him at that place.

Brother S. D. Roberts, having moved from Zachary, La., to Pecos, Tex., orders the ADVOCATE to follow him to his new home, and adds this postscript: "I can't get along without the ADVOCATE."

Rev. C. M. Chapman has entered hopefully upon his charge, Fifth Street Church, Meridian. The Stewards propose to do liberal things for him, and he purposes to show his appreciation by giving the Church good service.

Sunday last Dr. Sawyer preached at Second Church in the morning, and Rev. R. F. Harrell in the evening. The pastor, Rev. A. J. Townsley, was at Birmingham, Ala., where he officiated at the funeral of a former parishioner.

A dispatch from Logansport, La., says the people of the Keachie charge, which includes Logansport, are much pleased with the return of Rev. C. M. Martin for another year. "He is an earnest worker, and a young preacher of great promise."

Rev. P. H. Fontaine was a pleasant visitor on Monday last. He goes from Wilson, in the Baton Rouge District, to Tallulah, in the Monroe District. He has not yet seen his charge, but is highly pleased and expects a pleasant and fruitful year.

Rev. J. J. Smylie, of the Mississippi Conference, was transferred to the Missouri Conference and stationed at Canton, Mo. He will encounter much cold on the outside of the church, but those who go to hear him preach will find it warm and pleasant.

Rev. M. L. Burton, presiding elder of the Seashore District the past two years, and who did efficient and most satisfactory work, has thought best to rest for a year. He will move from Pass Christian to Purvis, Miss. His friends are requested to take notice of this change.

Rev. I. D. Borders, returning to Holly Springs for the third year, was greeted in the morning by a house full of hearers—a fine expression of their satisfaction. We note with great pleasure the high stand Brother Borders has taken, and predict for him a career of great usefulness.

Second Church, Laurel, Mississippi Conference, was not left to be supplied, as stated in last week's ADVOCATE. Rev. L. F. Alford was appointed to the charge, and is on the ground already and at work. He occupied his pulpit last Sunday, and is much encouraged with the outlook.

A note from Rev. W. Wooton, appointed to Lake Providence, La., says: "By an arrangement with the Bishop after Conference, I was returned to Arcadia, and no preacher ever received a warmer or more enthusiastic welcome. It is my purpose to do the best work of which I am capable."

Rev. H. Armstrong, at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, was placed on the list of superannuates at his own request. He has given the Church long and faithful service, and retires gracefully, and in the favor of his brethren. May his last years be as happy as the former years have been useful!

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, returned to Parker Memorial Church, [illegible] the debt on the new building [illegible] incomplete, but with the debt on it cancelled, the pastor and his helpers will feel free to make further progress. Already Brother Atkinson has his plans laid, and is collecting money.

All hands in this office concerned in printing Rev. R. A. Meek's call for a preacher in last issue beg his pardon for attaching the wrong name. If any letters go to Greenville directed to "Rev. R. A. Hook," the postmaster, we hope, will feel no hesitancy in handing them to Brother Meek. Please turn to and read the corrected notice.

We congratulate our friend and brother, W. A. Belk, of Holly Springs, Miss., on his promotion to the superintendency of the Sunday School at Holly Springs, Miss. He entered upon his new duties on Sunday last, the opening of another Conference year. His responsibilities are many and heavy. He will make a good officer, we doubt not.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, on entering another year at Felicity Street Church, took occasion at the first service to make a plea in behalf of "isolated sufferers," with special reference to the inmates of the "Lepers' Home" in the vicinity of New Orleans. Brother Lutz has visited the home several times, and knows how grateful the sufferers are for anything done in their behalf.

Dr. W. C. Black sends the following corrections. He says: "You have Vimville to be supplied. The appointment, as read out by the Bishop, was: Vimville and Seventh Avenue (Meridian), J. A. Wells. You have Middleton to be supplied. There is no Middleton Circuit, the name having been changed to East Clarke Circuit, of which M. R. Jones is the preacher. These are all in the Meridian District."

Rev. C. W. Huff was received by transfer into the Mississippi Conference from the Pacific Conference, and appointed to Raleigh Charge. He is on the ground and ready for work.

In addition to his work as superintendent of Gulf Coast Missions, Rev. W. T. Griffin was appointed Missionary Secretary for the Mississippi Conference, a work for which, we think, he is admirably fitted. His headquarters, we presume, will be Long Beach, Miss.

Two letters received, one from Dr. W. C. Black and one from Rev. E. P. Ormond, call attention to the fact that the name of Brother Ormond was not mentioned in the list of Mississippi appointments. We printed the list from the New Orleans Picayune and noticed the omission, but had no way of correcting the oversight. Brother Ormond was returned to Lauderdale for the third year, and was "warmly welcomed" by his people, and is much pleased, for "Lauderdale is a delightful charge." The outlook is encouraging.

Rev. W. W. Jones, moved from Kossuth to Rienzi, Miss., writes under date of Dec. 12: "We are now moved and well pleased. We hit Kossuth running and never stopped until to-night, when we stopped in comfortable quarters in Rienzi." And Rev. C. W. Daley, transferred from Pleasant Hill to Arkabutla, says: "I reached Arkabutla Tuesday evening, the 10th, and am well pleased." Both th[illegible] brethren moved and settled in all their new charges in less than a week after adjournment of Conference. Both intend [illegible] year of fruitful work. May they [illegible]

[illegible] are much gratified that the authorities saw fit to return to [illegible] Rev. [illegible] who so efficiently supplied the [illegible] part of last year. He [illegible] was there, and [illegible] the new year. The little [illegible] has had a great struggle, but is now on [illegible] of the Home Mission [illegible] paying about $550 [illegible] is small— [illegible] There are [illegible] and prospects are bright.

NEW BOOK BY DR. HAMILL.

Dr. H. M. Hamill, of our Training Department, has just prepared a 16-page booklet, handsomely printed, with paper cover, and in convenient pocket form, from our Publishing House press, containing twenty-five crisp, bright Bible drills on the book of Acts, from which will be taken all Sunday school lessons of 1909. The drills can be used by any pastor, superintendent or teacher on briefest notice, and are very simple and helpful. The price per copy is 5 cents, postpaid. Order at Smith & Lamar's, as the edition is limited. The little book will be a neat and timely Christmas Sunday school gift.

"I thank God for sunshine and bird-song; for the sweet morning light upon the hill-tops, and the tender eyes of my loved ones. The great world is awake and athrob with life. I, too, am [illegible] life [illegible] through my veins. I have a part in the great world, in its work, its joy and its sorrow. To-day I can be a little center from which can radiate peace, kindliness and good-will. I thank God for opportunity. A beautiful golden sunbeam has entered through my chamber window and awakened me to the gladness and beauty of the morning. May my spirit be awakened and kindled by the Divine Spirit, so that all this day it may warm and gladden the hearts it touches.—Exchange.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—[illegible]

[illegible] Water Valley [illegible] the Conference was organized [illegible] to Dec. [illegible]

[illegible] Memphis, Mississippi and Mobile Conferences with [illegible] preachers and [illegible] members. At the [illegible] of the Conference there were [illegible] districts, 93 pastoral charges, and [illegible] preachers on roll, of which number 42 are known to be living, 18 of whom are yet members of this Conference, 7 active and 11 retired; 13 belong to other Conferences and the remainder are local or altogether out of the ministry of our Church.

There are now [illegible] districts, [illegible] pastoral charges, [illegible] local preachers, [illegible] Church members, 171 preachers [illegible] Conference roll—146 effective and 25 superannuate and supernumerary. Five preachers died during the year, two effective and three superannuates.

The Conference was held again in Water Valley Dec. 3-8, 1879, Bishop Kavanaugh presiding; also Nov. 27 to Dec. 2, 1895, Bishop Fitzgerald presiding.

Previous to 1867, Water Valley was included in Coffeeville Circuit; that year it, with Coffeeville, was made a separate charge. In 1868 it was made a station, reporting at the close of the year 130 members.

There are now two churches, viz., First Church and Main Street, with an aggregate membership as reported last year of 659.

Since it became a station the pastors have been as follows: Wood Street, now First Church—W. W. Pearson, M. D. Fly, W. S. Harrison, Elias Jackson (who died early in the year and was succeeded by A. A. Houston), S. M. Thames, J. M. Boon, J. W. Honnoll, H. A. Jones, J. W. Price, J. S. Oakley, J. M. Wyatt, T. W. Dye, J. A. Bowen, W. S. Lagrone, W. S. Shipman, J. M. Bradley and W. W. Woollard, who has just closed a quadrennium of faithful service.

Wesley Chapel, 1876-86—A. B. Fly, J. R. Roberson, B. F. Phillips, C. M. Van Buren, G. W. Boyle, T. L. Foster, G. W. Brown, T. G. Freeman, A. P. Sage.

This charge was discontinued in 1886 and was reinstated by the Conference in 1895 as Main Street, with the following pastors to date, viz.: T. B. Clifford, H. P. Gibbs, J. C. Park, R. O. Brown, W. G. Harbin, L. D. Worsham, J. H. Bass, W. M. Langley, J. H. Holder, and J. W. McGee. This Church is located in the northern portion of the city and has a good house of worship and comfortable parsonage.

Two or three years ago the Wood Street Church property was disposed of and a more eligible site secured, with a good house, which was converted into a parsonage, and a handsome brick Church has been built, which is now First Church. In this new, commodious house the session of the Conference was held. "May the glory of this latter house be greater than the former."

CHURCH EXTENSION REPORT.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Your Board expresses its great appreciation of the growing sentiment in favor of this work. Could all our people know the urgent need of more funds to supply the ever-increasing demand upon us, surely they would respond with larger contributions. We call attention of our preachers and people to the several items herein set forth.

I. OUR CONNECTIONAL WORK.

During the past year the receipts of the General Board of Church Extension amounted to $12,000 more than they did the previous year, and yet when we tell you that the Board had applications for nearly three times as much money as it had to donate, you will understand the embarrassment under which it labors. The situation in Oklahoma is still serious. Forty per cent of the religious people in that great and growing State belong to us and yet not half of our organized churches have houses of worship.

Special attention is called to the proposed Connectional Church to be built in Washington City. Other denominations have erected handsome and modern church buildings there and we must not lag behind. If our Southern Methodism is to maintain itself in a creditable way in the Capital City of the Nation we must erect a suitable house of worship for our people there.

II. LOAN FUND DAY.

We record the lamentable fact that only nine of our congregations observed the Day and only $67.26 was raised. In view of the frequent demands which our people are making upon the Board for loans we would most respectfully urge our people who have funds to invest to give them to this Loan Fund. Fortunately, a good woman, Mrs. Mary E. Jenkins, of Bowling Green, Miss., has given $500 to our Board which goes into the Loan Fund. We hereby express our appreciation of her generosity and pray that her example may stimulate others to do likewise.

III. SAVINGS FUND DEPARTMENT.

In many instances our people have begun the collection of funds looking to the erection of a Church in the future and these funds have been used to meet some emergency, and thus are misdirected. Sometimes they are lost, and the Church is not built. Our General Board agrees to pay four per cent for the use of such funds, thus preserving and increasing them, for any community or society that may desire to place their funds with the Board. Our brethren are urged to take advantage of this department.

IV. SUNDAY SCHOOL BIRTHDAY OFFERING.

In order to meet the pressing needs of our work in Oklahoma, our Sunday Schools have been requested to establish a "Birthday Offering Fund." Only two of our Sunday Schools have secured jars for this purpose. Every child in our great Sunday School army would be glad to give an offering at least once during the year to this Fund, and your Board earnestly requests the brethren to send Dr. W. F. McMurry an order for jars and help in this important work.

V. DISTRICT ORGANIZATION.

The attention of the presiding elders is specially called to the matter of district organization. Paragraph 3[illegible]8 of the Discipline gives adequate instruction on this subject. Such organization will mean instruction, wise planning and general awakening of interest in our work. We, therefore, urge all our District Conferences to give [illegible] matter serious attention.

VI. [illegible]

During the [illegible] have had [illegible] The [illegible] of [illegible] half of which [illegible] are [illegible].

VII. RECOMMENDATIONS.

It is our most earnest wish that every Church building be insured against storm and fire. The Board announces the rule that all those churches that receive its aid shall be insured [illegible]. A few [illegible] thus invested would enable a community to build a new house should the old one be destroyed.

Your Board received an application from the U. D. C. Association asking for a donation to build a chapel at Beauvoir for the old soldiers. We have no authority to grant the request, but we recommend that our pastors take a collection for this purpose during the year.

ONLY A CENT.

Uncle Harris was a carpenter, and had a shop in the country. One day he went into the barn where Dick and Joe were playing with two tame pigeons.

"Boys," he said, "my workshop ought to be swept up every evening. Which of you will undertake to do it? I am willing to pay a cent for each sweeping."

"Only a cent?" said Dick. "Who would work for a cent?"

"I will," said Joe.

So every day, when Uncle Harris was done working in the shop, Joe would take an old broom and sweep it.

One day Uncle Harris took Dick and Joe to town. While he went to buy some lumber, they went to a toy store.

"What fine kites!" said Dick. "I wish that I could buy one."

"Only ten cents," said the man.

"I haven't a cent," said Dick.

"I have fifty cents," said Joe.

"How did you get fifty cents?" asked Dick.

"By sweeping the shop," answered Joe.—Sunday Afternoon.

BRIEF STUDIES IN GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION.

No. 3.

CHRISTIAN PERFECTION.

Scriptures: "Put on the new man, which after the image of God is created in righteousness and true holiness." (Eph. iv. 24.) "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. iii. 13-14.) "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." (Eph. iv. 13.)

"The perfecting of the saints" is an eminently Scriptural sentiment, and, moreover, it is a deeply-felt duty incumbent on every faithful, obedient child of God. His inward desire is to attain unto "a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Nothing short of this will ever satisfy the longing of a [illegible] power of the Redeemer. An apprentice [illegible] entered upon his course of training [illegible] ing a master workman, not more [illegible] to advance in skillful workmanship. The death angel visited the home of Brother James and Sister Ada Montgomery on the 12th day of November to claim the spirit of a precious little daughter, LILLIE, who was born in the parsonage at Port Vincent on the 14th day of April, 1903, while Brother Montgomery was serving that work. Her few years of sunshine was shed around Pine Grove, La., and where a ray of it fell there seemed to be joy; but the little bud was not permitted to mature into the full-blown rose; yet he who said "suffer little children to come unto me" is still calling and peopling heaven with those little ones. Then let us weep not as those who have no hope, for we will meet her again over on the other shore. J. S. RUTLEDGE.

Sister ELIZABETH QUINN, wife of J. A. Quinn, was born on the 19th day of September, 1855, and passed into the eternal rest that remaineth to the people of God on the 13th day of November, 1908. Sister Quinn was a devout Christian lady, who entered upon her religious duties in early life, joining the M. E. Church, South, and complying with its rules all along. She was a kind and devoted wife, loving and dutiful mother, and was the light and center of all that make home happy, and the home, indeed, on earth, which she delighted to have her friends and neighbors visit and bask in the sunshine of joy on earth. In her departure she leaves a husband, six children and a host of friends; but she meets five children who preceded her to the glory land.

J. S. RUTLEDGE.

At Mentorum, Miss., Nov. 27, 1908, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Miles and claimed the spirit of their infant and only child, GRIFFIN EUGENE. He was born Oct. 15, 1906, and died Nov. 27, 1908—a short while on earth, but long enough for all to love and cherish. It seems so hard to give him up; he was so sweet and loving; but we know that the good Lord knows best, and he now is in his dear Savior's arms, where there is no more sorrow, sickness, pain [illegible] death. But, oh, how we do miss him; his little voice is hushed forever here on earth, but we know he is singing around the great white throne. So, weep not, dear papa and mamma, for you cannot bring him back; but let us try and live so we will meet him in the sweet by and by. HIS GRANDMA.

MARTHA J. ALEXANDER, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Hodges, was born in middle Tennessee, north east of Nashville, Jan. 5, 1823, and died at her home in Sardis, Miss., on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 26, 1908. She professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the fall of 1843. She was married to W. H. Alexander April 28, 1842. To this union were born four children; three still survive, a son in Texas and two daughters in Sardis. Sister Alexander was in her 86th year. She and Brother Alexander had lived together quite sixty-six years. Theirs has been a long and happy voyage through life. She had been an invalid for more than a year. Still she never for a moment complained of her lot. Her life seemed to go out slowly and peacefully; but thoroughly religious, she often expressed her devotion to God by justifying the providences of God. Her whole life was full of good deeds; her home has been the resting place of many a tired preacher, with a welcome that made God's ministers feel much at home. Brother Alexander is quite active for a man of his age. He is more than 88 years old, and the man who named Sardis. He will be lonely now, but will not be separated from Sister Alexander many years. May the Lord bless and comfort him and the dear children and grandchildren, and may they all meet in heaven. W. M. YOUNG.

CALLIE MAE COLIER, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Colier, was born in Bellevue, La., July 22, 1892, and died in Stockdale, Tex., Oct. 22, 1908. Her father, an itinerant Methodist preacher, transferred to the West Texas Conference in 1889, and in March of that year, Callie Mae united with the Church. Her life was one of unusual devotion to the Church and its institutions, and so gentle was she, and so lovely in her person and character, that many said that she seemed to belong to another world. Though but a child, her chief interest centered in the work of Missions. She was an active worker in the Missionary Society, and had planned to devote her life to that work. In September, 1897, she entered the Junior Class in Coronal Institute, and, in competition with many earnest and bright students, she stood first in her class, and was awarded a scholarship for her Senior year. Not only was she a thorough and conscientious student, but by her beautiful Christian life, and by the charm of her winning personality, she won the confidence and affection of teachers and students. In September, 1908, she returned to Coronal to resume her studies. She had suffered a protracted spell of fever late in the summer, and her strength had not returned, but so eager was she to begin the year with her classes that she overruled the protests of her parents and entered joyfully upon her studies. Upon her return to school, she was elected President of the Young Woman's Christian Association, and her interest in her studies was equaled by her zeal to make that organization a blessing to the girls who were Christians, and a means of bringing the unsaved to Christ. Her work proved too much for her small strength, and within ten days after the opening of school she was again stricken with fever. She regarded the attack as only a temporary indisposition, and it was a sore trial to her when the doctor advised that she be taken home. She submitted, however, with sweet cheerfulness, and during all her illness, in spite of her intense suffering, she never complained. All her thoughts during her illness were of her loved ones, and of her teachers and fellow-students, whom she loved as she loved her own. She daily called for her sister to sing the songs that she loved, and for her father and mother to pray, and her sweet voice joined in the songs and prayers to the end. As the end drew near, she exclaimed repeatedly, "I am so happy! I am so happy!" In the evening of the last day, when her mother wanted her to sleep, she insisted on having prayer first, and after her mother had prayed she repeated the prayer of her childhood, "Now I lay me down to sleep," etc. She then went to sleep, to awake in heaven. She was ready for heaven, and so it was happier far for her to depart and to be with Christ. Our grief is for the loss from earth of her beautiful life with its gentle influences. But even these are not lost. She still lives in the hearts of those who knew and loved her. Her parents and her sister possess still the joy which she gave to her home, and among the students of Coronal Institute there will long be cherished the memory of the beautiful girl, who lived among them a blameless Christian life, and who went from their company to the company of the angels.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Brookhaven, Miss.

Number of students to date, 222; six states represented. We have only a few vacancies in the boarding department. Let parties interested write to Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.

"If parents are looking for a good home school, where every protection and safeguard is thrown about their daughters, they can find such a one in Whitworth College. It gives me pleasure to bear testimony to the high class of work done by this institution. Many of her graduates have come to us as teachers, and wherever a Whitworth College girl is found an atmosphere of culture and refinement prevails."—Claude Bennett, County Superintendent of Education.

A patron of the school writes: "The religious training that my daughter received at Whitworth College has benefited her greatly. Her influence for good in this community is great." Such words constitute the endowment of Whitworth College.

PARIS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Our people here at Paris seem to be delighted with our return to them. We shall try to make this the most profitable year of our ministry. While we had a good year last year, we want to do more for our Master this year. We expect to look carefully after everything pertaining to our work, but especially do we expect to look after the interest of the "Advocate." We send you a list of post offices in the bounds of our work, asking you to furnish us with the names of subscribers at each post office. Then we will look after renewals, as well as new subscribers.

We earnestly desire your prayers, that the Lord may use us in the salvation of many souls during the year. You certainly have our prayers, and our support in your excellent work.

TOPIC FOR DEC. 27.

"The Song of the New Kingdom." Isa. xxv, 9; Luke ii, 14. (Christmas.)

When the babe was born in Bethlehem there came among men the greatest person that has ever visited earth. He was the Son of God, and it is small wonder that the angelic choirs broke their bounds and astonished the ears of men. But the theme of our study is to be especially the song of the angels—the new song—that has been ringing in the ears of men ever since: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will toward men."

1. Glory to God:

The angels saw the goodness and glory of God in his gift to men in such measure as we do not even yet. The wisdom of the ages was in the sending of his Son. The method of redemption was such as to set forth the glory of God. When the Christ was among men he revealed the glory of God as men had never seen it before. To-day men are coming to realize the majesty and holiness of God and to praise him in all the ends of the earth. The time is coming when the knowledge of the glory of God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. That time shall come through the extension of the kingdom of Christ, and the revelation that he has made of the Father to men.

2. Peace:

The Master brought the first great essential of peace: a spirit of mercy and a willingness to forgive. He brought tidings and conditions of mercy to men, and made a very condition of the mercy that men should forgive their fellow men. Sometimes it seems as if all nature was at war. And the heart of man seems to delight in war, but the kingdom of Christ is to bring peace without and within. To-day men are beginning to believe possible that the time shall come when wars and fightings shall cease among men. If that time comes it will be the outcome of Christ's kingdom. Looking into the eyes of troubled men, the Master said, "My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." The peace of God, which passeth all understanding is to keep your hearts and minds safe in Christ Jesus; it is to enfold the whole world in its soft embrace.

3. Good will towards men:

The gift of the Son is in itself the supreme expression of the good will that has ever abided in the heart of God for his creatures. The heathen world is filled with the terrors of the unseen, malignant spirits, that are supposed to be lurking on every side, and waiting but the opportunity to do men harm. The fear and despair of the world without God is hard for men raised under the influences of Christianity to realize. Even the old Jewish conception seemed to feel that God was very kind to his chosen people, but that he was bitter towards all the rest of the earth. It was only in Christ that men gained any real conception of the good will felt by the Father for all his creatures. Men may refuse the gifts of God, or put themselves beyond his good will, but that is their fault and not his.

4. The Christmastide:

At no season of the year is the fullness of the meaning of the angels' song realized quite so well as at Christmas. When its gifts are not simply a yielding to custom, but the real expression of the good will that should dwell in your hearts for one another, then is the Christ most honored and his birthday best kept. The spirit of the Master should find its expression at this time in loving service and kindly gifts to some one. Around this day has gathered many beautiful customs, and many childish traditions. When the thought of the Master is kept uppermost there is no harm in any of them, and may be much of good. The spirit of Christmas found its first expression in the life of a child, the incarnate God. It finds its best expression to-day in the heart of a child. When the childlike spirit rules our giving, and controls our festivities we shall most glorify him whose we are, whom we serve, and in whom we delight.

HUSBAND INSISTED

Some ladies allow a simple little trouble to grow into a big one, just for lack of the right medicine.

Too much trouble; too much expense; don't know what medicine to take.

All excuses; and poor ones, too.

Such ladies need some one, with their own best interests at heart, who will see to it that they begin to take Cardui at once.

Now, Mrs. Rena Hare, of Pierce, Fla., luckily for her, had a husband, who, she says, "insisted on my taking Cardui."

In describing her plight, she uses these words: "I was a sufferer from severe female trouble. I had pains in my side, drawing pains in legs, fainty spells, could not sleep. In fact, it was a general break-down. I found no relief till I took Cardui, when the first bottle helped me and now I am almost well."

Your druggist will gladly sell you a bottle of Cardui, with full directions for use.

It is purely vegetable, non-intoxicating, and reliable remedy, for all women, young and old, who suffer from any of the common female troubles. Try Cardui.

LESSON FOR DEC. 27, 1908.

REVIEW.

Prov. iv.

Golden Text: "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."—Proverbs iv. 23.

Together with a review of the lessons of the last quarter of the year, we are busy with other thoughts that the closing year causes to arise in our minds. Life is like a journey on which every one is a traveler. The year's end is the mile-stone that marks our progress. In youth the face of the traveler is turned to the future; the mile-stones he has passed have all been garlanded with roses and surrounded with pleasing prospects, but in the pursuit of happiness the pleasant memories of the past have little place. Not so with him who goes forward leaning upon his staff, halting upon the shrunken thigh of many a hard-fought battle; his face is often turned backward, and happy is he if he can exclaim with the apostle of Tarsus: "I have fought a good fight: I have kept the faith."

The last three months of our studies have been the means of bringing us into something like companionship with a prophet and three kings. Saul, long since passed to the judgment bar of a just God, is exalted in that he was Jonathan's father, and also that he was instrumental in revealing the tenderness and mercy of David's character. David was a great king of a great people, a warrior more bold than any Joab or Abner; but not for that is his name known wherever the gospel of Christ is preached; it is rather that under the rough exterior of the soldier was the man after God's own heart. His whole life was full of events that demanded close counsel with the best fighting men of the nation. It was not until the more mature years came that he found seasons of calm and quiet, with the gentle Nathan as his companion and spiritual adviser. After his enemies had been conquered in many a conflict, and the blessing of peace came as the calm after a storm, then he turned with his whole heart and soul to establishing the worship of God as a part of the nation's life. As a leader, he went to fetch the ark of God, throwing all his personal zeal and energy in the movement, thus inspiring the people. Even in so commendable a matter mistakes will creep in. On this expedition poor Uzzah lost his life from the want of observance of the law, in that the sons of Levi should have been near the ark to care for it. Uzzah's death was a public reprimand to the king and to the people.

After that, when they went again after the ark, to the house of Obed-Edom, the proper servants of the sanctuary were in their proper place, and all things fared well.

Speaking of the breach upon Uzzah, the Scripture says: "And David was afraid of the Lord that day." There are times in the life of the child of God when he stands aghast at some mysterious providence of God, and trembling with fear, he totters to the place of prayer, where, with closed doors, he can pour out his soul in a "Thy will be done" prayer.

At last, there came a day when the ark of God was brought to its proper place; it was a triumphant procession; the king went before, and he was so filled with joy and gladness and zeal for the cause of religion that as he marched along he "danced before the Lord with all his might." His whole heart and soul was aglow with the desire to please and do service to the God of Israel. His intense enthusiasm must have been admired and imitated by all who loved the Lord and his people. There was one, however, that did not seem to approve of the acts of the king, and that was no less a person than the king's wife — the very one that should have given support and encouragement. It is a sad home, no home at all, where a man is not encouraged in every way in his efforts to lead a religious life. St. Paul must have had some such picture before his mind's eye when he wrote: "For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband?"

Saul's daughter not only disapproved, but spoke in withering scorn and ridicule to David, after the close of the ceremonies of the day. Let us remember she was Saul's daughter.

It is said of the great John Wesley that he was practicing alone in his work, as far as home encouragement went. We also learn that at a time of most sacred and miraculous moment, the Son of God was laughed to scorn by those he had selected to be nearest to him.

There was not much in David's life to give him peace and comfort—that is, in his life as the world saw it. So as he had tried his best to do his duty in worldly matters, his inner, spiritual life was equally as whole-souled. In his writings he has given to the world his testimony concerning the truth, that the immortal soul cannot be satisfied with anything that the world can give, but must continually feed on "the living bread that came down from heaven." Whatever the world may say of David's character, the people of God, of all times, have accepted him as designated by the scripture: "A man after God's own heart," in that in David's life there is nothing more nor less than is found in every sinning mortal that has been saved by the grace of God, "whose mercy endureth forever." In the last days of the shepherd king parental affliction and tender solicitude took full possession of his thoughts; and he died in full faith in a covenant-keeping God.

In Solomon's life there is reflected much of his father's nobility of character, and on that foundation God placed the blessing of a wisdom never equaled by mortal man. One of the brightest pages in the history of this wise king was the tender love he bore for his mother—a love that was shown in acts of gallantry unsurpassed in highest ideals of knighthood. There are many shortcomings in man that can be forgiven when strong material affliction has a fervid place in his heart.

In answer to Solomon's prayer, God gave him that for which he had prayed, and because the request pleased the Giver of every good and perfect gift there were added more than was asked for. It is so with our Father in heaven; when we live and pray according to his will, he will give us more than we could ask or even think of.

It is well that our year's studies are completed with such lessons as are taught from Saul as to neglect of opportunity and privilege; from David as to God's readiness to pardon when there is sincere repentance; from Solomon as to the certainty of punishment for disobedience. The pathway of the Christian pilgrim is dark enough at best, but God has provided "a light for the path and a lamp for the feet," and an example to follow in the life of his only begotten Son. He must be well known to follow aright, and "to know him is life eternal."

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Board of Stewards of the M. E. Church, South, at Kentwood, La.

Whereas Brother R. W. Tucker has served his fourth year as presiding elder of this (Baton Rouge) District, and under the rule of our church he cannot be returned; and whereas this is the last business meeting of the Board of Stewards for this Conference year; be it Resolved:

First—It is with deep regret that we have to give him up as our beloved presiding elder.

Second—That we wish to assure him that our prayers and best wishes go with him wherever he may be sent, and that his faithful efforts may be productive of great good to the people whom he may serve.

Third—That we commend Brother Tucker to the people wherever he goes as a faithful, fearless and highly efficient man of God; and if it were possible we would ask for his return.

R. C. ROOT, Sec'y.,
For the Board of Stewards.

RIPLEY AND MAYHEW.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We had a good year at Ripley, Miss. We leave our church property all in good condition. The "collections" were almost spontaneous and very little trouble to secure. There were 32 additions to the church.

I go cheerfully to Mayhew and Artesia, of the Columbus (Miss.) District, and am assured by those who know that it is "one of the very nicest charges in North Mississippi." It is located on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, and in a best section of the State.

Rev. Ben P. Jaco was O. K. as presiding elder at Ripley.

The Water Valley Conference was, as you know, splendid above ordinary—5000 conversions, a good presiding Bishop, choice entertainment and the newest and most elegant of the Conference churches, with the presence and favor of the Highest, were amply sufficient to make a convention of more than the usual interest.

The magnificent and convenient church speaks for the people of Water Valley, and proclaims also the fact that Rev. W. W. Woollard fills eminently the purposes of the ministry, and accomplished successfully the design of his appointment to the Water Valley congregation.

Bishop Morrison was up to his usual high water-mark in the pulpit, and the great audience was immensely edified.

Good reports came from the other churches of the town, where the Word of Life was dispensed effectively by visiting ministers and men of the Conference.

A final petition by Dr. J. W. Boswell, of the "New Orleans Christian Advocate," invoked God's best blessings upon the delegation and churches, and the benediction by the Bishop finished the occasion.

Special railroad service was provided, and very soon great numbers had departed, and by the next train north the whole company had disappeared.

Revs. E. A. Tabor, of Arkansas, and W. D. Mathews, of Oklahoma, were interesting visitors, and distinguished connectionals were represented by Drs. Hammond and McMurry and others.

"DAILY BREAD."

By O. P. Fitzgerald.

Full leather binding. $1 net.

This beautifully gotten up little book, Bishop Fitzgerald's latest contribution, is truly full of "gold nuggets"—yes, pure gold. It contains a helpful word for every hungry soul. Piece by piece the author offers "daily bread" of practical, satisfying value to all who will read. Rarely do we find such wisdom so delicately meted out. In short, terse paragraphs under different heads we are enlightened as to what to do to be pleasing to the Lord, whose blessing follows the willing, prayerful worker. The author shows how the Holy Spirit will help the believer to whom the love of Christ is a blessed certainty. Restitution is an indispensable element in genuine repentance, and the consciousness of the love of God in our hearts a sure cure for despondency. Then follow helpful ideas as to Christian friendships, the result of idle words, influnce of Christianity on sickness and poverty, thanksgiving better than criticism, and so forth. The words in this small volume are the result of many years of experience and observation by one whose judgment on right living and right thinking cannot be surpassed.

LAUREL, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I send you a short report of my work from Fifth Avenue and Kingston Charge.

I rejoice in the success of the work of the good people of this charge in the last two years.

I am sure my brethren that have preceded me in this work have all wrought well, but this is comparatively a new charge, and when I came to it two years ago I found it in a very undeveloped condition. Since I came here we have added four rooms to the parsonage, including bathroom, with electric lights and water throughout the building. We have finished paying for a beautiful pulpit and pews placed in Fifth Avenue Church by Brother J. S. Parker just before leaving this work. Assisted by the good women of Kingston, we have had the windows in that church made entirely new, and they are beautiful. We have painted both of the churches on the inside pure white, with the trimmings in the Kingston Church oak, and in the Fifth Avenue mahogany.

Our ladies of the Fifth Avenue Church have just finished laying a beautiful two-tone, dark-red carpet, and they have also put in a nice, late-style chancel and choir-box. With the pure white walls, mahogany furniture and rich, dark-red carpet, this little church is a gem of beauty.

There was an old debt on the churches of about $300 that has been liquidated in the last few days. We have raised in all, for church and parsonage improvements, in these two years about $1500.

Two years ago our Sunday Schools were small and supported by the Sunday School Board, but now they are not only self-supporting, but are doing fine work for Foreign Missions. The classes are large, thoroughly graded, and well organized, and furnished with all the late literature, maps, charts, etc., used for Sunday School work. One class of girls in the Fifth Avenue Sunday School has been organized into a Missionary Society, and they have raised $10 for Foreign Missions this year. We also have a large supernumerary class, which, of course, is composed of the parents of the children.

Our Bible Study Circle is well attended and a great deal of interest is manifested.

We have a flourishing Epworth League of enthusiastic young people.

Our Conference collections are all in full, and the pastor's salary amounted to $1000 this year. We have received more than 100 members.

The entire charge has developed so that it has become a necessity to place a pastor at each church for another year, and unless this is done Methodism will suffer in Laurel.

Last, but not least, Doctor, Mr. Philip S. Gardiner said that no other preacher should go up to Conference better dressed than me. So, out of his good, generous heart, he presented me with a $55 suit. Do you think and of the preachers can come up to that? May God's richest blessings follow this noble man. He is only walking in the footsteps of his now-sainted father. One of the last charitable acts of his life was to write me a check for $100 on the improvements we have made here. Yours for the work,

R. F. WITT.

√ REV. R. M. BLOCKER.

When supplying the Minden Circuit in 1893, Brother R. M. Blocker helped me in the first revival in my pastoral career at Old Athens, and later he helped me at Texas Avenue in Shreveport; and from my first acquaintance with him he proved to be brotherly and sympathetic to a marked degree, and a splendid preacher and pastor's helper in a revival. I find the same marks following his life as a former pastor of the Many Circuit. My love for him was at first sight, while he was nursing my weakness and ignorance as only he could do at that (my first) revival meeting, and that love has never wavered from that day to this. The best understanding I have ever had of Christ's "groaning in Spirit" was when, under the circumstances attending, it was announced that Brother Blocker was no longer a member of our Conference and our Church.

Sister Blocker, who was before her marriage Miss Louise Webster, of our Second Church, New Orleans, has since my pastorate there been my friend; also I wish to give these few lines quoted from a recent letter of hers, for the comfort of Brother Blocker's friends throughout the bounds of the Louisiana Conference:

"For a long time our 'papa' has been sick, going from one trouble into another, from blood poison into grip and heart trouble; then the fatal disease of consumption of the kidneys (something not dreamed of at all) took hold and completely destroyed his strength and life. He suffered untold agonies. His faith in God increased all the time; his hope of heaven brighter. His weary, tired body was rested with prayer and meditation. Praying aloud, as well as silent prayer, was sweet to him. It was thus he called for help: 'O, thou Great One! Great God Almighty! Blessed Savior! Dear Jesus! Heavenly Father! Blessed Lord! Great Jehovah!' when suffering or so very tired. His life is so sweet to look on, he never bemeaned anyone; was kind and gentle in spirit, and when misrepresented would say: 'It's all right, dear; God knows my heart.' He would shake hands and pass a pleasant word with those who gave him trouble or spoke ill of him. He was very forgiving, never holding anything against another. He would say 'forgive, dear wife; our Master suffered wrongs—are we better than He?' While very limited always in funds or finances, we were very happy. We just simply lived for each other, brightening each other's life all the time. My plan was to help, to love, to speak tender words of trust and sympathy and confidence, in all, seven years and eight months of our married life. His home was a bright spot, the brightest on earth, and my love the dearest treasure he possessed. Some little while before he left us, while talking to God, I caught this sentence: 'Dear Jesus, how I long to be there.' It seemed as though my heart would break, but I smothered my sobs, and never did I disturb his quiet, even when he was passing into that 'bright world,' away from me. I buried my face in his pillow and bore my sorrow in silence, as best I could, that nothing disturb his peace. My little ones, Oliver 5 1-2 years; Walter, 4 years, and Webster, 2 years, are all this world has for me; some debts to be paid, and my health not good. I am caring for mamma; she has made her home with me for some time, and dearly loved Mr. Blocker. I will remain in Ruston, where Mr. Blocker was laid to rest. He liked this town very much. You know, he traveled and tuned pianos for a living, and many times he would have to get a bed for a whole day to rest, as his body was unable to stand the strain. This has been his life for sometime, and finally he totally collapsed and could go from home no more."

Though Mobile, as heralded abroad, has threatened to secede from Alabama for the privilege of selling liquor, through the idealistic flight of fancy of some fertile brain, whilst possibly under the witching influence of the "dreamy bowl," we all know from the inexorable brutality of facts, "talk is cheap, but it takes money to buy whisky." And though, too, our Governor, Mr. B. B. Comer, is on record proffering to forcibly discharge his duties in the premises, if the emergency should demand it, if there are similar infractions of the law as with the "nine o'clock closing" enactment in Mobile, and though, in view of all this, a Law and Order League is here being perfected to aid—"in time of peace prepare for war"—if necessary in welcoming prohibition and furthering civic righteousness, we venture to hope there will be no flagrant violations hereaway of the statute relegating rum to the lowest shore of hades itself, where it belongs, and where even the demons will draw aside their reeking garments lest they, too, become polluted by its infectious touch.

Were it necessary, I might ask the pardon of some in saying "undisputed things in such a solemn way." And to those whom I unintentionally wound, let me say there is hope where there is life—the star of hope should never set.

THE NEED OF A GENERAL REVIVAL OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By Pres. J. W. Beeson.

As a nation, we have passed through a period of unexampled material prosperity. There has been developed in the course of it a national tendency to accept loose standards in moral, business, social and political relations. The respect for law has been weakened rather than strengthened. This has become the most lawless civilized nation on the globe. Murder and mob law are rife and rampant in our land; greed for gain has engendered graft in high places and in low until the politicians and corruptionists themselves are revolting at the excessive corruption and crime. The good people of our nation are becoming alarmed at the high-handed wickedness and oppression wrought by trusts, corporations and unions of all sorts in their combinations for rascality and fraud.

Thinking people are looking about for some leader to start a moral wave that will regenerate and cleanse the augean stable of corruption that is cursing this fair land of ours. It is clear that we need pure and honorable, conscientious Christian leaders. If it is true (and it is true) that our colleges and universities are to furnish to the nation leaders with these qualities, these institutions themselves must be manned with faculties and officers who are themselves patterned after the Christ of the Bible. If there be started a mighty wave of reform that will, indeed, correct the evils and purify the sinful tendencies of the age, it must be more than a surface wave. It must begin at the bottom. It must begin at the very foundation of a nation's life, which is the educational system.

We must have trained characters, as well as trained minds. As long as cheating in the classroom is looked upon with less reproach than cheating in the counting-room, we will still rear a race of men and women dishonest in the business world. So long as betting on a ball game or oratorical contest or raffling off a cake or a watch is less disgraceful than betting on a horse race, we will still have a race of gamblers in wheat, cotton, stocks and bonds, yea and in elections as well.

One code of morals for the college and another for the street breeds duplicity. Most of the evils of college students are hidden behind what is called the "college spirit." They are carried on by custom; the standards are lowered by usage. There is an idea abroad that whatever college boys do is all right; at least, it is not very wrong. A sympathetic, sentimental world has an excusing mind for them. Cheating is considered smart. Lying is quite an accomplishment when it is well and artfully done. [illegible] the opposite side in an intelligent [illegible] is considered [illegible] wonder that we are [illegible] take advantage of the [illegible] they have the opportunity [illegible] should take advan[illegible] press labor [illegible] ital when [illegible]. There is scarcely a [illegible] among the American people [illegible] in the home [illegible] must [illegible] horrible deeds in [illegible] sins is condoned on the [illegible] or with the explanation that boys will be boys, they must have their fling, etc. we will still have the national sins on an enlarged scale.

It has come down to us from other days that a college man has a different standard from other men, and is judged and governed in a different way. But they are to be citizens and are to be trained for that, and since college [illegible] to be the leaders in the business, the political, the social and the religious world, they must be judged by a higher standard than the world, rather than by a lower standard.

Young men are neither boys nor men, but are "men in the making." Therefore the schools should not abdicate the government of the school or setting the standards to the students. The management of the school and college are the responsible parties, and must hold the reins of government. One trouble with "free America" is its too great freedom and "young America" has taken advantage of it. The children control in the homes and the students control in the schools. Student government is one of the modern fads of the schools. Child government is the [illegible] of the home. This is [illegible] England, Germany and [illegible] government [illegible] American schools must [illegible] of government. They [illegible] governed [illegible] have been gradually [illegible] that the teachers [illegible] school are not right and [illegible] others aright. Philip [illegible] a son to carry on his work [illegible] for giving him [illegible] such a teacher as Aristotle. Emerson says: "How can I hear what you say when what you are is continually thundering in my ears." [illegible] teacher [illegible] was not in great academic training, but in [illegible] under the students [illegible] lifting [illegible]. That is the great need of American [illegible] devout Christian men and women as teachers, that we may have a general revival of Christian education. We hear much [illegible] national leaders about wasting the nation's [illegible]. They speak of the waste [illegible] of minerals, and of soils, [illegible]. They advocate the [illegible] of our waterways and the reclaiming of [illegible] America is wasting its human possibilities much faster than its natural resources. The great need before our nation [illegible] is to train the rising generation [illegible] forth by the Man of Galilee. To do this our schools must be Christianized. The Bible [illegible] has been crowded out of the public schools and state institutions must be put back and made the leading textbook. Men and women filled with the spirit of the Master must be the teachers. The colleges that were once religious, [illegible] denominational schools must again have Christ enthroned [illegible] Teacher. The college [illegible] spiritual power and [illegible] established to do the work of the Master. [illegible] spiritual schools have begun this [illegible] work. They are [illegible] of fire sent down from [illegible] that [illegible] will spread throughout the world till it reaches the shores of eternity. Already they are sending out teachers of public schools, of art, of music, of expression, etc., as well as professors and presidents of colleges. Already the demand is far greater than the supply. They will hardly let enough remain to the senior year to make a respectable sized graduation class, so great is the need for such teachers. Already this revival of Christian education has begun. It is to be the leaven that shall leaven the whole lump." This is the cure for our nation's ills; yea, it is for the healing of all nations.

AFTER CONFERENCE.

By Rev. J. W. Sandell.

Mr. Editor: The three patronizing Conferences have had their annual gatherings and the preachers know their fields of labor for another year. Those of us who were so unfortunate as not to be able to attend the Conferences have missed a great occasion for social, intellectual and spiritual enjoyment. We have depended mainly on the correspondents of the New Orleans secular newspapers for information concerning the proceedings of the Conferences. In that way we learn that only five of the twenty-one superannuated preachers of the Mississippi Conference were present at the first roll-call. Others might have arrived later on, as this writer hoped to do. After long experience in the itinerancy the meeting of the Annual Conference is an important thing with all who have that experience. There are two principal causes of their absence at the roll-call: physical inability and scarcity of means for travelling. It is probable that one or the other of these causes accounts for the absence of so many of the superannuates of the Mississippi Conference this year.

Another item I noticed in the newspapers is the collection taken to furnish the Quarterly Review to this class of preachers in the Mississippi Conference.

Those who have been accustomed to reading the Review will appreciate this praiseworthy contribution. It would be in harmony with this action of the Conference for the great publishing interest of the M. E. Church, South, to send to the family of widows and orphans, who are Conference claimants, our connectional organ, the Nashville Christian Advocate. Is this too much for a great Church? The Mississippi Conference has increased the number of districts by forming a new one of parts of the others, and Bishop Morrison has given us five new presiding elders.

Turning to the correspondence from the Louisiana Conference a large class of applicants for admission on trial suggested the idea of dividing some of the circuits to make room for them. In reply to the Bishop's idea, a voice said, "Divide the circuits and take them all in." I like that spirit. This is work for all, and room should be made for the best work. There are many inquirers just after Conference about the preachers and their appointments. I have not seen a preacher who attended one of the Conferences.

BOARD OF MISSIONS—No. 2.

To the Members of the Mississippi [illegible]

[illegible] We, your Board of Missions, [illegible] leave to submit this our Report [illegible] profoundly grateful to God [illegible] missionary interests. While the assessments have not been paid in full, yet we have been able to pay those serving missions the full amount appropriated to them.

We have raised an assessment this year for Foreign Missions of $12,[illegible], and for Domestic Missions $9,944.61.

Our collections this year for both Foreign and Domestic Missions amount to $[illegible] besides $655.00 for specials, which has been raised [illegible] Missionary Evangelist.

We feel that the cause of missions in our Conference has been specially stimulated [illegible] earnest efforts of Brother H. M. Ellis, who has been faithful in his work as Evangelist.

We note in his report to our Board that sixteen young ladies have volunteered themselves for missionary work.

The General Board of Missions last year received $545,523.00. The amount raised by the women [illegible] added to this makes our [illegible] $[illegible]716.00—our own Conference having raised $[illegible]. In addition to this several of our Sunday schools and churches, as well as individuals, have undertaken the support of missionaries.

Your Board is made to rejoice in the fact that there is a quickened missionary spirit among our people.

We have been delighted to have with us Dr. W. W. Pinson, one of the secretaries of the General Board, and Dr. John R. Nelson, the secretary of the Home Department.

They brought us messages of encouragement concerning the great cause which they represent. Dr. Nelson gave us information and we trust missionary enthusiasm, concerning the Home Department of missionary work, calling special attention to the foreign element with which our country is rapidly filling.

We recommend the Missionary Library Study Courses, supplied by the Young People's Department. Here we can get valuable books at less than their usual cost, and thus receive information which is so necessary for the largest service in our Lord's great cause.

We call attention of our pastors to the abundance of missionary literature in the form of tracts, etc., which may be had, without cost, on application to the Publishing House through our missionary secretaries at Nashville. We also call special attention of our pastors to "Go Forward." This valuable paper should be in every home in our Church. It comes with bright sparkling news from the field, thrills and inspires a missionary zeal which cannot be found so quickly in any other literature of the Church.

We rejoice with our Church in the marvelous progress of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. These brethren have thrown out the challenge to the Church to increase her contributions to missions this year to $1,000,0000. This means an increase of $234,000 over our contributions of last year. We rejoice that the laymen of our own Conference have perfected their organization by electing such officers as may be necessary for the largest success of their work. They have accepted $3,88[illegible] as their part of the $234,000, which is to be raised by March 31, 1909. They propose an active campaign in behalf of this great movement of our Church. Surely, God is leading the hosts of Israel as never before. His spirit is moving upon the hearts of the laymen of the Church for the greatest work of all the past. May God lead this mighty host from conquest to victory, so that there will be the proclamation of the gospel to the entire world in this generation.

A great advance in the missionary work has been made by the establishment of a Joint Commission representing the Board of Missions, Church Extension and the Womans' Home Mission society, whose policy is to open port missions along our Gulf Coast, providing religious advantages for the seamen, factory operatives and the hundreds of foreigners who are pouring into these ports.

We are glad to learn that our Training School at [illegible] Nashville has [illegible] an established institution [illegible] our Church [illegible] missionary zeal is [illegible] Church.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: We, your Committee on the Laymen's Missionary Movement, beg leave to report as follows:

We believe that this movement was born in prayer and recognize [illegible] the direct hand of God is in its progress.

We [illegible] the deepest gratitude [illegible] leaders [illegible] within [illegible] of the Missionary Conferences have taken [illegible] this great movement [illegible] in its infancy.

Fourteen Good Reasons for Patronizing Grenada College

First—The unexcelled Home Comforts; unequaled [illegible] in the State.

Second—The Health conditions, we rarely require the services of a physician.

Third—Our unusually skilled [illegible] of teachers, whom we were able to secure only by paying a salary much above that paid by other girls' schools of the State.

Fourth—The Fine Arts Department, unequaled in the State and unexcelled in the South. Our teacher of Art studied in Germany and France and our teachers of Music are graduated from the best Conservatories of America.

Fifth—The [illegible] Course of Study, which is conscientiously carried out as indicated.

Sixth—The Lyceum Course, which is superior even to that obtained in the University of Mississippi.

Seventh—The Library, which is larger and better [illegible] than that of [illegible] schools of the South.

Eighth—A strong Christian Influence dominating all [illegible].

Ninth—Personal Attention to the Individual Pupil, with a view to develop the best even out of peculiarities of character.

Tenth—A superior Student Body as Associates, since most of the Indifferent have been eliminated.

Eleventh—The Rates are lower than those of any other school doing the same grade of work, owing to the Conference Assessment, which gives us an income not possessed by other schools; further, we have no stockholders to whom we are forced to pay dividends, as are some private schools. Our patrons receive back in excellence of service more than they pay in.

Twelfth—We place but two girls in a room, while most schools put from two to six.

Thirteenth—We require our teachers to continue study. Two are in Europe, two in Chicago, others at other schools in North and East.

Fourteenth—All these superior features enable us to turn out a larger percentage of graduates who take high stand in the educational world than any other school in the State. It means something to hold a diploma of the Grenada College.

Resolved, first. That we prayerfully pledge our [illegible] Annual Conference Leader, Judge A. G. Norrell, and Vice-Leader, Z. Z. Linton.

Resolved, second. That we endorse the expressed intent of our Conference Laymen's Committee to raise $6000 this year, $3,8[illegible] of which is the balance of our part of the $1,000,000 suggested at the Laymen's Missionary Conference at Chattanooga, and this amount at least is to be applied to the payment of the indebtedness on the home of which Dr. J. SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: We, your Committee on Sabbath Observance, beg leave to report as follows:

As a body of Christian ministers and laymen we are profoundly concerned for the honor and sanctity of the Christian Sabbath. We recognize its divine origin and authority, and the incalculable blessings that it has brought to the human race. The Sabbath was from the beginning a divine response to an inherent need of man's nature and an essential factor in his [illegible] development. Its restraining, quieting, uplifting influence was never so sorely needed as in this present rushing, rasping, [illegible] reckless age. Body, mind and soul cry out for a surcease from toil and for a season set apart for unbending and upbuilding.

It is with gratitude and favor, therefore, that we look upon every evidence of awakening interest in this behalf. We hail with joy the enactment in some quarters of our land of more adequate laws for Sabbath observance, and with yet greater pleasure the earnest and successful efforts in other [illegible] also an increasing appreciation of the spiritual import and value of the Christian Sabbath. [illegible] subject appeals strongly to the business and [illegible] ganized labor has hailed one of the commandments upon its time and strength in this regard and has joined with the church in raising remonstrance.

Much is being done likewise to impress upon the people the spiritual significance and worth of the Christian Sabbath. Among the agencies laboring to this end is the organization known as the Sunday League of America. Its object is to educate public sentiment, assisting pastors and good people generally in bringing Sunday work down to the minimum of mercy and necessity, checking Sunday amusements, and securing as quiet and thoughtful a day as possible. A communication from this Society, which was referred to this Committee, has been considered and in harmony with the action of our General Conference we cordially commend the Sunday League of America to the favor and co-operation of our ministers and members everywhere.

While devoutly thankful for these and other signs of activity and promise, we are not unmindful of the adverse forces at work nor of the crying needs of the situation. We are appalled as we contemplate the great and growing army of Sunday toilers in our land now four million strong. A large part of this labor is in plain violation of law and surely but a small fraction of it is in keeping with the modest claim of mercy and necessity.

We note also, with alarm the growing disposition to make of the Sabbath not a holy day, but a holiday. The question of Sunday amusements is one of increasing importance. With the steady influx of foreign blood and ideals the problem bids fair to become yet more complex and urgent. Sunday baseball, Sunday excursions, Sunday picnics and sporting trips and the like are already alluring many from the quiet home and from the sacred precincts of the house of God.

It behooves those who love the Lord and the Lord's Day, to cry aloud against these abuses and excesses. And in order to do so effectively we must see to it that our own skirts are clear. What we are and what we do may speak so loud that men cannot hear what we say. The preacher who goes for his Sunday mail and reads his Sunday paper, and boards his Sunday train, can, with poor grace and less power, exhort his people to observe the Christian Sabbath. Godly example and earnest, persistent effort on the part of the ministers and members of the Church of Christ are the factors which render the ultimate solution of this great problem easy and certain. Respectfully submitted,

JAS. N. WARE, Chairman.
E. W. LIPSCOMB, Secretary.

TEMPERANCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: We, your Committee on Temperance beg to submit the following report:

In viewing the temperance situation our hearts are warmed with profound gratitude to Almighty God for the momentum it has acquired and the extent to which this, one of the greatest movements of the age, has spread.

We note with gratification the several States that have already gone solidly for prohibition, among which is numbered our own beloved State.

We praise God and commend our Legislature for the statutory enactment at its sitting in February—that becomes effective Jan. 1, 1909, which rids our State of the open saloon and makes solicitation, for [illegible]

PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: We, your Committee [illegible] consider the Publishing Interests [illegible] specifically [illegible] the following [illegible] organizations.

First, we [illegible] of the Publishing House [illegible] as well as the increased volume of [illegible] the Branch House at Dallas. The [illegible] during the year have [illegible]

In this connection we heartily commend Rev. G. W. Bachman, [illegible] our territory and [illegible] call attention of our [illegible] the History of Methodism in Mississippi, by Rev. John G. Jones, [illegible] member of this Conference. The second volume is just from the press and contains information that we all should have. These two volumes should be in the library of every Methodist [illegible] the State and ought to be read by all of our members.

We are gratified [illegible] the Nashville Christian Advocate, the Epworth Era and the Quarterly Review have been [illegible] during the year. The circulation of the Review has considerably increased. Basing our opinion upon certain editorial utterances in the paper we do not regard the editor-in-chief of the Advocate as a safe man to be in charge of the General Organ of the Church.

We cannot speak in too high praise of the Epworth Era and we entreat our pastors to labor for its increased circulation and request them to encourage our young people to read it. The importance and excellence of the Review make it indispensable to the pastors. It is worthy of a place in every library throughout the land and could be profitably read by the entire membership of the Church.

We commend Go Forward as one of the best missionary periodicals published in the world and recommend that the pastors strive to put it into every Methodist home within the bounds of the Conference. Nothing will do more to stimulate missionary enthusiasm and cause our people to give of their means to send the Gospel to all the world.

As to our Sunday School Literature, we do not believe that it is surpassed by that of any other

We would make mention of The Quiet Hour as a helpful periodical to all devotional students of the Bible.

Our Conference Organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, merits our special attention and deserves our most cordial and loyal support. It is essential to our work and we should be untiring in our efforts to increase its circulation within our bounds. The pastors are hereby urged to [illegible] new subscribers to the paper and to induce, if possible, every old subscriber to renew. We commend the action of the Publishing Committee of the three patronizing Conferences in re-electing Dr. John W. Boswell to the editorial chair for another year. The paper is in safe hands and we can rest assured that it will continue to be the power for good that it has been during the years gone by. We recommend the reappointment of M. L. Burton, W. H. Lewis, and C. W. [illegible] as members of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate. Respectfully submitted,

EPWORTH LEAGUE BOARD.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: We are gratified to learn through the report of the General Secretary, Dr. H. M. Du Bose, that the Epworth League in its various departments is in a healthful condition and making steady progress towards the end for which it exists. This report shows that according to the General Minutes, the entire membership of the League is 127,924, an increase of 4,233 for the past year. Within our own Conference the statistics for the year just closing show a slight increase in the number of Senior and Junior Leagues and a slight decrease in the membership of both Senior and Junior Leagues.

The General Secretary instructs your Board that an International Conference of Epworth Leagues will be held at Seattle, July 7-11, of next year.

Your Board names Rev. T. B. Clifford as correspondent for the League Column of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and urges that the Leagues of the Conference communicate to Brother Clifford such items of League news as should find place in this column.

At the solicitation of the Editor of the League Column of the Advocate, we undertake to prepare the League Prayer-Meeting Topic for the second Sunday in each month, and the matter of such preparation is committed to Dr. H. W. Featherstun.

The League Conference for the coming year will be held at Montrose, June 17-20. Once more the Board urges the pastors to bear these dates in mind and make their plans to attend and to secure representative attendance from their Leagues, or, in case they have no Leagues, from their pastoral charges.

We commend the Seashore Epworth League Assembly for training in Christian service.

It is the sense of your Board that all our educational institutions should encourage the organization of Leagues among their student bodies. (Signed)

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: The Sunday School Board begs leave to report as follows:

The Sunday School work of our Conference is in a healthy condition. During the past year, we, in conjunction with the North Mississippi Conference, held in the city of Durant a Sunday School Superintendent's Institute. We had with us as speakers Brother Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn.; Brother Green, of Opelika, Ala.; Brother French; Dr. and Mrs. Hamil, of Nashville, Tenn., and local talent. More than one hundred leading Sunday School workers were in attendance. Dr. Hamil pronounced it the finest of the kind he had ever attended. By request of those in attendance, a similar Institute will be held during the present year within the bounds of our Conference. A Teachers' Institute was held in Port Gibson in October, which has quickened the Sabbath School spirit of the western section of the Conference. We have planned six such gatherings during the year 1909.

The Board is urging a more systematic work in the Sabbath School; the organization of Adult Bible Classes; Teacher's Training Courses, and other effective agencies in Sabbath School work.

We take great pleasure in expressing our appreciation of the Sunday School literature now issuing from our Publishing House, and deprecate the fact that any School should get its consent to turn to any other source for Sunday School supplies. As rapidly as the Sunday School Editor can lay his hands on available talent, he is filling in the niches.

We have greatly appreciated the presence of Brother French with his magnificent exhibit of supplies, and feel sure that we express the sentiment of the Conference when we thank him for what he is doing. Would urge upon our brethren a consideration of the advisability of holding all the Sunday School missionary money either as a surplus or, what is better, give it special direction and join the living link.

Respectfully submitted,

B. F. LEWIS, Chairman.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

We your Bible Society Board, beg leave to report as follows:

The American Bible Society cause appeals to us with the same emphasis as the cause of missions, for it sends out the Word of God in many languages to the mission fields. It stands on the same footing with the missionary cause since the question is asked at every Quarterly Conference, "What is being done for the American Bible Society?" as well as "What is being done for the cause of missions?"

Your Board is glad to report that due attention is being given this cause in the bounds of our Conference; though there is not as much reported this year as last.

The assessment for the Conference was $1,800, and the amount collected $1,377. This leaves a deficit of $429.

We recommend the assessment for 1909 of $1,800, apportioned to the Districts as follows:

Brookhaven District	$225
Hattiesburg District	225
Jackson District	225
Newton District	225
Natchez District	210
Meridian District	225
Seashore District	250
Vicksburg District	225

ORPHAN'S HOME.

To the Mississipi Annual Conference—

Dear Brethren: Your Board of Trustees of Mississippi Orphan's Home beg leave to submit this, their annual report:

The affairs of the Home for the current year have moved along with delightful smoothness, so far as this Board is advised. The management has been most satisfactory to the Board and we are impressed with the [illegible] that no mistake was made when Brother Williams was selected for the difficult and delicate task of caring for this great benevolence. Nor do we believe that he made any mistake in accepting the great trust. We are well assured that the work suits him and as well that he suits the work. The task involved in the tending and proper care as well as the rearing and training of so many young lives, involving issues for time and eternity, entitles those to whom it is committed to the prayers, sympathy and patience of every lover of his race. Brother Williams and his noble, efficient helpers merit and should receive the loving sympathy and general concern of every Methodist in Mississippi charged as they are with the care of those children of the Church who have been in God's providence committed to our keeping.

From statistics furnished by Brother W. M. Williams, the Manager, we report as follows:

Number of children in the Home Dec. 1, 1907	99
Number received since Dec. 1, 1907	65
Number of former inmates returned to Home	2
Total in Home and received	166
Number taken out by relatives	27
Adopted by others	2
Total number	29
Number now under care of Home	137
Money received by Manager since Dec. 1, 1907	$15,007.21
Money disbursed by Manager	13,133.25
Balance in treasury Nov. 16, 1908	1,873.96

The Manager's historical comment for the year is submitted by us in his own language, the eloquence of which consists in the significance of the interesting facts related:

"None have died during the year. We have had remarkably good health. We have five girls and two boys at college. Whitworth college and Port Gibson Female College kindly offered to take our girls at fifty dollars per session for board, tuition, etc., the girls working in the dining room, etc. Montrose Training School takes one of our girls free of tuition, and Sister Abney gives her board free. The other girls are provided for by friends. One boy at Millsaps, without charges; one at Oxford Training School, has money to pay his own way. We have a good school, with three good teachers, the Primary Teacher giving music lessons to eighteen children. We have Sunday School, Epworth League and preaching every Sunday. Twenty of the children have joined the Church this year. About half are members of the Church. We have made many improvements this year; we have had the front yard leveled and graded, which adds very much to the appearance of the place. We have put down a good plank walk from the Home to Millsaps College, which enables us to get to the car line when it rains, and is very helpful when it is dry. We have bought more cows, two horses, a new two-horse wagon, farm implements and other machinery. We sold the electrical engine and dynamo for $200. Have collected $100 and $100 is still due. Our improvements amount to about $1000. We began this year somewhat in debt. Our expenses including the improvements exceeded our monthly income. Our Work-Day receipts brought us out of debt and gave us a nice balance. I hope you will recommend this to be observed next year. I am more convinced than ever that the regular monthly contribution system in the two Conferences would give us all the funds we need for our running expenses. I hope you will urge this in your report. The good women all over the State have been very liberal and wise in their donations of clothing and sewing. I believe the children are better provided for than ever before, and I think they are better satisfied and more ambitious. We need a new cow barn, a concrete walk to the street and in front of building. We need additional room, we are full now. We need dormitory for large girls; we need a school separate from the main building. We have seven matrons and an assistant manager."

The Board heartily concurs in the views of the Manager as to the great value of the stated monthly contribution system adopted by many churches in the two Conferences. On his authority is stated that those churches using the regular monthly plan were those from whom the most liberal sums came on the "Work-Day" and "Thanksgiving occasions."

The terms of office of Brothers R. L. Bennett and H. M. Ellis expire with the session of the Mississippi Conference, and we recommend the election of their successors.

We believe the adoption of the "Work-Day" plan used this year for the first time is valuable.

We recommend the adoption of plans for the enlargement of facilities by the erection of a new dormitory and school building as soon as a way can be devised for financing the work.

We request the Bishop presiding at the session of the Mississippi Conference to appoint Brother W. M. Williams as Manager for the Mississippi Orphans' Home for the next Conference year.

Respectfully submitted,

Resolved, That a committee of three preachers, two laymen and the president and first vice-president of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference be appointed to consider the advisability of establishing a Rescue Home somewhere within our Conference bounds; and, if in their godly judgment such course be thought advisable, they be authorized to select a suitable location and proceed with the building and operation of the institution; and that they be requested to make a full report of their action to the next session of our Annual Conference.

THE NEW YEAR

Before this paper reaches our readers the New Year 1909 will have dawned. Its coming should awaken in us serious reflections. The blessings of the past have been many and richly enjoyed, but not always with gratitude to God who gave them. Opportunities have been many, both for self-improvement and the betterment of the condition of our fellow-men, but they have too often gone by unimproved. We should be thankful that life has been graciously spared, that blessings still abound, and that all opportunities have not gone forever. We cannot recall the past, nor make full amendment for past ingratitude and negligence, but we may come to God in penitence and promise him better service in the future.

God is good; he will forgive our shortcomings and misdoings, and give us grace to keep our promises and to help us in our weakness. At the beginning of the year is a suitable time for straightening up our accounts and starting afresh—knowing exactly how we stand. Good business men do this, and prepare themselves for any emergency that may arise. Why should not Christians examine themselves and prove themselves before God? A double blessing will come to the man who does: he will receive a consciousness of divine favor, and effectually prove the promise of the Father who says: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

To the thousands of our friends who love and receive this ADVOCATE we send greetings, wishing for them not only a happy New Year, but praying for them the blessings of peace and providence and grace. May it be the happiest and best year they ever experienced! Amen!

THE CHURCH AS A CENTER.

We sometimes [illegible]

Then it is hard for us to understand why some members never fail to attend service upon some occasions, but wholly neglect to give [illegible] for the benefit of their presence, when [illegible] necessity why some who neglect the Sunday-school, the prayer-meeting, and other means for spiritual advancement, are among the most active and useful in efforts to promote the temporal interests of the church. We do not say that such members do not grow in grace, but we think we express the truth when we say if they do grow, it is not a commensurate growth resulting in a well developed Christian character.

The church should be the center, therefore, the great center of attraction. It should draw together every man, woman and child, making each a source of strength and inspiration. And this, together with [illegible] the religious life it would be, through the part of all there, was faithful attendance upon the means of grace.

First of all, as some one has said, the church should be the center as a place of worship. Of course, people can worship anywhere, but Christians should understand that worship is not alone for private satisfaction. In gaining God's people must come together as a congregation of worshipers. There is no other way to impress the world. The man who worships only in private will either cease to worship at all, else he will become a recluse and lose all interest in his fellow-men. The time was when the man who kept most out of sight of the world was regarded as the sainted man, but that day has gone forever.

The church should be the center of all organized Christian activities. No one but [illegible] thinks [illegible] church is a successful church, [illegible] it is not absolutely necessary to the success of the church to organize "clubs" or "societies" with officers and committees, each charged with a separate duty. As prosperous days as Methodism ever saw was when the church, without societies of any kind, sent out each member as a personal worker, and the influence of each worker was felt. But population has increased, times and methods have changed, and all things considered it is best now, and possibly the only way to do the needed work is through organized societies. At any rate, our livest and most flourishing churches are those that have the best organized and most active societies.

The church to-day without a good well-conducted Sunday-school amounts to nothing. The church whose women are not banded together to work as an Aid Society, or a Home Mission Society, or a Foreign Mission Society is behind the times, and looked upon as lagging in the Lord's vineyard. And the Epworth League, as the youngest child of the church, is utilizing the life and talent of our young people, and bids fair to aid in the development of both the spiritual and temporal interests of the kingdom. The [illegible]

In this connection we might [illegible] the church should be the center of social [illegible] the members. [illegible] we would not [illegible] sound and unobjectionable [illegible] in saying that a Christian's [illegible] pleasure should be found among the members of his own church. And this we think is also [illegible] the case in those churches in which the members are strongly attached [illegible]

It is true that the social standing of [illegible]

[illegible] We say this [illegible] that the members of [illegible] church are under obligation to make [illegible] each other.

If all our churches were centers of worship and all forms of Christian activity and social life, they would indeed be a happy and a potent [illegible] agency for the spread of Scriptural holiness over the land.

INTERCOLLEGIATE GAMES.

At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference a resolution was passed reaffirming the position taken years ago in regard to our church schools engaging in athletic games with other schools. The Conference was emphatic in its position. We learn from the secular papers that the students of Millsaps College held an indignation meeting, and petitioned the college authorities to ignore the action of the Conference. We are sorry the boys took such action, and we hope they will reconsider. Of course, the faculty and trustees will not ignore the voice of the Conferences—the North Mississippi as well as the Mississippi. Both Conferences are a unit on the question. Nothing has been said in the North Mississippi for several years on the subject. Its position is well defined and understood, and is recorded on the journals unrepealed.

PERSONAL.

Rev. E. K. Means preached at Louisiana Avenue Church in this city last Sunday morning. He was en route to his new appointment at Monroe.

Rev. Geo. P. Fikes, appointed as supply on Walnut Grove Circuit, Mississippi Conference, hopes to do an acceptable year's work for the Master.

Those who desire to reach Rev. W. G. Harlan are requested to address him at Haynesville, La., from which point mail will be forwarded when necessary.

Rev. M. A. Burns, writing from Okolona, Miss., says: "Have moved into our new home and started off well for the new year" in his charge, the Okolona circuit.

Rev. W. D. McCullough has had a spell of the "grippe" since Conference, but is rapidly recovering, and will be upon his new work at Leland at once.

Rev. J. A. Bowen does not forget the ADVOCATE, nor his many friends in Mississippi. He is happy in his charge, Holmes Street, Huntsville, Ala., and is looking for a year of prosperity.

Rev. G. T. Sledge, pastor at Beulah, Colo., who has been visiting in Mississippi, is now in southwest Louisiana, where he will spend a few weeks with relatives. We acknowledge a pleasant call at this office.

Rev. J. M. Alford has met his first appointment at Bogalusa and is well-pleased. He was "cordially greeted and the people seem delighted to have a resident pastor. This is a promising field and if properly managed will, in a short time, be one of the strong churches in Louisiana Methodism."

The new pastor at First Church, Baton Rouge, Rev. J. M. Henry, has been enthusiastically received. He passed through this city en route to a meeting of the Secretaries of the Conference Mission Boards, to be held in Nashville the 30th and 31st insts.

Rev. W. A. Bowlin preached his first sermon in his new charge, Smithville Circuit, the first Sunday after Conference. He is well pleased with the outlook, and expects a good year. His work embraces a beautiful section of country; is rich, and well watered, and is rapidly developing.

We are requested to announce through the ADVOCATE that Rev. G. D. Purcell goes to Boyce, and that Rev. J. W. Elliot remains at Selma, both Louisiana towns; also that Rev. W. R. Whatley will supply the Chicot Circuit. These changes have been made since Conference with consent of Bishop Ward.

Rev. H. M. Ellis had a "royal reception" at Brookhaven. Now for a royal wife! Were we disposed to envy any preacher, 'tis the one who has the opportunity to preach to a multitude of young people—girls or boys. Great is Brother Ellis' opportunity and responsibility before the girls of Whitworth College.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, while arranging to open institutional work in Royal Street, this city, left on Monday last for Nashville. It is understood that Brother Joyner will visit not only Nashville, but other cities, with a view to acquainting himself with the most approved methods of conducting such "Forward Movements."

Rev. R. W. Tucker has entered hopefully upon the work as presiding elder of the Ruston District, and purposes, if possible, to give God and the Church the best year's work of his life. Brother Tucker has just closed a full term on the Baton Rouge District. He greatly endeared himself to the preachers and people of the District.

Mr. T. V. Ellzey, Secretary of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, is very busy completing the plans for a house-to-house visitation of the city of New Orleans. This is a large undertaking, but such a religious census of the city will be very helpful to all the denominations taking part in it. Jan. 21, 1909, has been set as the date for the canvass.

Rev. J. H. Holder, returned to Booneville Station, was cordially received by the church, and he is greeted by large congregations at each service. Everything has started off well.

Rev. R. T. Nolen, appointed to Pinola Circuit, is well pleased with his new charge. He has already sent us some new subscriptions to the ADVOCATE, and hopes to send in many more.

Rev. W. W. Drake, after four years of service as pastor at Crowley, has left the church with the good wishes of all the people. He was highly esteemed, both for the "work's sake" and his own sake. He gave of his best to the Church, and to him was largely due the defeat of the liquor forces, which put Acadia Parish in the dry column. Brother Drake will do good work at Lake Charles.

Dr. F. R. Hill entered upon his work at First Church last Sunday. He made a profound impression on his hearers, taking for his subject, "The Drawing Power of the Son of Man." Dr. Hill was pastor of this church many years ago. Very few who were blessed under his ministry then heard him at the beginning of his present term. We thank the Doctor for a friendly visit on Monday morning. He is comfortably located in the parsonage at 5830 Prytania street.

Rev. J. W. Rogers, writing from Water Valley, Miss., says: "We enter upon the new Conference year at Main Street with renewed zeal and determination to do good things for our Master. The people received us kindly, the good women having prepared a warm supper for us, giving us a cordial welcome. After inspecting the pantry we thought, 'It is good to be here;' also, 'We do not expect to overlook the interests of the ADVOCATE during this year.'"

We are assured by a private letter from Bay St. Louis, Miss., that the Seacoast Echo speaks the sentiments of the Church and community when it says of Rev. B. F. Lewis: "A gentleman, scholar and friend, by his activity in all things pertaining to church, home, school and as a public citizen generally, has closely identified himself in such a commendable manner as to make his presence in the future in our midst well-nigh indispensable. He has the best wishes of this community for the future. His short stay here has been prolific of much good."

CHANGES IN LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

My Dear Dr. Boswell: Please announce the following changes in the appointments of the Louisiana Conference: Rev. L. A. Humphreys goes to Lake Providence; the Rev. J. M. Brown to Waterproof, and the Rev. W. Wooton to Arcadia. Yours cordially, SETH WARD.

THE NEW CHURCH AT AMITE CITY, LA.

Work is progressing satisfactorily on our new church at Amite City (a picture of which given on our first page is made from the architect's drawing), and the indications are that the building will be completed in every particular and ready for use on or before the 1st of March. The cost of the new building will approximate $6,000, exclusive of furnishings, and we expect to owe less than $2,000 at the time of completion. New pews and other necessary furniture will have to be provided somehow, as everything in the old building was completely wrecked or badly damaged in the cyclone of April 24, 1908.

The Board of Church Extension has given us generous assistance in our time of need, and the substantial help of friends, churches, Epworth Leagues and Sunday Schools enables us to repair most of the damage done to the parsonage. We are truly grateful for the assistance rendered, and prospects for the success and usefulness of our church at this place were never brighter than they are to-day.

In 1906 Amite City raised for all purposes $1,225.07; in 1907, $2,574.90; in 1908, in spite of the cyclone and heavy losses by our people, the church raised for all purposes $3,137.70. Thus it is seen that our people are growing in the grace of liberality, and they are also growing in spirituality.

The new Conference year has opened up well, and the outlook is encouraging. Fraternally, study of all matters referred to them respectfully submit that their report. In addition to the formal report of the General Board we were favored with the presence of Dr. J. D. Hammond, General Secretary of Education, who outlined fully the plans and purposes of that Board.

The work of Educational Extension which has become so important a feature of our Church is worthy of our heartiest support. Despite the financial depression which has fallen so heavily upon our Southland, the increase in valuation of plants, buildings and equipments for the year is most gratifying. There has also been an increase of nearly 60,000 volumes in the various libraries and an addition of $155,247 to the endowments of our institutions.

In this connection it is becoming that we express our appreciation of the presence and utterances of Rev. John W. Gilbert, Secretary of Education of the C. M. E. Church, and Agent of the M. E. Church, South, under the auspices of our General Board.

The proceedings of the fourteenth session of the Board of education held in the month of May in the city of Atlanta is recommended as both a source of information and inspiration to our pastors.

Rev. James E. McCulloch, Superintendent of the Methodist Training School for Christian Workers, represented the work being done by that department. That much of that character of training is greatly needed is apparent to all, and we most cheerfully recommend this school to those preparing as laborers for the vineyard.

Neither the Vanderbilt University nor the Correspondence School were represented to your Board; however, we would pledge our hearty support to both and our fullest endorsement of the work of the Correspondence Department. The proposition which was made to your body by the citizens of Lockhart, looking to the establishing of a High School at that point has received our careful consideration, and while as friends of higher education, we appreciate the tender made to our Church, we do not think it wise or prudent to accept.

CONFERENCE SCHOOLS.

The reports which have come to your Board from the five institutions under your supervision, are encouraging in the highest degree, and indicate by every token the wisdom of their maintenance.

PORT GIBSON.

That oldest of the groups which seemed for a season to languish and aroused apprehensions in the minds of her friends as to her future usefulness, has under the wise management of Rev. H. G. Hawkins, taken on a new life and spirit, which betokens great good for the young women of the section from which she draws. We recommend the appointment of Rev. H. G. Hawkins as president of the College. We recommend for your confirmation as Trustees of the College, John L. Gaddis, J. B. Allen, H. H. Crisler, L. A. Smith, H. C. Mounger and F. A. McLain.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

After hearing reports from representatives of the Institution, in addition to the report of the Board of Trustees, your Board is of opinion that no more necessary or worthy claim has come for your recognition. From every consideration this Institution appeals to us for support and patronage. Strictly a high school, it does not in any wise conflict with those doing college work. We recommend the appointment of Rev. W. A. Betts as president. We recommend for your confirmation as Trustees, James M. Weems, T. J. O'Neil, W. W. Moore, P. L. Blackwell, C. T. Neill, T. J. Sartor, Dr. W. C. Lamb, A. M. Broadfoot, J. W. Abney, James Hand, J. J. Golden, J. T. Gamage and the pastors of Newton and the First Church at Laurel. We recommend the appointment of W. W. Moore as Financial Agent.

EDWARD McGEHEE COLLEGE.

The Trustees of this Institution have had before us a very gratifying report, and from which we gather that this school is well worthy of our endorsement, and the patronage of our people. Its president, Miss Swanson, is a woman of exceptional merit and has with her excellent faculty won the esteem of all who are acquainted with their work. We recommend the following for confirmation as Trustees, D. C. Bramlette, H. B. McGehee, J. H. Jones, J. H. Sessions, T. O. Woods, L. T. Ventress, J. K. Sessions, W. C. Perkins, W. P. S. Ventress, W. W. Dickson, W. A. Dickson, L. W. Magruder, Robt. Lewis and C. G. McGehee.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

No report has come before your Board from this Institution. From a small folder which has come into our hands, and statements made by the president, we are warranted in concluding that the best of work is being done, and that the Institution is on the high-tide of prosperity. Under the skilled hand of Dr. I. W. Cooper who has associated with him a faculty of eighteen trained teachers and workers, we may well feel a pride in this great school for young women. Two hundred and twenty-three students have been enrolled to date. Property and improvements amounting to two thousand dollars have been added during the year. We recommend the appointment of Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D., as president. We recommend for confirmation as Trustees, A. B. Conally, Dr. J. T. B. Berry and F. B. Catchings.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Too much cannot be said in appreciation of the work being done by this highly-favored Institution, which has within its brief history of sixteen years taken rank among the very oldest and best of our colleges. The splendid record made, the strong faculty sustained and the excellent class of work done is strikingly attested by the high standing and character of her numerous alumni. With unalloyed pleasure we call attention to the exemplary conduct and splendid moral and religious spirit of the student-body. Through the generosity of Maj. R. W. Millsaps, and the untiring efforts of your Commissioner, Rev. T. W. Lewis, one hundred and forty-seven thousand two hundred dollars, have been added to the endowment during the year. Of the $51,000 subscribed, $37,000 remains unpaid. We would respectfully urge the early payment of these obligations and also commend Millsaps College as worthy of any gifts and bequests, which our people may be disposed to contribute. During the present session two hundred and seventy-two students have matriculated: twenty-four of whom are preparing for the ministry, and thirty-four, the sons of our preachers. We recommend the election of the following as Trustees: J. L. Dantzler, W. B. Lewis, A. F. Watkins, and I. C. Enochs.

Your Board notes with pleasure the liberality of the Conference in its response to the appeals of Rev. J. W. Gilbert of $218 for Paine Institute, and to Rev. S. J. Tubby of $185.50 for the erection of a school building for the Choctaws.

In view of the great movement looking to the endowment of a chair in Vanderbilt University for the education of preachers and Sunday School workers, your Board has appointed a committee composed of R. Selby, H. W. VanHook, R. W. Millsaps, J. A. McLeod and T. B. Holloman to co-operate with the Sunday School Board in securing greater prominence in the observance of Children's Day, and increasing the collections therefrom. We recommend the appointment of R. Selby as Conference Secretary of Education.

BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: We, your Board of Church Extension, beg leave to report as follows:

We have had placed in our hands a communication from Dr. W. F. McMurray, General Secretary, which shows that much progress has been made in this work during the past year. The total receipts from all sources were $12,798.40, in excess of any previous year. The Loan Fund capital has been increased by $32,015.44 for the year. This amount does not include Loan Fund Day Collections. During the past year the Conference Boards have paid 371 grants aggregating $52,322.69 and the General Board 187 grants, amounting to $58,923.52 in donation and $61,531.50 in loans.

The Washington City Enterprise is making progress slowly, but surely, and we commend the work to the members of our Conference.

Again we would call the attention of our people to the Saving Department of this great work, and would recommend that any congregation which has building funds on hand and are not yet ready to build, confer with Dr. W. F. McMurray concerning the investment of its funds until it is ready to build.

Inasmuch as all churches of any worth to-day are being built with special reference to the Sunday School work, we would urge upon our pastors and Sunday School superintendents the importance of giving the children a chance to make their Birthday Offerings to this fund. Dr. McMurray will furnish you with collection jars for same without cost.

We have had before us fifteen applications, all in due form, and two other churches represented by the pastors, whose applications have been lost.

The Treasurer's Report for the year 1908 makes the following showing:

Balance in treasury from last year	$ 15 35
To cash from collections on assessments 1908	3819 19
Total	$3834 54
Disbursements as follows—
By Cash to Dr. W. F. McMurray, Gen. Sec.	$1909 [illegible]
By Cash to Expense Account Executive Com	19 [illegible]
By Cash to Printing Minutes	47 50
By Cash Donated to Churches	1840 00
Balance in Treasury	17 81
Total	$3834 54

This report shows an increase of only $38.69 over last year's contribution, and which is only seventy-four per cent. of the Assessment for 1908.

After careful consideration of the needs of each claim before us, your Board has made the following Grants:

La Branch St., McComb	$ 140 00
Bassfield	200 00
Bethel	50 00
Handsboro	50 00
Richton	175 00

The Home Circle.

A FUNNY PRESENT.

One Christmas Grandma Melville sent something from the farm to be hung on the Christmas tree for Ava.

It was alive, so it couldn't really be hung, you know. It was snow-white, but it wasn't a rabbit with his winter coat on. It had feathers and a pair of [illegible]ght eyes, but it wasn't one of Grandma Melv[illegible] doves, not a bit of it.

Papa made a little cage for it by nailing slats across a box, and then he put it behind the Christmas tree.

They unloaded the Christmas tree in the afternoon, because there were lots of little cousins who must get home before dark; but, when the blinds were shut tight and the lamps lighted, it was a good deal like night-time.

All of a sudden, breaking right through the talk and laughter, came a sharp little "Cut-cut-cut-cut-da-cut! Cut-cut-ker-da-cut-da-cut-da-cut!"

"What is it? Oh, what is it?" cried Ave.

"What do you guess?" asked papa, laughing.

"It sounds like a hen-biddy," said Ava, "but maybe it's a turkle."

Then everybody laughed, and papa pulled the little ca[illegible]e out from behind the tree.

"It is a hen-biddy!" cried Ava.

Sure enough. There was a snow-white little hen. And as true as you live, the snow-white little hen had laid a snow-white little egg.

"Oh! oh!" cried Ava. "Hers gave me a present all herself; and her name's Snowball."

And almost every day all winter Snowball gave Ava an egg for her breakfast next morning.—Youth's Companion.

SALLY SWEET-SHOE.

"How did we celebrate holidays in Stroudwater when I was a boy?" repeated Greatuncle Ned. "Oh, we met at somebody's house and had a candy scrape. Don't bother me—I'm reading the paper."

"Molasses candy?" asked Ruth.

"Yes. Don't I tell you, I'm reading the paper?"

"How many of you were there, altogether?"

"Twenty. Keep still, now. I don't want to tell stories, I'm reading the paper."

"You must have had a big kettle."

"Uncle Ned, you must have ha[illegible] kettle!"

Still no answer.

"Uncle Ned, what a big kettle"—

"Yes, and I wish you were in it!" growled Uncle Ned. "Yes, we did have a big kettle. Each of us furnished a quart of molasses. At first we used to carry out separate pailfuls, but some brought good and some poor molasses, so that the candy was apt to be poor, too; and after a while we decided to have each one contribute a share of money and buy it—good New Orleans molasses, not such stuff as you get in these times. Now let me alone; I want to read the paper!"

"Who made the candy?"

"Well, some of the older girls. Your Aunt Minty Jane was pretty good at it, and Deborah Dusenberry was a master hand. Then, while they watched it boil, the rest of us played games—puss-in-the-corner, I spy, ring-round-the-rosy, and the like. And when it was done we all helped pull—and eat.

"Well, there, I suppose I've got to tell it, if I ever want a chance to read the paper in peace. But, remember, I'll tell you only just this one!

"Our folks were willing that we should stay till 10 o'clock; but there was one girl, the one everybody liked best—Sally Crumpacker, her name was—who always had to go home at just such a time—8 o'clock sharp. She lived with her grandparents, who were very strict with her. We used to go early and make the candy right away, so that she needn't miss the fun.

"But one night—at Seth Comstock's—the molasses was slow about coming to a boil, and it was five minutes of 8 before it was ready to take off. Debby Dusenberry poured some into a pan and set it out on the steps to cool, so that Sally should get a taste of taffy, anyway; and we all promised to save some of the pulled candy for her. I was going home with her, and we put on our things and watched the clock, and at 8 Debby went out and tried the taffy, but thought it was not cold enough.

"Sally knew that, if she didn't start exactly on time, her grandfather wouldn't let her come again. She had to go. She said good-by and we started.

"I saw the pan of candy, and gave a flying leap, but Sally wasn't thinking, and stepped right into it.

"'O Ned,' cried she, in a horrified tone, 'I've stepped in the candy, and it was just hard enough to stick, and I've walked it right out of the pan!'

"I sat down in a snowbank and laughed.

"'O Ned,' said Sally, 'do get it off—and we'll eat it as we go along!'

"So I pulled it off, as well as I could. Then I doused the sticky sheet into the snow, and broke off a big piece for her—and we ate taffy all the way home."

"O Uncle Ned!" cried Ruth, wishing she had some that minute.

"Well," went on Great-uncle Ned, "when I got back to Seth Comstock's I found them all agog over the lost taffy. They never mistrusted where it went to, and they were making all sorts of guesses—the cat, Watch, the dog, some boy, the fox that had been around—and Si Dusenberry insisted that it must have been a panther!

"I didn't let on a word, but Sally told them next day. Debby called her 'Sally Sweet-shoe,' and the name—like the candy—stuck. And that is why your Great-aunt Sally has always been called 'Sally Sweet-shoe' by the old neighbors, even to this day."

"How funny!" laughed Ruth. "I like that story about Aunt Sally."—Elizabeth Hill, in "Little Folks."

By Donation to Bond	100 00
By Donation to Mendenhall	300 00
By Loan to South Side, Meridian	1500 00

We believe that Church Extension is as truly missionary work as any phase of our Church enterprises, and we insist that all of our preachers give this assessment fair treatment when settlement-day comes, for with an adequate Church building the mission appropriation may soon be withheld. We also request that our presiding elders give the Church Extension cause a place on the programme at the Missionary Institutes and District Conferences.

This Board has selected W. M. Williams as a committee of one, to represent the Church Eextension claim either in person or by a substitute at each of the District Conferences for the year 1909.

Rev. W. M. Williams and Rev. L. E. Alford have been selected as representatives, to attend the meeting of the representatives of the several Conference Boards to be held next Spring in connection with the meeting of the General Board of Church Extension.

The report of the Woman's Home Mission Society shows that it is in a prosperous condition. They now have 104 Auxiliaries, with 1617 members. During the last fiscal year it has raised for connectional work, $2,007.06, and for local work, $6,967.25.

JOINT BOARD OF FINANCE.

Dear Brethren: We, your Joint Board of Finance, beg leave to report as follows: We have had before us a communication from the Board of Trustees of the Endowment Fund for Superannuates, from which we learn the growth of this sacred fund this year has been encouraging. The fund is now productive, having grown beyond the $100,000,000 mark. We have continued the quarterly payment plan, and all allowances have been paid in full.

Our Treasurer's report shows receipts as follows:

From assessments for Conference Claim'ts	$9,117.00
From Calvin bequest	24.00
From general Endowment Fund	122.00
Grand total
Disbursements—	$9,263.00
To Conference Claimants
To printing minutes	$9,101.75
To incidental expenses	47.50
	113.75
Total	$9,263:00

We have collected this year for Bishops' Fund, $1,871.38.

We have collected for expenses of delegates to General Conference, $140.05.

We recommend the continuance of the quarterly payment plan, and urge a vigorous collection of the assessment for Conference Claimants early in the year, and that prompt remittance be made to the Treasurer of this Board.

It is with sorrow that we record the retirement of Rev. John W. Chambers from our Board, after sixteen years of untiring and efficient labor as its chairman. The vacancy caused by the resignation of Brother Chambers was filled by the election of Rev. T. J. O'Neil as Chairman of the Board.

We offer the following resolution for adoption by the Conference:

"Resolved, That hereafter it shall be the Standing Order of the Conference that the Presiding Elders be required to collect the Bishops' Fund."

Respectfully submitted,

T. J. O'NEIL, Chairman.

Sister AMANDA A. WHITE was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., Dec. 10, 1837. She was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life and remained a faithful member until her death. In 1866 she was married to F. H. White. This union was blessed with nine children, four of these children preceding her to the better world. Five children, with her husband, are left to mourn their loss. Sister White was a devout Christian, a good neighbor, a loving and devoted wife and mother; and when the change came, Nov. 6, she was ready, and quietly fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. The husband and children are sad. May the God of all grace comfort them with the hope of a reunion in heaven.

HER PASTOR.

Mrs. M. LOUISA DE LOACH (nee McGraw) was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., July 19, 1853, and died at New Orleans, Dec. 4, 1908, where she was taken for medical treatment, but to no avail; for God, in his wisdom, saw fit to take her where pain and suffering are not known. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1892, and lived a pure, Christian life until her death. She was a gentle, loving wife and mother. It was ever her first thought and greatest pleasure to help the poor and suffering. She leaves a husband, three children and five grandchildren to mourn their loss. Our home has been made sad, but let us not think of "Mamma Lou" as being forever gone, nor grieve as those who have no hope; for she has only gone before, to be with her baby boy, and await our coming to reunite our happy home.

A SUCCESSFUL RING.

One-half a century engaged in manufacturing bells that are ringing to the satisfaction of thousands of pleased customers is the successful record of the celebrated Steel Alloy Church and School Bell manufacturers. The C. S. Bell Co., Hillsboro, Ohio.

This is a record of which they are justly proud. The vast number of Steel Alloy Bells they are distributing from year to year throughout this country and foreign lands, making satisfied purchasers, attests to the popularity of their bells. Churches and schools now needing a bell would do well to write them. They will send you, for the asking, a beautiful catalogue of their Steel Alloy Bells, together with their unique plan of helping a church or school secure a bell.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, in the economy of our Church, the itinerancy of the ministry has ever been recognized as the basis of our boast, "that we have no church without a pastor, no pastor without a church," we, as Methodists, loyal to our vows, must accept without murmur those decrees which determine our annual relation of pastor and people, therefore we should be ready, as a congregation, to receive gladly our coming pastor, however great be the regret we feel at the departure of the one whose ministry has been ours in the year or years departed.

Whereas, by appointment of the Bishop, who presided at our last Annual Conference, our beloved pastor, Dr. Thomas B. Holloman, whom we have loved to address as "Brother Holloman," goes from us to another charge; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, as a congregation, we appreciate most highly the two years of faithful service rendered by him as our pastor, believing as we do that it has been his endeavor to honor his Lord by a most exemplary walk and conversation among us; that his earnest ministrations have been without ostentation or self-seeking, as effective as they have been simple and sincere.

Resolved, That we thus assure Brother Holloman that he is held in high and loving esteem, not only for his work's sake, but for that gentle and genuine spirit which makes him a friend to the lowly, a comforter to the sorrowing and suffering, and always and everywhere a lover of children, who have and always will requite that love by holding him in remembrance as the preacher who never forgot that he was once a boy.

Resolved, That Brother Holloman be assured that in leaving us for another field of labor he can feel certain that those who have been the most regular attendants upon his preaching are those who are the most certain that he is not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord; rejoices in hope, is patient in tribulation, instant in prayer, distributes to the necessity of saints, and is given to that hospitality which makes him of easy approach to those seeking human comfort and human sympathy.

Resolved, That we will not only hold Brother and Sister Holloman in loving remembrance, but shall follow them to their new work with our prayers.

Resolved, That these resolutions be given to our local newspaper, The Daily News, and forwarded to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that a copy be presented to Brother Holloman, attested by the president and the secretary of our board of stewards.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

There is an eye that never sleeps
Beneath the wing of night;
There is an ear that never shuts,
When sink the beams of light.

There is an arm that never tires,
When human strength gives way;
There is a love that never fails,
When earthly loves decay.

That eye is fixed on seraph throngs;
That arm uplifts the sky;
That ear is fixed on angel songs;
That love is throned on high.

But there's a power which man can wield,
When mortal aid is vain;
That eye, that arm, that love to reach,
That listening ear to gain.

That power is prayer, which soars on high,
Through Jesus, to the throne;
And moves the hand that moves the world,
To bring salvation down.

CLEVELAND'S CONSERVATISM IN ACADEMIC MATTERS.

"Mr. Cleveland's conservatism in academic matters was far from being reactionary," writes Andrew F. West, dean of the Graduate School, Princeton, in the January Century, in his sympathetic appreciation of the late ex-president, entitled "Grover Cleveland: A Princeton Memory." "Provided the old principles were kept, he was ready, more than ready, for new methods and improvements. The betterment of existing conditions, the doing well outside what was professed inside, provision for valuable and attractive instruction, the conveying surely, generously and hospitably to every student the full benefit of his college course, the relief of the struggling, the encouragemnt of the timid, stimulation to self-help, putting professors on decent living salaries, the housing and food and health of the students, the honor-system in examinations, the strictest care in spending revenues, the utmost aversion to any expansion involving the risk of speculative venture, the folly of intellectual vanity, the magic of the personal influence in teaching, and which marked his attitude from the start." Another beautiful side of Mr. Cleveland's character was his simple faith. "He pondered much, though he said very little, regarding his religious belief. Yet it was always there, deep within him, as they know well who knew him best. It was simple, elemental, childlike. He had chosen to believe in God, and so he had chosen to believe also in Christ. The mystery remained a mystery, not a thing for analysis and debate; and he received it as he received the springtime and the sunlight or the intimacies of friendship and home."

A Minister's Indigestion.

There is nothing that is so much sought after as a remedy for stomach trouble, and hence you will be interested to know how the Rev. A. J. Fletcher of Rutherford, Tenn., whose picture we present herewith, cured his indigestion. To use his own words, he says, in part:

Rev. A. J. Fletcher

"I received the sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin that I asked you to send me, and I made no mistake in ordering it. I have been troubled with dyspepsia and indigestion more or less for about sixty years, and have taken many remedies, but Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has done me more good than anything else. I am 79."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been sold in drug stores for 20 years. The price is only 50 cents or $1 a bottle. It is especially adapted to the uses of babies, children, women and old folks. Its purity is vouched to the Government, and results from its use are guaranteed. If you have never tried it send name and address for a free trial bottle, which will be cheerfully sent to your home prepaid. If there is any medical advice that you want, or anything about your condition that you don't understand, write the doctor. Address your letter, Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 668 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

FROM ARCADIA, LA.

It is with joy and gladness, by the church and people as a whole of the town of Arcadia, to learn that Rev. W. Wooton and his estimable wife have been sent back to us for the coming year. Both of them have ingratiated themselves into the hearts of this community, and have been of invaluable aid in the upbuilding of the church, which he has so faithfully served the past year.

Brother Wooton has the confidence of his people in the Methodist Church, as well as in all of the other churches. He has done the work that God has him here to do, and done it well. And we feel, after praying so earnestly for his return, that by being sent back that our prayers have been answered, and we are offering up thanks to our heavenly Father, and that this church and people may be strengthened more the coming year. By his spiritual sermons and untiring efforts as a pastor there has been added about seventy members to his church, and that many more to the other denominations, and some of the new additions are at his command and are ever ready to help him in this good work. We have now established a men's prayer-meeting that is doing great good, men and boys leading in these meetings that rarely ever darkened the door of a church previous to about four months ago. The writer has been living here for the past twenty-odd years, and never saw such interest manifested before in this old town. Our Sunday school has taken on new life. He has good congregations at day and night services, something that no other pastor could boast of the past ten years or more.

Our weekly prayer-meetings are regular love-feasts. Surely God has been with us this year, and has had a hand in this work. And, by his help, Brother Wooton and his people are going to take on new zeal and try and make this church and people something beyond the expectations. Yours truly, T. H. BOOTH.

ARKABUTLA, MISS.—A POUNDING.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Wednesday evening, after Conference adjourned, found us on our way to our new charge. After a drive of twenty-eight miles through the country we reached Arkabutla Thursday, about 2 p.m. We were partly straightened up by Saturday, and on Sunday morning and night I had the pleasure of preaching to large and appreciative audiences. We had a good day Sunday, preaching three times, and meeting the people.

Then last Monday night, after supper, while we were discussing our work, we heard a crowd of people coming. They took us by surprise, and the young preacher and his wife had their first pounding. After spending an hour or two with us the crowd dispersed, and we went to see what they had left. We found a barrel of flour, potatoes, both sweet and Irish, peas, sugar, salt, eggs, canned fruits, mixed pickles, preserves, jam, a sack of turnips, walnuts, soda, soap, matches, butter, molasses, five quails, venison and rice. The preacher and his wife are happy, and determined to serve the people as best we can in return for their kindness. May God's richest blessings rest upon the members of both churches, who took part in the pounding, also upon any who are not Christians, is the prayer of the pastor.

Resolved, That we do hereby most heartily thank our beloved Bishop Morrison, not only for his highly-appreciated sermon of spiritual and mental food, and his efficient presidency over our Conference session, but also for his bold, strong, and pertinent declarations against the false teachings and evil practices that are adverse to the interests of God.

Signed by:

W. A. Terry, H. E. Carley, John W. Crisler, W. B. Jones.

Whereas, Rev. L. A. Dorsey, of Ocean Springs, has been prevented from attending Conference by the critical illness of his wife, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Mississippi Conference, join with him in fervent prayer for her speedy recovery, and that we hereby express to him our heartfelt sympathy in his sore distress.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Brother Dorsey by the Secretary of our Conference.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.
M. M. BLACK.
M. L. BURTON.

Whereas, We recognize the fact that this free government bestows upon every man the right to consider all matters in the exercise of his franchise; and

Whereas, the glory of our nation rests upon its Christian civilization which we as Christian men, should regard as our most sacred treasures, and, whereas President Theodore Roosevelt, in a recently-published letter, uses some gratuitous and unwarranted strictures, against those citizens who dared to enquire into the religious faith of one of the candidates for the presidency of the United States; therefore, be it resolved

First—That we, the members of the Mississippi Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby declare our most sincere disapproval of these utterances of the president insofar as they apply to the prerogative of a citizen in refusing to vote for a candidate on the ground of his being unorthodox.

Second—That we claim the right to demand of those who would be leaders in the offices of our great nation an unqualified belief in the doctrines of our Holy Christianity.

Signed by:

B. F. Jones, Chas. W. Crisler, B. F. Lewis, Robt. Selby.

Whereas the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is by its splendid connectionalism one great Church, the same in doctrine and polity everywhere, and membership in any in any of its local organizations is membership in the great whole; and

Whereas the proper growth and development of the spiritual life of the member is dependent on a live connection with, and active service in the enterprises of the Church; and

Whereas the conservation of the Church's membership and resources is only to be maintained, and the desired development of her new churches only to be attained by the proper transfer of the membership of any and all of our moving people; and

Whereas no amount of money appropriated by a Board of Missions can compensate for losses resulting from the opposition to a weak and struggling Church on the part of a strong Church, able to give a so-called social prestige, or from the neglect of our own members living within the rightful jurisdiction of the new Church; and

Whereas ample provision has been made in our law for the prompt and proper transfer from one local society to another of the membership of our moving people, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge all our members to put aside all worldly and selfish considerations and place their membership with the Christly motive only of affording the greatest service to God and his Church. Therefore, be it further

Resolved, That we call upon all our pastors to use all proper means to effect such placing of the membership of our people as shall best conserve the interest of our great Church and the spiritual welfare of the member concerned, and that we declare any effort on the part of any of our pastors to have any member of our Church hold his membership where he does not live—in the old Church from which he has moved, or in the stronger and more influential Church in some other part of his own city—to be selfish and antagonistic to the interests of our Church and the spiritual welfare of the individual member involved, and deserving condemnation and censure.

Signed by:

On New Year's Day the American troops will commence to evacuate Cuba. The last of the army of pacification will finally leave for the homeland in April. Now that the army is finally leaving, the Cubans seem to hold only the kindest of feelings. There is no doubt that a goodly number will be pleased when the last American soldier leaves the island.

Just think of these four letters, next time you are ill.

They represent good advice to sick women.

Ladies, by thousands, have written to tell others to "Take Wine of Cardui."

They have tried it, and know what it will do for the ills and weaknesses peculiar to their sex.

Cardui, you must know, contains no injurious ingredient, but it is a pure, vegetable, non-intoxicating extract of medicinal herbs, which acts gently, specifically and curatively on the womanly organs.

"I was a total wreck," writes Mrs. Eveline McGrew, of 2161 Guadalupe Street, Austin, Tex., "and I wish I could tell all afflicted females what Cardui has done for me and for my daughters. It is certainly the best and most wonderful tonic to build up shattered nerves and for all other female troubles. If all women and girls would use Cardui they would not need doctors. It saved my life at the menopause and I recommend Cardui to all."

Cardui is an old and well tried remedy for female troubles. Your druggist sells it, with full directions for use on the wrapper. Try Cardui.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

LESSON FOR JAN. 1, 1905

The Ascension of our Lord

Acts 1:1-14

Golden Text: "It came to pass while he blessed them, he was parted from them and carried up into heaven." Luke 24:51.

We have our Lord's ascension [illegible] spoken of in the Scriptures as the body of our Lord [illegible] the head and all the church [illegible] members. Now we are beginning a study of the earliest history of the Church in the new dispensation, the time when it was proclaimed that the Gospel of free grace first began to be preached to a Jewish and a Gentile world. Our Old Testament studies were in fact the learning of how God trained first the church in the wilderness and of how from that foundation, with the teachings of the prophets, we followed the gradual development of God's plan of redemption until the beginning of God's will as then proclaimed from the manger of Bethlehem.

Now, there was a man named Luke, not a Jew, but a Gentile converted to the faith that was even in its beginning attracting the attention of thinking and intelligent men as well as the common people. Luke was, by profession, a physician and a writer. He had a friend named Theophilus who must have been an earnest searcher of the truth, because Luke had written two long letters to him, the second of which is the "Acts of the Apostles." Luke tells about the first letter as he begins to write the second, saying that the subject of his writing was "of all that Jesus began to do and teach." Then the first letter is the Gospel according to Luke, in which he tells of what Jesus began to do. The second letter—The Acts—tells of what Jesus began to teach and of how the disciples taught to men together with the words of faith and love.

At first it looks strange that at the time of first preaching the Head of the Church should be taken away, but that was all foretold by the Lord that night when they were all gathered in the upper room to eat the passover, when he said: "It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come." The disciples had had forty days in which to ponder this saying of the Lord Jesus and the spirituality of it was impressed on their minds by the appearance unto them, from time to time, of our Lord in his glorified body, yet they could not understand "all that had been told" through the Holy Ghost," because it was at a time when he was no more mortal, that mortal had been changed to immortality, and the Holy Ghost was the means of enlightenment to them, as he is to-day, to all who wait to be shown "the things of Christ." The forty days from the resurrection were finished, the last day was at hand, and Jesus led his wondering followers out, as the shepherd goes before, leading his sheep, as far as Bethany, of the descent of Mount Olivet. It must have been that the tender memories of Lazarus' home drew him to a spot near there, because there was the place [illegible]

[illegible] Father in heaven. [illegible]

[illegible] the promise of the Father. [illegible]

TOPIC FOR JANUARY 3, 1909.

PREPARATION FOR THE DAY.

Mark 1: 35; Acts 10: 9.

Each day brings its tasks. With [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] unless one was ever ready for ll that came, and yet he has plainly marked for us the path of prayer. With the Master it was not simply the preparation for each day's task, but for every important event in his life. Prayer with him was consultation with the Father as to the Father's will. After all, is not this the true conception of prayer? We are talking with our Father in heaven about the things he wants us to do, and the things we want him to do for us, and for others. The soul needs to draw itself away from the cares and anxieties of life and become conscious of the unseen. With this view of prayer, it is easy to see why we can best pray before the soul is weighted with the day's cares.

2. Peter in prayer.

When Peter went up on the housetop to pray he had little idea of the shock to his prejudices that was coming. He was to be lifted out of some of the conceptions of a lifetime. He simply made ready for the things which lay before him. We none of us know what the day may bring forth. We are all like Peter—[illegible] will [illegible] perish before we will depart from our conventional paths. It took prayer on the part of Cornelius and prayer on the part of Peter to bring the man with the gospel and the man needing the gospel together. The church was made ready for the day's tasks, and the wonderful [illegible] the Christ found its way from one [illegible] another.

3. The morning watch.

To-day a great number are keeping the morning watch. They need a few [illegible] a few minutes with the King, and go out with his Spirit upon them at the beginning of the day. If the morning lesson is wisely chosen, and the communion with the Lord be real, the whole day will be shaped by it. In this the beginning of the year you can form no habit that will mean more to you through the year than the habit of beginning each day in communion with your Lord.

A USEFUL LOCAL PREACHER.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Since the death of Rev. W. W. Edge, a useful local preacher, who lived and died in the bounds of the Corinth District, I have thought that more should have been said of this worthy servant of God, who gave so many years of faithful service to the Church. Brother Edge was one of the truest and best men it has been my pleasure to know [illegible] Methodist [illegible] years as a supply. His work was a success, and the people loved him wherever he went.

The writer had been closely associated with him in his work most all the time, and found that he was always praised by the people whom he served. I looked upon him as my spiritual father. He was my pastor for some years. While I was then fighting the call to the ministry, he would place his hand upon my head, with these words: "John, do your duty." I worked with him after I became a preacher. I loved him very dearly, and while assisting Brother E. C. Sullivan at his funeral I left that I had lost one of my dearest friends. I shall not any more meet him here, but I shall meet him up yonder. He led many sous to Christ, and many will rise and call him "blessed" in the great beyond.

Very suddenly he was called. While on his way to an appointment he laid down his hand-grip, Bible and his work, and went home to heaven. Surely, he was prepared; surely, he was saved. May the mantle, so worthily worn by him, fall upon one of his sons. May the blessings of heaven be upon his loved ones.
